At the weekend a gang of men organized a hunt, and several of them saw the animals. Cooper Dulmage got several shots at one and Norman Russell, Point Petre had three geese killed and partly eaten.

For some time it was believed dogs were responsible but this has now been disproved, and

Hospital Willed $80,000 by Late Dr. G. W. Morden

Picton, May 9—Prince Edward County Hospital here will benefit to the extent of about $80,000 under the will of the late Dr. G. W. Morden who died last month. The estate is valued at $100,000, according to the executors who include Kenneth G. Morden, solicitor, Toronto. The residue of the estate is to be paid to the trustees of the hospital after several pecuniary legacies of small amounts have been paid.

Former resident of Napanee, and native of Picton district, Dr. Morden was a noted industrial chemist and spent the greater part of his life in the teaching profession. He was a former principal of Picton and Napanee Collegiates.

It is possible that this bequest, added to other bequests which specified they must be used for building purposes, may lead to the erection of a much-needed new hospital here to serve the county.

REDUCING RANKS

Niagara Falls, May 9 — (CP) — The new hydro-electric project here is reducing ranks of unemployed in the Niagara Falls area. Total unemployed now is less than 500 compared with more than 1,000 a year ago. At present the project needs skilled labor such as carpenters, bulldozer operators and linemen.

In Vicinity Some Time

According to some residents of the area, the animals have been in the vicinity for some time. Township Councillor Lowell Point Petre had three geese killed and partly eaten.

For some time it was believed dogs were responsible but this has now been disproved, and township officials are determined to get the wolves before further damage is done.

Since there are no wolves in Prince Edward County, it is presumed the animals came from Hastings County some 25 miles distant.

A few years ago a pair of wolves was shot in the same township and since then there has been no trouble from that source.

"We'll get them, get them before they breed," Reeve Clinton Green, who led the hunt, said. "It is cheaper to pay a special bounty than to keep on paying for damages done."

The county also offers a $25 reward for each wolf shot.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

LOOKS GOOD!

When the Belleville entry in the Central Ontario Baseball League steps on the Exhibition Grounds diamond on Saturday May 26th to play their first home fixture, they'll be smartly-attired, as baseball players go.

They'll be wearing neat, natty white uniforms with red stripes, red stockings, red-visored white striped caps, and a colorful Indian head on their breast. The initial of the team and the number will be on the backs of the uniforms.

And in case you're wondering, they'll be known as the Belleville Rodmen, in keeping with the senior hockey club.

* * *

That was decided among other things at a meeting of the Belleville Baseball Association held the other evening.

* * *

At the moment the Rodmen appear to have in the makings, the nucleus of a good baseball team. Jack Dean, colored catching star from Philadelphia, who played part of last season with the Picton team has signed on for the district. Pat Wynn, another performer of the St. Mikes Monarchs, new batting in Alexander Cup playoffs with the Valleyfield Braves, and an outstanding playing coach, has practically closed a deal with the BBA. Negotiations are under way for an outstanding pitcher and infielder.

* * *

With this foursome providing the anchor, the Rodmen with a lot of local diamond ability available should field a good team in the junior loop. They are holding practices nightly at the Fair Grounds starting at 6:30 and upon arrival of the outside players, will get down to real work . They open the season at Belmen against the Shoemen on May 24th.

* * *

HELP THE KIDS!

Minor baseball and softball is gradually getting under way with both the Belleville Baseball Association and Commercial Softball League taking teams under their respective wings. The operations of the Softball League appears in a story elsewhere. The Baseball Association is taking care of business, outfitting players, given them all kid but at the moment is badly in need of sponsors for the bantams and peewees. Anyone, individual or organization who would like to help these baseball hungry moppets should get in touch with Frank Grandies at Northern Electric, Vic Pickmell at Bakelite or Bill Lockyer at the Childrens Aid Society.

* * *

Cliff Howie, Dick Fitzpatrick, Art. Charlton and Red Boyle are doing a swell job with the baseball kids as is Don Hill. But three or four adult managers are needed. The kids will play at Queen Victoria School grounds, the Alemite Field on Saturdays and at the Fair Grounds on Saturday mornings. Anyone who refuse to help with the umpiring duties will also get a sincere welcome from the minor officials.

* * *

MAYBE THE TROUT WERE FUSSY!

It could be the kind of life they live; the choice of bait; the weather, or the way the fish feel about the matter at the time. But facts prove that while three anglers can get themselves a mess load of trout from a lake, it does not follow that the boys who attempt to emulate their feat, do so with any degree of success.

* * *

Take the case of the three local Waltons who fished Diamond Lake nine miles northwest of Bancroft last week and came out with 13 beauties ranging up to three pounds. Three local hungry parties from the city, who chartered the wheelbarrow of the lake at the time (we are publishing its name in answer to several inquiries) took time out last week-end to do a spot of angling there with visions of golden brown trout dancing on their skillets. They came back 0. That last was nothing to write home about, nor did they have many trophies of the hunt to show for their weekend trip. The trout are there all right, but were in a sulking mood.

However, to compensate for the not-so-good luck with rod and reel they enjoyed some excellent hospitality at the . Mac Barge Inn, a splendid resort operated by a Mrs. A. J. McGuire, Bancroft, P. O. The good lady's fine cuisine, hospitable cabins and attractive resort more than made up for any piscatorial disappointment.

And being more mainy of the species, after hearing reports that fishing in general was not good over the weekend, they shrugged their shoulders, munched juicy steaks, and forgot for the time being, the future of the elusive speckles.

* * *

BATTLE OF GIANTS

A battle of wrestling giants has been signed for the feature mat event in the Memorial Arena on Friday night, when Wladyslaw Talun, the 305-pound Polish giant, will oppose Yukon Eric, the 274-pound Alaska lumberjack with the 56-inch chest. Both men have outstanding specialty winning holds. Talun's is the Polish pile-driver, which paralyzes the solar plexis. Yukon Eric's is the Kodiak Krunch, a spine-shattering back-breaker hold.

* * *

In the semi-final, Earl McCready, the scientific Regina ace, will return to local action against Lee Henning, the bruising Iowan. The first bout will see Tony Lanza, of Montreal, oppose Nats Brown who, when he was a boxer, went 10 rounds with Joe Louis.

* * *

SO HE DID!

In the recent Oklahoma U. - Oklahoma Aggies ball game, Joe Burk, the Aggie slugger, hit two homers and a double his first three times up . . . On his fourth appearance, Joe drew two walks, then one that was close . . . Umpire Hugh Willingham sang out "ball three" and the Oklahoma pitcher beefed mildly . . . The next one also was close but the ump ruled it ball four . . . "You sure put him on base that time," the Sooner backstop complained . . . "They were close," Willingham admitted. "But you gotta give me credit for one thing — I held him to one base."

Wallop Winnipeg Monarchs 9-5 In Rugged Clash to Take Series in Four Straight Games

By AL VICKERY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Winnipeg, May 9—(CP)—Happy Emms' hard-skating Flyers last night gave the central Ontario town of Barrie its first dominion junior hockey championship.

The Boston Bruin-sponsored club walloped a game Winnipeg Monarchs aggregation 9-5 to take their best-of-seven Memorial Cup final in four straight games.

The one-sided series victory made up in the measure for Barrie's great straight losses to Fort Arthur Bruins in the 1948 dominion junior final—the only other time they have been in the Memorial Cup classic.

Last night's triumph gave Flyers their third four-goal margin of their series. They won the first game by 8-1 scores at Winnipeg and edged Monarchs 4-3 in the third contest at Brandon.

Captain Real Chevrefils of Barrie received the cup from Jimmy Dunn of Winnipeg, vice-president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, in a centre-ice ceremony after the final game.

Featured Over Boards

Monarchs were quick to state owners and congratulate their opponents, as were many of the 5,000 fans who swarmed over the boards at the final whistle.

Again it was Barrie's first-string line which sounded Monarchs' downfall. Chevrefils scored four points on a goal and three assists. Leo Labine had two goals and an assist, and centre Jackie White scored once and set up two counters. Over the series, the trio collected 25 scoring points.

Little Ron Parks paced the Monarchs with two goals and one assist, while the other markers went to Laurie Mitchell, Elliott Chorley and Jim Zarie.

After being down 5-0 in the third period and 7-2 in the second Monarchs again showed their best form in the third period, outscoring the new champions 2-2.

25 Penalties

Twenty-eight penalties were handed out in the rugged contest, with Barrie drawing 16. Labine and Regals' Johnny Novak drew majors for fighting and Wood received a 5-minute misconduct for shooting the puck away from the referee after a whistle. The remainder were minors.

Toppazzini, Wood and Chevrefils gave Barrie a 3-0 lead in the opening session.

The Flyers plunked home goals by Labine, Toppazzini and Stanich in the second period before Monarchs replied with counters by Laurie Mitchell and Chorley. While relied on Bruce Gamble 7-3 at the end of the second as his shot sent the puck hopping along the ice and over goalkeeper Don Collins' stick.

Towers sandwiched a goal for Barrie between Parks's two markers in the third period, then Labine made it 8-4 at 19:45. Zarie wound up the scoring about one minute later as Monarchs threw everything they had into a last-ditch stand. But time ran out.

Poor Crowd Sees St. Mike's Win Over Valleyfield

Toronto, May 9—(CP)—Twenty-eight players, who aren't too concerned today with their Alexander Cup finals, are miffed with the hockey fans.

The fans weren't hopped up over last night's game. Only 1,262 of the die-hards were on hand as Monarchs took a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven series by dumping Braves 6-1. One game was tied.

Fifth game of the series is in Montreal Forum tomorrow night. The sixth will be played here, Friday, and any other games necessary.

Flying-coach Johnny O'Flaherty of Monarchs said he summed up the feelings of his players in these words:

"How the heck can we compete against baseball and other sports at a time like this. But we should get more than 1,262 fans. A team can really move with a full house of fans."

Maple Leaf Gardens holds 14,000, and then some.

O'Flaherty said he asked that the remaining games be played in the Forum, but there's a circus coming to town after Thursday's game.

Whether the fans were with them or not, Monarchs had little trouble as they moves from a 1-1 tie in the first period to add three goals in the second and two in the third.

George (Dusty) Blair fired two goals for Toronto. Ken Watson, Ed Mulligan, Frank Sullivan and Johnny Ubrisek got singles. Georges Bougie tallied the only Valleyfield goal.

Referees Stan Pratt and Hap Shouldice, both of Ottawa, had an easy time. They handed out only seven penalties, four of them going to Monarchs.

Pirate Manipulations Make Fans Wonder but Rickey Has Team Battling for Top Slot

By JOE REICHLER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Branch Rickey's manipulations with the Pittsburgh Pirates closely resemble those of the proverbial fiddler, who, when asked to play "Dixie" was handed an 8 day game 31 day month.

Pittsburgh fans were prepared for some changes when Rickey left Brooklyn to take over the Pirate reins. But not in his wildest dreams did they dream that Ralph Kiner, the National League's home-run-hitting outfielder, would be at first base this year.

That Pete Reiser, who has done some fielding and outfielding for his batting, would be classed as a catcher, or

Just when the bewildered faithful got used to these shifts and switches Rickey sends them reeling with a new series of moves.

But there is method to Rickey's madness.

The opposition is more concerned than the players and fans are.

Last night the Bucs clubbed the Phillies for the Philadelphia nights 9-3. It took the Phils eight innings to get going. Robin Roberts probably took them as long to get used to the infield line-up.

Kiner Hits Fourth Homer

Except for an error by Wally Westlake, the entire line-up did right well. Kiner swatted his fourth circuit clout of the season. Phils chipped in with three errors and managed only four hits as Max Surkont was knocked down in his third loss.

The Braves moved into first place with a 2-1 triumph over Cincinnati at Boston. A homer by Sid Gordon off the loser, Ken Raffensberger, a pitching duel between winner Max Surkont and Herman Wehmeier.

The Giants ceded the cellar to Cincinnati by defeating St. Louis Cardinals 6-3 at night in New York. Larry Jansen pitched four-hitter. Monte Irvin collected three hits and drove in two runs.

Eight cards were on hand for the game by the 'tu.

Hank Sauer's home run with a mate aboard in the first inning gave Chicago Cubs a 2-1 triumph over the Dodgers. Bob Schultz, rookie southpaw, spaced nine hits for his third victory. The Cubs got only four off loser Carl Erskine.

Fluke Single Wins Game

A fluke single by Vic Wertz in the 11th inning drove in Jerry Priddy with the run that gave the Tigers a 6-5 victory over the New York Yankees at Detroit. With two out and two on, Wertz tried to duck a pitch thrown by Allie Reynolds. The ball hit the bat and bounced to the left field fair, the game-winning hit.

Bobby Shantz was rapped for 12 hits but got solid hitting support from his Philadelphia mates to pitch the Athletics to a 9-4 win over the White Sox in Chicago. Homers by Eddie Joost and Ferris Fain supported the Athletics' 13-hit attack against loser Dick Littlefield and three successors.

Preacher Roe Little Miffed About Talk

Brooklyn, May 9 — (AP) — Preacher Roe is a little miffed about this Brooklyn Dodgers "talk. He's 4-0 for the year but all he hears is "home-run ball."

"Makes me think I'm lucky to be here," he said. "As long as I'm winning I won't worry about the homers. Let them talk all they want."

They got to beat me with a bat if they do. I walked two against St. Louis the other night and they both scored. That hurt me more than the home runs."

The Giants' best home-run-ball champ of the league in 1950 with 34 off his southpaw slants. The Brooklyn veteran gave up No. 7 this year to Sid Gordon of the Milwaukee Braves. He had 24 with two out and two strikes on Phillies' Bubba Church, too.

"All you got to do is slip six inches with your control," he said. "You can't hurt anybody.

"The way I figure every pitch in the strike zone is a potential home run. You got seven men out there behind you. And they're going to get some. Sooner or later it will fall in. The fellows we got out there (in the infield) cost go 'em."

Roe changed his style in recent years. The slender lefty used to try to overpower the hitters. He made the change at Pittsburgh with Rickey's help.

"Rickey figures changes me again," he said. "As long as I win. Home-run-ball record? It looks like I'm going to beat it this year.

Quebec Will Be Scene of Tennis Championships

(By The Canadian Press)

The Canadian professional tennis championships will be held in Quebec for the third straight year June 5 to 11, it was announced Wednesday night.

Frank Kovacs, Oakland, Calif., professional, will defend his singles title. Mitchell Gornto, White Plains, N.Y., winner two years ago, will also compete, tournament officials said.

Only Canadian professional who has announced his intention of entering the tournament is Doug Grant, Montreal, who recently entered the money-ranks.

Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler Thursday denied a plea by four Michigan members of the Cobb & Ceramics for $50,000 of the money paid to Detroit Tigers for radio broadcasting rights.

The four clubs—Flint, Muskegon, Grand Rapids and Saginaw —had asked for a share of the broadcasting money, claiming Chandler's Tiger games in Detroit territory violated baseball law and hurt their own attendance.

Russia came back strong in the second game of the series against Canada, 53 to 37 in the European basketball tourney at Paris Thursday. The Czechs were leading at halftime, 26 to 25.

Shortly after play was resumed, Russia scored a basket and went on to win easily. Ivor Kovalik led the Russian scoring with 17 points.

West Germany and East Germany will meet September 3 if they want to take part in the 1952 Olympic games, the International Olympic Committee decided Thursday.

But the Germans were told, they will be kicked out again unless East Germans are admitted to the committee and East German athletes are allowed to compete on an equal basis with West Germans for places on a German Olympic team.

The two German groups were ordered to appear before an Olympic committee in Lausanne, Switzerland, May 20 and 21.

Outfielder Whitey Lockman of New York Giants was fined $25 and manager Leo Durocher $50 by President Ford C. Frick of the National League Tuesday for the use of "foul and abusive language" after Lockman was called out on a close ball trick in Sunday's game with Cincinnati.

The play, engineered by second baseman Connie Ryal of the Reds, occurred in the 10th and final inning. Durocher was banished from the field during the argument which followed.

Lew Burston of the International Boxing Club said Tuesday night that Sugar Ray Robinson will defend his world middleweight title against Laurent Dauthuille of Montreal in Paris this summer.

Burston said Jim Norris, president of the I.B.C., who holds the rights for the title fight, had permitted the match. It is to be organized by French promoter Gilbert Benaim. Benaim had proposed a June 15 date.

Quebec returned to major lacrosse competition after several years absence Tuesday night with the announcement that the Quebec City club will compete this summer in the Eastern Lacrosse Association.

Other teams in the league scheduled to start play in June are Montreal, Cornwall and Brockville.

Syracuse Chiefs Still Setting Pace in League

(By The Associated Press)

Last year Hartley won 12 and lost 13 and served up 18 home runs. This year he has yielded only two home runs while compiling a 4-1 record for the pace-setting Chiefs.

Hartley turned in his fourth victory last night as the Chiefs turned back Baltimore Orioles 5 -1. Hartley limited the Orioles to six hits in beating Karl Drews.

Hartley's victory enabled the Chiefs to maintain their slight edge over Montreal Royals. Bud Podbielan pitched the Royals to an 11-6 victory over Buffalo Bisons. George Shuba paced the Montreal attack, driving in five runs on a homer and three - run double. Walt Post, down from Columbus, Ohio farm, hit double with a homer and two singles.

Rochester Red Wings trounced Springfield Cubs 14-1. The Wings scored six runs in each of the first two innings to take Jack Harbolz to breeze to his third victory without a relief job. Harbolz limited Rochester's 17-hit attack with two doubles and a pair of singles.

Ottawa and Toronto were idle.

Deciding Game Between Finalists Is a Toss-Up

Owen Sound, May 9 — (CP) — Seventh and deciding game of the Allan Cup hockey finals slated for Owen Sound Arena tonight between the Owen Sound Mercurys and the Fort Frances Canadians.

That was the consensus among hockey fans here today following Owen Sound's 7-4 victory Monday night to send the Canadian senior final to the limit.

Both teams have had to come from behind in the series and neither club has taken a lead lasting in any game. Each club has scored 25 goals.

Regardless of the outcome tonight, players and fans alike agree on one point. It's too late to play hockey.

Gates so far have indicated that hockey enthusiasm is on the wane. The series opener drew a sellout crowd, but Monday night's sixth game was played before 1,000 fans in an arena with a capacity of 2,300.

Al Sabath's great colt Alsab, purchased for $700 as a yearling, set a record of one minute 37 seconds to win the Preakness stakes over the 1 3-16 mile route at Pimlico nine years ago today. A crowd of 35,000 cheered the three-year-old's win which clipped 1 1-5 seconds off the previous mark. Alsab's record was beaten when Capot won the race in 1.56 two years ago.

Veterans Open Soccer Season With 5-2 Win

The Bay of Quinte Soccer League opened its activities last night at the Belleville fair grounds. Northern Electric took an 8-0 decision over the Belleville Vets and lost by a score of five goals to two. Mayor Potter was on hand to kick off. Northern Electric won the toss and elected to kick with the wind and the sun in their favor. Gemmel scored the first goal for the Vets on an infringement by one of the Northern defenders. A few minutes later Hay added a second counter but the lead was soon reduced on a goal by Cully of the Northerns. Shortly before the change over, Hay scored his second goal of the match to make the score at half-time three to two in favor of the Vets.

Two minutes after change of ends, Leach tallied for the Northerns tally up to two on a good drive from well out. Gemmel scored two more for the Vets to bring his bag for the match to three. Northern Electric pressed strongly toward the end of the game but could not penetrate the strong defence of the Vets.

Northern Electric: Garrow, Leach, Hatfield, Mountain, Leach, J. Hatfield, Williamson, O'Bryan, Cully, Carter, Salter. Substitute: Mr. Collins.

In the O.H.A. Intermediate scheduled for last night, Picton Gunners beat Trenton Merchants 2 to 1 at Bill Memorial Park in Trenton and Batawa defeated 6RD by 4 to 2 score at the RCAF station.

NOTED GOLFER DEAD

North Hollywood, Calif., May 9 — (AP) — Leo Diegel, 61, veteran professional golfer best known for his arms-akimbo putting stance, died at his home Tuesday night after a lingering illness with cancer.

Diegel was Professional Golfers' Association champion in 1928 and 1929 and the defeated finalist in 1926, when the great Walter Hagen took the crown. The popular Diegel was a member of the American Ryder Cup team from 1927 through 1933. He finished second in the British Open in 1930 and third in 1929, and third in the U.S. National Open in 1931.

Fighter Given 60-Day Suspension

Hibbing, Minn., May 9—(AP)—Glen Flanagan of St. Paul last night drew an on-the-spot ring suspension in Minnesota when he socked his opponent's manager after winning a 10-round boxing decision over Pat Jacobucci of Cincinnati.

Flanagan, weighing 158 pounds, had just been announced as a 98-95 point winner over the 157-pound Ohioan when he strode across the ring and without warning struck out at Ed Johnson, the loser's pilot. There was a flurry of punches before officials and spectators parted the pair.

Dr. Cyril Smith, Duluth, member of the state boxing commission, ordered the suspension from his seat at the ringside. Neither fighter was downed nor hurt during the main affray.

After the flare-up, Flanagan told reporters he struck out at Johnson because 'he had been riding me all through the fight."

MOOSE CONVENTION

St. John's, Nfld. — (CP) — The engineer of a freight train saw six moose on the track near Codroy Pond on the west coast while moose were by others of the crew. All the moose were travelling in pairs. None were struck, although the train halted once while the moose ambled off the track.

REDS MOVE IN

London, May 9 — (AP)— Moscow radio announced today that Russian Marshal Ivan S. Konev and Deputy Foreign Minister A. Zorin are in Czechoslovakia. Unconfirmed reports in Prague last January said Konev would take over a high command position in the Czechoslovak defense organization. The official announcement said the two are heading a liberation celebration.

A bridge convention is not a series of vindictive, ill "is a special signal for giving unusual information in a bridge game, it is an unnatural meaning of a bid.

You know there are only these 35 words in the bidding language: One, two, three, four, five, six, seven, clubs, diamonds, hearts, spades, no-trump, pass, double, redouble.

These 35 words have natural meanings. For normal purposes, the natural meanings in them are all you need. They will cover almost any ordinary bidding situation.

However, there are some spots in which normal meanings of bids will not answer the purpose. They may not be able to give the desired dope. This is when a convention signal comes in handy.

The word double is one of the most popular conventions in use. Normally it means it can defeat opponents' contract. It asks partner to bid. As when you have this south hand:

♠ K 7 5
♥ A Q 7 4
♦ 5 4 3 2
♣ Q 8

The bidding has gone like this:

South	West	North	East
1 ♥	Pass	2 ♥	Pass

Your hand could stand another bid of some kind. It would be a shame to give up so soon to an opponent bid of one spade. Despite partner's weakness with four many suits have another bid.

Partner could have four clubs or four diamonds. If you knew which, you could take a shot at a bid in his longest suit. But your guess might be wrong. So you ask him to tell you.

The way you do so is by saying double in this spot. As partner has not yet bid, the double right here is a convention. It is a signal for partner to show his longest suit, if he has one.

Sooner or later you will come in the convention.

Hollywood, May 9.—(AP)—Another famous friendship has broken up—that of Frank Fay and Harvey.

Thus ends an association that ranks among the most noted in the history of the American theatre. Fay and the Pooka (six-foot rabbit) cavorted together more than five years in New York and on the road.

"No, I don't believe I'll ever play thumbsow again," he told me. "I have had two offers to do it again in New York. But I turned them down.

"I think it's a mistake to become too identified with one particular role. It can hurt your career.

"It's not that I'm mad at Harvey. I love the little fellow. But I think it's better that we go our own ways."

Good Role

Fay added that he never tired of playing the role. He offered a hint as to why he was the most successful of the many stars who played it.

"I don't play to the audience, as the other fellows did," he explained. "I played to Harvey. He was a very good friend and he never let me down."

The actor expressed no bitterness about not doing the film version, which won James Stewart an Oscar nomination. "They didn't want me," he said frankly.

But Fay has his consolation: He gets 10 per cent of the author's rights to the film profits.

Back to Movies

Fay is now acting in his first movie in eight years. He has other film deals on the fire. Eventually he plans to revive his review, "If you please," which really had a misadventure in San Francisco.

The show was all Fay's. The program listed "music, lyrics, scenes and dialogue by Frank Fay." He had 27 of his own songs in it, as well as "too many of my friends, I guess." At any rate, the Bay City critics gave the premiere a drubbing.

ALBURY

Albury — The executive and members of the Redeemville W.I. met at the home of Mrs. Hugh Russell on Monday evening to arrange the programs for the coming year.

It was decided to have a cookie sale on the Belleville market soon. The hostess served dainty refreshments.

Sudden Passing

This community was deeply shocked on Friday morning in the sudden passing of Mrs. Effie Allison. Much sympathy is extended to the daughter, Jean and family, and also Mr. and Mrs. Harry Peck and family. The funeral was held at the home on Monday afternoon with interment in Albury cemetery.

Mr. and Mrs. Asbury Adams and Vivian spent the tea hour on Saturday with Mr. and Mrs. Roy Williamson.

Mr. and Mrs. Burton Osterhout spent the weekend in Toronto.

A few ladies from Albury attended the W.A. rally at Consecon on Friday. The Consecon ladies are to be congratulated on the success of the rally.

AWARDS GIVEN

London, May 9 — (AP) — The annual Picturegoer Award — Britain's equivalent of the Hollywood Oscar — went today to Anna Neagle and Alec Guinness for the best screen performances of 1950. Miss Neagle won her award for her work in the film 'Odette,' Guinness for his portrayal of Disraeli in "The Mudlark."

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

For Thursday, May 10

March 21 to April 20—(Aries)—You may think day's conditions seem in consistent, hard to cope with. Maybe it's also your "look a gift horse" attitude. Be open to further knowledge and the right deal will "hit" you soon.

April 21 to May 20—(Taurus)—Some favorable stimulating aspect, some pot so. Choose course carefully, then stick to it to clever Taurus manner. Turn eyes in various directions, may seem difficult but will pay.

May 21 to June 21—(Gemini)—Writers, reporters, actors, salesmen; promoters of large deals or striking business plans: take heed and be encouraged. Be sure you know what you are about, but let nothing stop you from trying.

June 22 to July 22—(Cancer)—Personal affairs, domestic problems can be solved satisfactorily if you are running true to your better self. Sens caution with money important, other things should be easier.

July 24 to August 23—(Leo)—Go along with the successful ones in the know, if you feel sure are on the right course. Don't rely upon speed but rather ability and intelligence in handling your tasks, duties.

August 24 to September 23 — (Virgo)—Where there's a way should be your day's motto, it will mean much, if the suggestion is followed, in rounding out a gainful day. Learn to relax, have some fun.

September 24 to October 23 — (Libra)—Should be fairly active, productive day for your well balanced, keen-of-perception natives. Spin your way around in cheerful, friendly way and things will just sort of come to you.

October 24 to November 22 — (Scorpio)—May have to hold back a few hours till you have formulated solid plans for day's action. Your intuition may play important part in day's program. Watch things carefully.

November 23 to December 23 — (Sagittarius)—May be temptation to exaggerate and to pass on rumor, they can boomerang, cause needless trouble. Forget your wishes awhile and things generally should shape up today.

December 22 to January 21 — (Capricorn)—Personal and business interests will need smarter handling now. Day holds little patience with you who take undue or foolish chances. Be your better self for better results.

January 22 to February 20 — (Aquarius)— Check over money and property matters early. Don't over spend budget or take on extra debts that could as well be avoided. Take things in stride with the tools and help you have at hand.

February 21 to March 20— (Pisces)—Don't let little differences or minor matters disrupt an otherwise happy outlook. Mostly up to you whether you will come through with a day or not. Be adequate, you can.

YOU BORN TODAY are in an artistic and practical Sign, Taurus. Can succeed especially in manufacturing, building, music, business. Also many journalists, public entertainers are under this highly versatile Sign. But don't expect the family to show all the affection; remember we all like to hear compliments as well as corrections. You are a doer in between the times you are a dreamer, and are deep of nature. Mind, the apostle ... don't overdo for

Requests Police Be Allowed To Service Phones

Toronto, [illegible] — (CP) — W. H. Price, Commissioner of the Ontario Provincial Police, Tuesday recorded that police be allowed to solve telephone and telegraph equipment suspected of being used for bookmaking operators of race-news wire services who own them.

Commissioner Stringer told the Ontario Legislature's committee investigating criminal justice administration that the Criminal Code tied police hands in getting convictions against bookmakers and race wire operators.

In 1943, he said, the York County Crown Attorney had advised against prosecuting the operator of a gaming house which contained 26 telephone lines and three switchboards transmitting racing information from the United States.

The Commissioner said the Bell Telephone Company had co-operated by removing equipment from the house, but it was later ordered restored by the Board of Transport Commissioners.

Telephone and telegraph companies were under a moral obligation to assist police against bookmakers, he said, but instead gave "aid and comfort to these people to carry out their illegal practices."

K. C. H. Lester B. B. Jolliffe said it should not be the responsibility of telephone and telegraph companies to determine who should be given service.

Commissioner Stringer said that the race - wire service from Toledo, O., to Windsor, Ont., which was halted in a December police raid, has not resumed operations.

MADOC

Attend Divine Service

Madoc—There was the largest turnouts of Oddfellows and sister Rebekahs attended divine service in Trinity United Church, Madoc, on Sunday morning. The pastor Rev. J. F. Lane conducted the service and gave an inspiring message, not only to the brethren and sister lodges in attendance but to the congregation as well, choosing his text from Gospel "Am I My Brother's Keeper."

Special music was rendered by the choir with Mrs. Reid in charge, an anthem "Come Thou Fount of every Blessing" and a duet by Mrs. Hulin and Mrs. Jack Smith.

Spring blossoms were used as flower decorations and a special bouquet of cut flowers in memory of a deceased Rebekah member, Mrs. Mary Moore.

Visiting members were in attendance from the neighboring lodges.

St. Peter's W.M.S.

Hymn "Lead On O King Eternal" was used to open the May meeting which was held Thursday in the Sunday School rooms of the church. The Bible reading, Psalm 96, was read by Mrs. G. Woods.

The business period showed that 10 visits were made and 16 cards sent out. The lesson on the mission field work in India was

Marketing Bd. Agrees to Sell UK 20 Million Lbs. at 30c

Ontario cheese producers will receive 36 cents per pound for No. 1 cheese sold on the domestic market this year, it was reported today by the Ontario Cheese Producers' Marketing Board following a special meeting in the city yesterday.

A negotiating committee from the Ontario Cheese Producers' Marketing Board met with a Dominion committee representing the cheese trade to discuss the minimum price to be paid for domestic cheese this year.

Under the agreement reached at the meeting producers will receive 36 cents for No. 1 cheese; 35 cents for No. 2 cheese and 34 cents for No. 3 cheese.

The price for ungraded cheese or no grade cheese will be negotiated directly between the cheese factory and the buyer, it was decided.

British Contract

The marketing board also revealed that it had agreed to sell Great Britain at least 20,000,000 pounds of cheddar cheese at 30 cents per lb., fob factory. Added to this would be two cents transportation to the seaboard.

Cheese "associates" officials pointed out this would mean more than 30 cents to most producers as it would not cost two cents per pound transportation to seaboard. The difference will go to the cheese producer.

The 1951 price for export cheese represents a 3 cents-per-cent increase over last year's price which was negotiated through the federal government. The 22 cent price is also four cents over the floor price for cheese recently announced by the government.

Two-Way Protection

Cheese producers are protected themselves both ways in their contract of 20 million pounds of cheese for Britain, in that one contract is based on an Ontario production of 60 million pounds this year.

If the provincial make is below 60 million, the overseas contract can be cut by 10 per cent; if the make is over 60 million, 10 per cent of the additional make can be held in Canada for the domestic trade.

Cheese Producers Association officials said they considered that the price they had received for overseas cheese, and also about the price for domestic cheese, they declined, however, to comment on the possible reaction of producers.

At a cheese factory meeting held earlier this year the matter was talked repeatedly of 35-cent cheese.

More Milk For Cheese

Whether or not the effect of the cheese settlement will be noticeable soon on butter was not known locally.

One local butter manufacturer stated that the cheese price would undoubtedly direct more milk to the cheese factories. The cheese contract and the price for domestic cheese was termed a "kick in the pants" for the butter manufacturers, as competition from margarine would tend to hold down the price of butter.

GIVEN WEEK'S REPRIEVE

Sudbury, May 10 — (CP) Adelard (Eddie) Latour, 50-year-old lumberman sentenced to be hanged May 18 for murder, has been granted a reprieve until May 22.

In the meantime, notice of appeal before the Supreme Court of Canada will be sought on his behalf in Ottawa Friday.

Latour was convicted of murder in the knife slaying in the fall of 1949 of Mrs. Cecile Ralyville, 23-year-old wife of his cousin, in her basement apartment here.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, May 10 (CP) Synoptic: Thursday dawned clear and cold in central and northern Ontario where temperatures fell below freezing during the night. Mostly skier today will help take the chill from the air.

A disturbance over the central states has begun to move eastward and will push south of the Great Lakes Friday. Showers have already been reported at Windsor.

Rumors of Secret Weapon Thought To be Exaggerated

Washington, May 10. (AP)— Rumors of a new secret weapon were heard in the United States Senate today but were widely discounted.

The rumors developed like this:

Two senators said a third senator remarked at an appropriations meeting that defence secretary George Marshall had referred to a new weapon in testimony in the MacArthur hearings.

But the senators also said army officials and representatives who were present denied the existence of such a weapon.

Senator Harry Byrd (Dem. Va.), who has listened to most of the Marshall testimony, told a reporter he had heard no such testimony. Five other senators said the same thing.

Senator Styles Bridges (Rep. N.H.) said he recalled "some reference to some such secret project but Gen. Marshall said it was classified and he can't be off the record."

Top U.S. military officials several times have projected publicity more powerful atomic weapons, including atomic artillery shells and warheads for guided missiles.

Action Dwindles On War Front

Tokyo, May 10 (AP) —Allied armored patrols today stabbed into Munsan, 21 miles northwest of Seoul, after wiping out a red division that flank the South Korean capital.

Tanks and South Korean infantrymen hunted through Munsan without opposition, then withdrew.

Chinese armies are "wilting on the vine" because of lack of supplies, Lt.-Gen. Edward M. Almond, commander of the United States 10th Corps, said.

The reds have withdrawn to keep out of range of artillery, Almond declared. Almond added that they presumably are preparing for another attack.

"They are prepared for them," he said. "We are killing large quantities of the enemy and will kill them in the future."

(Bill Boss, Canadian Press staff writer with the Princess Patricias reported the Canadians passed an uneventful day Thursday).

Advise Furloughs After 18 Months To Prevent GI Mental Breakdowns

Cincinnati, May 10 (AP)— Herbert Ripley after 18 months in a combat zone were suggested today as a possible means of preventing many mental breakdowns among United States fighting men.

Two doctors told the American Psychiatric Association:

1. The fact that a large number of Second World War psychiatric cases, broke down after they had been overseas for a year or more, indicate that . . . the army should consider a plan to return soldiers after some set period of time, such as 18 months.

"Knowing that there is to be an escape from the strain of an unusual setting after a definite period of time may serve as a goal and be a stimulus to enduring the hardship."

Drs. Herbert S. Ripley of the University of Washington and Stewart G. Wolf of Cornell reported an analysis of 100 soldiers suffering from schizophrenia—"split personality."

Some of their findings:

1. Many of the men were probably of a schizophrenic type in whom the illness probably would have been all right if they hadn't entered the army.

2. Some schizophrenics may even make good soldiers because of their unusual talents. The emotional "blunting" experienced may make them stand up under a high degree of combat danger.

3. The factor which seemed most important in the presence of good adjustment to life after discharge was "a warm, tolerant, beneficial relationship on the part of wife or other member of the family."

REGISTRATION OF MANPOWER NOT NEEDED

- - - Claxton

Claims Government Has Enough Information

Ottawa, May 10. (CP)—Defence Minister Claxton indicated yesterday that he feels there is no need for a national registration of the country's manpower at the present time.

Relying in the Commons to opposition demands for an appraisal of the country's manpower resources, Mr. Claxton said appraisals made for a special purpose can soon become out of date.

He added:

"The Dominion Bureau of Statistics and the Department of Labor have many manpower appraisals, and I have been told that from most points of view the information they have is quite adequate for statistical planning with regard to manpower in this country."

"To have the survey for this purpose may be desirable, and it may be done. That matter is being considered by the advisory committee on manpower; and if they report in favor of it, no doubt the government will say that it is done.

"But the information so far put before me from the point or view of planning—and we have been working it out for years ahead—is that the information is available on which to plan the job."

Mr. Claxton spoke during debate on his record $1,600,000,000 defence budget for the fiscal year. He replied to suggestions and accusations thrown at the government.

Noting that Maj.-Gen. G. R. Pearkes, V.C. (Conservative) had charged that Canada's present method of recruiting is "haphazard", Mr. Claxton said:

"It is felt that the present system is working as well as anything we could devise. There is no evidence whatever that we are talking on the same level as those engaged in industry. In point of fact we are not taking on as great a proportion of tradesman as we would like to have.

Thinks Korean War May Defeat Red Imperialism

Tokyo, May 11 (Friday) (AP)— Lt.-Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway said Thursday the United Nations forces in Korea have started on the defeat of communism's efforts at world domination.

The U.N. commander's comment was contained in an answer to Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chief allied field commander, congratulating Ridgway on his nomination for a fifth star.

Ridgway said it is "quite possible" that success on the U.N. fight, "history will record that the crest of the communist wave has been broken against your arms and . . . that the flood of this menace, reaching its high mark on your front, thereafter began its recession."

Canadians Hurling Rifles Like Spears Stopped Latest Chinese Offensive in Tracks

The following account of Canadian action in Korea was delayed by censorship which prevented the release of unit identification during a critical period.

By BILL BOSS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer).

With the Canadians in Korea, May 10 (CP) —Canadians fought until their ammunition was exhausted, then hurled their rifles with bayonets attached like spears into the attacking Chinese when the 2nd Battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, stopped the latest Chinese offensive cold in its tracks in Korea's west central sector.

Brunt of the initial attack was borne by a company under Maj. Vince Lilley of Hamilton when the Chinese advanced wave upon wave to storm the Canadian positions.

The Patricias were guarding the approaches to the vital Chunchon-Seoul highway, in hills three miles by 3 miles north and near the villages of Kail and Chernyong.

They took their positions while Korean troops were streaming back from a front that had sagged 20 miles in the initial 25 hours, a retreat so disorganized that the vanguard of the Chinese force got in among them and into the holding positions established by the 27th British Commonwealth Brigade.

Bogged down ultimately by a stubborn British and Australian stand Apr. 24, the Chinese diverted their weight in the sector to an assault on hills held by the Patricias.

The first slit trench attacked was in the section commanded by Cpl. G. R. Evans. It was on the hump of a hog's back spur. Evans' platoon under Lieut. Harold Ross of St. Catharines, Ont., and jutting out from the main line of Lilley's Ridge. Saw Chinese Coming

(Cpl. Evans, who enlisted in Vancouver, and whose next-of-kin live in Norwich, Norfolk, England, was reported killed in action in a casualty list issued at Ottawa May. 1. Lieut. Ross reparently had recovered from wounds suffered earlier in the campaign. He was listed as wounded in the first Korean casualty list at Ottawa March 31. It listed his next-of-kin as his father, Henry Ross, Winnipeg.)

Sgt. Ken Turner of Caster, Alta., Ross' platoon sergeant:

"Just before dark we saw them coming. They were all in the north. But once night fell we couldn't see them.

"They're good night fighters, and are well on top of you with grenades before you know it's there you know it: quiet as mice.

Says Building of Gas Pipeline Across Canada Would Be Asset Comparable to Railroad

Montreal, May 10 (CP)—Dr. G. S. Hume of the federal department of mines and technical surveys, yesterday told the 40th annual meeting of the Engineering Institute of Canada of proposals to pipe Alberta natural gas to Toronto and Montreal.

Dr. Hume said a group of Texas operators have advised the Alberta government for an export permit to pipe 2,000,000,000 cubic ft. a day from Montreal at a cost estimated at about $250,000,000.

Starting in the Princess area, the line would go northeast to Winnipeg and thence via Fort William, Port Arthur, and Sudbury to Toronto and Montreal, with a branch line to Ottawa. Future branches would tap the Cambrian Shield from Fort William to the vicinity of Sudbury and the Ontario-Quebec border.

This pipeline, as proposed, would be 30 inches in diameter and capable of carrying initially 65,000,000 cubic feet a day, increasing to a maximum capacity of 365,000,000 cubic feet a day, including the proposed extension line, Dr. Hume said that in addition to the gathering lines in Alberta, the main line in Ontario, which would be 30 inches in diameter, would be approximately 1,780 miles, but might be considerably shorter and depending on the route.

The line from Toronto to Montreal would possibly be 24-inch, with lateral lines from Morrisburg to Ottawa, and from Toronto to southwestern Ontario. The main line from the Princess gas would thus not be less than 2,100 miles.

Company officials and engineers have stated such a line can be built at prices competitive with present costs for fuel oil or coal, Dr. Hume said.

Summing up the merits of a pipeline system in Canada, Dr. Hume said: "the building of a pipeline from the end of the Canadian Pacific Railway across the pre-Cambrian area, for example, national considerations in reference to the use of the great natural gas resources which the prairies will ultimately have for disposal may be expected to be the unbreakable bonds to the ultimate decisions that will be made in developing plans for such projects, and the developments that will result from the utilization of the gas will probably far bring great benefits to Canada."

Ontario Loses Third of Female Farm Labor Force

Toronto, May 10—(CP)— The girls just won't stay down on the farm.

Since 1945 Ontario has lost nearly a third of its female farm labor force. The male force dropped only two per cent.

The third annual economic survey filed by the Ontario government shows there are 20 times as many women in industry as on the farm. Men outnumber women 11 to 1.

Officials said Ontario's labor force totals 1,821,000, or 40 per cent of the province's population. That is a rise of 18 per cent over the 1945 level.

To meet future demands, the government says it is increasing the size and skill of the working force through selective immigration, rehabilitation of handicapped persons a gradual reintroduction of women into industrial occupations.

Mother Admits Abandoning Small Child

Seattle, May 10 AP)—A young mother admitted today that she deserted her three-year-old spastic son in a suburban market. And the county prosecutor said she told him:

"I'll go to jail the rest of my life rather than take him back."

"I just can't keep him any longer," Mrs. Williams told police. "It is too much of a problem. He has been the reason for many fights between us. He has caused us to be evicted from several homes." Mrs. Williams said her boy is a spastic—mentally retarded so that muscular co-ordination is affected and does not seem to recognize his parents.

"I love my boy but I cannot care of him," she said. "I have tried repeatedly to get him into several institutions. I was told that it would take at least two years."

PRESIDENT ARIAS AGREES TO USE '46 CONSTITUTION

Three Killed, 110 Injured in Riots

Panama, Panama, May 10 (AP) — President Arnulfo Arias bowed today to police and public pressure and agreed to restore the 1946 constitution which he scrapped last Monday. By the action, he hoped to stay in office himself with police support.

Arias' decision came after a day and a night of rioting. At least three persons were killed and 110 wounded as angry crowds clamored for the president's ouster.

Panama resembled a dead city today in the wake of yesterday's violence. Few persons ventured on the streets and transportation was at a standstill. Business houses and stores were closed.

The National Assembly, suspended by Arias, met in secret last night and accepted a resolution impeaching Arias. It swore in Vice-president Archibales Arosemena as president.

The action apparently was nullified when Arias, using a megaphone, told a crowd of 5,000 persons in Arosemena since it technically was in recess.

"We will wait and see what the people's reaction is," Remon said.

Police Support Arias

Remon's statement indicated that the police — Panama's only military — would support Arias in office.

Mother Strangles Young Son Sleeping in Crib

Detroit, May 10 — (CP) — A mother who allegedly strangled her 4½-month-old son and planned the murder of a second is being held by police for investigation.

Detective Glenn Colley said Mrs. Lucille Jones 28, admitted garroting Kenneth and planning the murder of Ronald Colley 2, also a son. She believed I couldn't take care of them properly."

Prior to opening of the debate, Sir Hartley told parliament that Britain had begun drastic policy and his firing of Gen. Douglas MacArthur from the far eastern command.

Truman said he is well satisfied with Gen. Ridgway's appointment of the administration's position. And he added that Gen. MacArthur spoke at the exact truth, word for word.

Truman's statement to a press conference was in response to requests for comment on the Senate inquiry into his dismissal policy and his firing of Gen. Douglas MacArthur from the far eastern command.

Truman said he is well satisfied with Gen. Ridgway's appointment of the administration's position. And he added that Gen. MacArthur spoke at the exact truth, word for word.

Marshall has been the administration's first witness in reply to MacArthur. He has contended MacArthur was so out of sympathy with administration policy that there was no alternative except to relieve him or his command.

Will Support U.S. Proposal to Limit Trade With China

Churchill Criticizes Govt. On Diplomatic Relations

London, May 10 (CP) — China will get no more rubber from the British colonies this year because she has already had enough to meet her normal civilian requirements, Sir Hartley Shawcross told the House of Commons today.

He made the announcement after Winston Churchill, opening a debate on China trade, had demanded the rubber shipments be suspended.

Sir Hartley, president of the Board of Trade said Chinese imports of rubber the first three months of this year had been so "abnormally high" that her civilian needs for the year could be regarded as "fully satisfied."

The colonies concerned had been instructed that no more rubber was to be shipped this year, he added.

Keep Vigilant Watch

Sir Hartley said Britain would give support to a U.S. proposal now before the United Nations to limit trade with China, but pointed out that this proposal was not intended to impose a complete embargo.

Churchill said Americans had a "valid complaint" about the way China was getting Russian rubber, and urged that shipments be stopped.

He told the House that the Labor Government's policy on rubber and other matters involving Peiping is impairing British-American relations.

"Illogical Position"

Churchill said Britain, which recognized Red China's government in 1949, is "in the illogical position" of having diplomatic relations with a Chinese government formally censured by the United Nations, and which is engaged in attacking United States and United Nations soldiers and also our small contingent in Korea."

Prior to opening of the debate, Sir Hartley told parliament that Britain had begun drastic policy and his firing of Gen. Douglas MacArthur from the far eastern command.

The debate was enlivened by a clash between Churchill and Defence Minister Emanuel Shinwell. Churchill accused Shinwell of being "peculiarly unhappy" to go better in Korea now that Gen. MacArthur has been removed."

Asmara, Eritrea, May 10 (AP) —The dreaded shiftas, bandits of Ethiopia, are a major obstacle on the road to stable government marked out by the United Nations for this former Italian colony.

The U.N. General Assembly decided that Eritrea shall be united to neighboring Ethiopia under a federal government, with its new status by Sept. 15, 1952— the deadline set by U.N. under the present conditions of instability and fear.

This charge followed published reports quoting the U.N. commissioner as saying "it would be politically inexpedient to force Eritreans as long as pro-Ethiopian shiftas were not eliminated.")

The shiftas have scourged the country for the last five years, killing Italians and natives alike, the British administration. Reports of shifta raids against Eritrean and Italian farms, of assassinations, robberies and holdups have become a daily routine.

This has brought Eritrea's economic life to a virtual standstill.

Official figures show that last year 350 Eritreans and 19 Italians were killed by shiftas, loot 20,000 cattle were stolen and many farms burned and ravaged.

Out of 500 Italian farms scattered over 125,000 acres of land, in 1948, only 30 have survived. These have been transformed into fortresses to withstand the shiftas' frequent raids.

The campaign against the bandits is being carried out by two British battalions in co-operation with an Eritrean police force of 1,200 men. Although some success has been achieved, complete eradication of the shiftas still seems remote.

The bandits hit and run, retreating to rugged regions where pursuit is difficult.

Special Session Of Legislature Will be Called

London, Ont. May 10. (CP)— Premier Frost intimated Wednesday that he will call a special session of the Ontario legislature this summer to deal with legislation paving the way for all in Ontario over 70 years of age to receive Old Age Pensions without the means test.

The Premier in London attending the annual meeting of the Western Ontario Progressive Conservative Association said he expects the Provincial House will meet probably in September.

Recently Ottawa and the provinces came to an agreement whereby the Dominion for the first time will share in the cost of Old Age Pensions with the provinces.

The Ontario leader is hopeful that the higher pensions will be paid to the aged not later than December 1st next year.

Mr. Frost told a dinner meeting of the Association that the nine-man advisory committee on forestry will meet "within a few days" to discuss methods of obtaining an integrated forestry program at the lakehead area where there has been a great deal of friction between lumber and pulpwood interests.

President Says Marshall Told Exact Truth

Washington, May 10—(AP)— President Truman today described Defense Secretary George Marshall's testimony on the MacArthur case as the exact truth, word for word.

BOWLING CHAMPS RECEIVE PRIZES

$813 COLLECTED ON TAG DAY

Officials of St. Julien Chapter, I.O.D.E. said this morning that Saturday's tag day had netted them $813. They said that the sum was greater than that raised last year, and that they were very satisfied with this year's effort.

POLICE APPREHEND JUVENILE FOR THEFT

City police apprehended a local juvenile in the late afternoon of yesterday afternoon and have charged him with breaking into the Club Commodore and stealing cigarets. The juvenile is also believed by police to have been responsible for at least one other break-in in the city.

20 Speeders Fined

Provincial police are cracking down on speeders who don't persist in burning up the highways, it was revealed in county magistrate's court this morning when the names of not less than 20 motorists appeared on the court docket.

And they all must have had a guilty conscience, in any case all 20 of the motorists pleaded guilty to speeding charges and paid fines and costs out of court, ranging between $8 and $13.

Railway bridge and building worker Alex Desrosier, was convicted on an assault charge and assessed $16.50 fine and costs. He was also called upon to pay contribution for doctor and hospital bills. Desrosier was charged with assaulting Victor Pilion, a fellow worker, during an argument in the house where they kept "backeloe's hall" near Marysville.

Harvey Stoliker Wins BCI Annual Harrier Race

Forced to the limit by second-place Sherman Brant, Harvey Stollcker won the seventh annual Belleville Collegiate cross-country run over the local course.

Stollcker negotiated the tough five and one half mile course in 34 minutes and three seconds, just nine seconds ahead of the fast-closing Brant.

Brant paced the harrier pack for nearly three quarters of the race when Stollcker took over and was never headed although Brant closed the gap in the finish.

Third place was taken by John Houston with Jack Matthews, Ernie Brooks, Don Barclay and Alex Earl finishing in that order.

Stollcker won the Ken. J. Colling Memorial Trophy presented to the school by Mr. Cleo Colling, brother of the late sports editor of the Ontario Intelligencer.

Only Six Boards Will Operate In Province

Only six cheese boards will operate in Ontario this year it has been decided by the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association. Last year 18 boards operated in the province.

Under the new arrangement there will be only one board to operate in Western Ontario, said to be at Stratford. Belleville will be the only board in Central Ontario and the other four will be in Eastern Ontario. They are Brockville, Cornwall, Kemptville and Vankleek Hill.

In the Bay of Quinte area, the Napanee, Belleville and Madoc cheese boards will not operate under the new set-up, although Napanee and Kingston had already opened for the year.

Charles H. Heath, secretary of the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association at Belleville, said he did not know the date on which the six cheese boards will hold their meetings.

Canadians Should Use More Milk Meeting Told

A meeting of district dairymen was held last night at Queen Alexandra school and featured by the Chamber of Commerce with Mr. Ross Wagg of the Associated Milk Foundation as guest speaker.

In the absence of Mr. Heath, who was spending a few days on contract, Mr. Freeman Burrows of the Chamber of Commerce welcomed the guests. He explained that the Chamber of Commerce is interested in promoting better fellowship and is anxious to assist the farmers in any way possible. In their program, they are arranging meetings where authorities on agriculture could give addresses on subjects of interest to district farmers.

Accompanied by Dean Whalen, Mrs. Ethel Smith Lawreson rendered two vocal solos, following which Mr. Bruce Martin of Corbyville introduced the speaker.

Mr. Morrison, in his address explained the Associated Milk Foundation and how it dealt mainly with the production and promotion of milk. He stated that there is not enough milk consumed per person for good health and that the Canadian population is increasing, dairy herds are being reduced. The Foundation was formed some 10 years ago in Toronto, equally financed and represented by producer and distributor. Since that time it has enlarged to 20 other areas across Canada.

One of its main functions is to create and distribute through the schools nutrition aids promoting the use of milk. All publicity material is distributed through nutrition experts and by the board of education before distribution.

From the production end he stressed the importance of getting and maintaining a high standard of quality. Milk of good quality has a strong taste appeal, a point that cannot be stressed too strongly.

Displaying many pamphlets including Best Foods for Health, Canada's Dairy Cows, Milk for Millions, Meal Patterns, The Milky Way and assorted others, Mr. Morrison said that these were available to teachers from the Associate Milk Foundation. Other methods of publicity mentioned by the newspaper, radio, bus and street-car placards.

Film Presented

A film, The Milky Way, was shown outlining the operation of the Foundation. Telling the origin and history of each breed of dairy cattle, the film showed the process of milk from the cow to the customer.

At the conclusion of the film, Mr. Leonard Reid, on behalf of those in attendance thanked the speaker. He stated that he felt the radio and press were to blame for the existing condition of the industry.

A draw for door prizes was conducted with Mrs. C. B. Bonisteel of R.R. No. 7, Trenton, winning a washer. Four purchases at Eaton's, John Calma, Amelisburg, received one quilting of house paint donated by Brickman's.

$270 Paid Farmer For Sheep Loses

Sheep losses as the result of dogs ran very high in Rawdon township this year, it was revealed at township council held this week. Council ordered that Sanford Spry be paid a sum of $270 for seven sheep killed and five injured.

Councillors also passed a by-law to detach Rawdon township from the Centre Hastings High School District and form a new area consisting of Rawdon township and the village of Stirling.

The April road vouchers at $1,582 was ordered paid. The assessment role was accepted and the assessors' salaries of $75 each were ordered paid. The roof of the township shed at Springbrook will be painted at a cost of $60. The insurance premium of $346.78 on road machinery was ordered paid.

Obituary

ROBERT G. WAGG

Robert Gordon Wagg, hatchery manager for Swift Canadian Company in the city, died suddenly at his home, 64 Lewis St., yesterday in his 48th year. Mr. Wagg was born in Mount Albert, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Edmond Wagg, and had lived in Belleville for nine years.

Mr. Wagg was a member of Holloway Street United Church. Before he came to Belleville, he worked for Swift's in Newmarket, Picton and Weston.

Mr. Wagg is survived by his wife, the former Marion Stoker; one daughter, Linda, at home, and a son, James, also at home; and one sister, Mrs. Roy (Grace) Stewart, of Mount Albert.

Funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this edition.

LATE MRS. JARED T. HANNA

(Stirling Leader)

The funeral of Mrs. Jared T. Hanna (nee Maggie Rosetta Hugh) was held at St. Paul's United Church, Stirling, on Tuesday, May 8th and was largely attended by a host of friends and friends.

Her pastor Rev. A. E. Baker officiated and the message was given by the pastor who married her. Rev. Mr. Clarke, Deseronto, a former minister on the Rawdon circuit.

Mrs. J. Black and her daughter Miss Erma Campbell sang "In the Garden."

The pall bearers were all grandsons. They were Messrs. Jack Bush, Harold Bush, Gerald Bush, Kenneth Bush, Ralph Ulman and Ralph Hall.

Interment was made in Stirling cemetery.

Visit of Canadian Cruiser Ontario Hailed in N.Z.

Auckland, N.Z., May 10 (CP)— The Canadian cruiser Ontario, on a tour of New Zealand and Australian ports, arrived here today and her visit was hailed by the New Zealand Herald in an editorial paying tribute to Canadians.

The paper said:

"In these anxious days there is something peculiarly fitting in the fact that Canada should link Esquimalt (B.C.) and Auckland, northernmost and southernmost British naval bases of consequence in the Pacific.

"Canadians will greet with a warmth of welcome over and above the firm comradeship which unites the two parts of the Commonwealth. . .

"Canada has won not only respect and admiration but also the gratitude of the whole free world. Her navy, so satisfactorily has been rapid, purposeful, dynamic and wonderfully self-controlled,

"Canadians at all times have seemed to see convinced of their destiny and to have gone quietly about its fulfilment. The result today is a great nation that could look high sense of international responsibility.

"Canada seems gifted to manage her own internal affairs with commendable sense and balance, sing as she does the old world with the new, she has attained a new and important status in international affairs."

J. Raymond Carr, Formerly Brakeman in Local C.N.R. Division, Returns as Supt.

A man who once hefted pick and shovel with the best of them when the Grand Trunk was the way between Bancroft and Lake St. Peter was constructed has come home as superintendent of the division in which he started his railway career. J. Raymond Carr, Belleville-born and educated, has succeeded A. M. Shea as superintendent of the Belleville division.

That the man who started working for the railroad in 1905 as a laborer on an extra gang, returned in his 57th year to be boss of his old division and to renew acquaintances with the men he worked with years ago, Mr. Carr stayed with the railroad only three years the first time, quitting at the age of 19 to come back to Belleville for factory work. Not content to stay in a job that offered little scope, he left after a brief stint to work his way through the ranks. "I don.

cannot attribute my rise to the position I now hold to any formula. It was largely in judgment and respect for all employees," he says. "I consider perhaps in the year to good relations between all craft and very often attains co-operation from employees far beyond the scope of their duties."

As happy as they are to see Mr. Carr come back, railroad employees and others in the city hated to see A. M. Shea leave for his new post in the superintendency of the St. Lawrence division. He has been here since 1946, and now he, too, returns to his home—Montreal.

Mr. Shea has also had long service with the railway, starting as a brakeman with the Grand Trunk in 1911. He became a conductor in 1916, and by 1942 had risen through the ranks to be appointed trainmaster in the Montreal district. In that same year, he became assistant superintendent of the Montreal district, and in 1943 served on the St. Lawrence division. His next appointment was to the Belleville division.

Both appointments were announced by the general superintendent of the Montreal district, O. A. Bolvin.

Want to Tax Tourist Homes Same as Hotels

Guelph, May 10 — (CP) — Two resolutions pertaining to taxation of privately - owned cemeteries and tourist homes were passed by a meeting of district nine of the Ontario Association of Assessing Officers held here Wednesday.

The Association will ask the provincial government to pass legislation lifting exemption of property tax on privately-owned profit-making cemeteries.

It will also seek to have tourist homes classified with hotels and apartment buildings for tax purposes.

Dr. D. S. Lighthall, County Coroner, Dies in Picton

— A member of the medical profession for fifty years, Dr. Donald Stewart Lighthall, passed away Wednesday morning in Prince Edward County Memorial hospital here. He was in his 74th year, and had been ill for the past two weeks.

The funeral is being held Friday afternoon at the G. M. Hicks & Son Funeral Home with interment in Glenwood cemetery.

Dr. Lighthall was coroner for Prince Edward County and for some years was medical health officer of the town.

In June, he would have marked his fiftieth year in the medical profession and plans had been made by fellow members to honor him on this occasion. Though the presentation date had been advanced, death intervened. Prior to his last illness, from an bronchial condition, he had been remarkably active continuing to live the outdoor life he so much enjoyed.

Born In Picton

Dr. Lighthall was born in Picton, son of Lieut.-Col. Angus Lighthall and his wife, Molly DeBafley. His father commanded the 16th Regiment from 1901-05. Surviving are his wife, Molly DeBafley. His father commanded the 16th Regiment from 1901-05. Surviving are his wife, Molly Prince Edward Regiment, and with Mr. Gilbert operated a furniture and undertaker's establishment here.

Dr. Lighthall was educated in Picton and graduated in medicine from the University of Toronto in 1901. He practised in Chicago for nine years and then in Bristish Columbia before taking this Camas Prairie district, then a great cattle raising area. Dr. Lighthall travelled on horseback to attend most of his patients, his pills and instruments in a grain sack tied to the saddle.

Collected Indian Relics

While in Idaho, Dr. Lighthall became interested in Indian relics and collected many there. When he returned to Picton in 1915, this became a hobby with him which he continued to follow. He was an authority on Indian occupation in Prince Edward and was often called upon to speak on this subject. He had a valuable collection of relics dating back to the days of the Big Mound Builders. He was interested in anything historical and also collected old firearms.

Dr. Lighthall was a great lover of the outdoors, walking, fishing and hunting being hobbies he enjoyed. He spent much time at his cottage in the area known as East Lake. He was one of the early members of the Big Eddy camp in North Hastings, making the annual trek there for deer hunting for many years.

He was a member of the Rod and Gun Club.

Had Natural Talent

In the medical profession, Dr. Lighthall was best known as an obstetrician and an anaesthetic-ian, specializing in the latter as such work. He had continued this work until the last illness and a host of patients came to look upon him as a friend as well as physician.

When Prince Edward County hospital was built, Dr. Lighthall was one of those who assisted in the planning of the building and equipment, and also served on the board as representative of the medical profession. Like fellow members, he contributed a great deal of time and effort in help-

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, May 10 (CP) — Early sales were too few to establish prices on most grades of cattle at the Ontario stockyards today, Receipts: Cattle, 40; calves, 40; hogs 250, No sheep or lambs were received. One estimated holdover was 350 cattle.

Medium quality stockers brought $29-$31.

Calves were steady at $37-$38 for choice vealers and $30-$36 for common to medium.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, May 10 — (CP) — Prices eased slightly at the session progressed on the stock market today.

Industrials slipped slightly with declines ranging to more than a point. Papers, steels, utilities, liquors and retail stores showed a majority of losses. Banks and constructions were firm and the rest of the board was mixed. Trading in the section was mostly featureless.

Base metals made an early moderate advance but soon lost ground. United Keno Hill, Quebec Manitou, East Sullivan, Falconbridge and Golden Manitou dipped fractions.

Western oils were off pennies.

Golds showed little trading or interest, Senior producers were mostly steady and quiet while a few secondary golds weakened.

PRODUCE MARKET

Creamery prints, first grade, 63-65 cents.

The egg market was steady to firm with large grades in fair supply but other grades short. Country shippers quoted graded eggs, case free: Grade A large, 59; A medium, 57; A pullet, 54; Grade B, 52; Grade C, 41. Wholesale to retail: Grade A large, 62-65; A medium, 61-62; A pullet, 59; Grade B, 57; Grade C, 48.

Large Rainbow Trout Caught In Severn River

Midland, May 10 — (CP) Mayor Charles Parker of Midland went looking for a fish-story the other day. He came back with a 12 - pound rainbow trout.

Mayor Parker made his haul in a pool on the Severn River, near Tay, 10 miles east of Midland. His equipment — a jack-knife with which he cut himself a poles a line given him last year by a visiting United States tourist; a 1½ - inch hook; and a tiny fire-worm.

The trout measured 29½ inches in length.

(In Toronto, game and fisheries officials said the record rainbow ever caught in Ontario weighed 14 pounds, four ounces, and was taken from the St. Mary's River near Sault Ste. Marie in 1925 by Roy Brown of Sault Ste. Marie.

(Mayor Parker's fish is tops for the Lake Simcoe district, however. The biggest rainbow trout caught there previously was a 10-pound, four-ounce fish from the Pine River in 1946.)

Scads of Souvenirs Brought Back From Far East by Two Trenton Men

Recently returned from Korea, Hawaii, Australia and Japan, Mrs. LAC Lou Goodchild and Cpl. Jack Coutts of 4 Cedar Street, Trenton, were able to procure a large number of souvenirs which are currently displayed at their residence.

Members of 426 Thunderbird squadron, Lou and Jack were engaged in the Korean airlift from Detroit — field in Washington. Their route took them to Alaska, The Aleutians, Japan, and returning through Australia, Wake Island, Hawaii and San Francisco.

The souvenirs occupy a large part of their living room and are representative of all of the places visited.

Prized highly is a complete split-bamboo fly and casting rod with a reversible handle, and several handmade flies packed in a special travelling case. A 110-piece watchmaking kit will suggest Lou's collection of tools for his off-duty hobby.

A 250-piece china dinner set heads the long list of other souvenirs which include several salt and pepper sets in various shapes and sizes, a blue bedspread and matching pillow slips, a shredded bamboo tea stirrer, a Japanese silk flag, buttons and buckles of coconut shell and individually hand-painted writing paper.

One of the outstanding works of art is a hand inlaid mother-of-pearl what-not. Chop sticks of mother-of-pearl, many yards of silk and silk brocade, Hawaiian coral and leis (which in Hawaii are composed of orchids), a complete sarong outfit for his wife and quilted silk brocade dressing gown, embroidered in blue and white, are rarities seldom seen in this area.

Lighters, cases, and fountain pens which they brought back were exact duplicates of models costing up to forty times as much in this country.

Upon being asked how he was able to bring back such an enormous amount of goods, Lou replied, "We had top priority."

Originator of Russian Confession Technique at Purge Trials Dies

Moscow, May 10 (AP)—The army newspaper Red Star today announced the death of the Colonel-General of Justice Vasily Ulrich, 74, who said he "devoted all his conscious life to the cause of the party of Lenin and Stalin."

Ulrich presided at the celebrated blood-purge trials in the mid 1930s, in which many Russian military and party leaders were executed anti-thousands deported in an alleged plot on the life of Stalin.

Ulrich presided at the production of a phenomenon now well known to the world—the confession technique. In the bloody trials he directed, the defendants with monotonous unanimity all confessed their guilt and heaped censure on themselves. This process now has been repeated many times, notably in the recent purge trials of Soviet satellite countries.

When on Dec. 1, 1934, Sergei M. Kirov, old friend of Stalin, member of the Politburo and foe of exiled Leon Trotsky was assassinated, Ulrich was judge president of the military collegium of the supreme court. He had sprung to prominence before that by presiding over the trial of six Britons in Moscow who were accused of spying. The case sent British-Russian relations to a low point.

The assassination of Kirov was the signal for a wave of arrests throughout the Soviet Union which was to lead the great Stalin purge. This was to eradicate all Stalin's opposition, including many of Lenin's followers among the "old Bolsheviks" and permit Stalin to reign supreme and unchallenged as absolute dictator.

Not long after the assassination, the Kremlin announced Kirov's death was part of a plot to kill Stalin and other leaders and bring Trotsky to power.

The executions began wholesale after a series of trials. Ulrich presided in January, 1936, over the trial of 17 persons accused of plotting to kill Stalin. Andrei Y. Vishinsky, now Soviet foreign minister, was the prosecutor.

Then came the secret trials of army leaders. Chief defendant was Marshal M. Mikhail N. Tukhachevsky, one of the five marshals of the red army. Eight generals were sent to the firing squad. One other general, facing trial, killed himself.

After the purge Ulrich presided at many other military trials, but after 1940 he retired to the life of a pedagogue, teaching young Soviet men how to become military judges.

Labor Leaders Brand Picket Line as Communist

Hamilton, May 10—(CP)—Local labor leaders today branded picket lines at the Commerce Barber Shop as communist. The picket lines were formed Tuesday after Negro pianist Oscar Peterson charged that the shop had refused him a haircut.

Oliver Hodges, C.C.L. organizer said: "fair-minded Labor people of Hamilton will boycott any place or business that is practising discrimination because of race, creed, or national origin—without the tub-thumping of the communist national federation of Labor youth."

TWEED

Youngster Found Shortly After Leaving Home

Tweed—Badly frightened and wet, a two-year-old boy was found Tuesday morning west of Tweed by a search party after he had wandered away from home.

Lucky Lees, son of Mr. and Mrs. Mervin Lees, started out on a jaunt Tuesday morning with his dog, and soon rounded up. When his mother missed him, she organized a search party by telephone, and the boy was found more than a mile from his home. He had started out off the Lodge Room road, went through a field and into a woods. The searchers found his tracks into the woods, and followed his wanderings until they found him.

GIRL STARTS RIOT

Karlsruhe, Germany, May 10—(Reuters)— Nine, United States servicemen were injured during a race riot here Tuesday night after an American sailor reportedly manded a German girl for talking to Negro soldiers in a cafe. The girl told the sailor to mind his own business and then hit him over the head with a beer mug. That started a free-for-all between about 100 white and Negro servicemen.

Pleads Guilty To Smuggling

Brockville, May 10 — (CP) — Herbert H. Caldwell of Brockville, owner of Caldwell Linen Mills at nearby Iroquois, was fined $300 in court here Wednesday on three counts of smuggling.

The charges were laid by Brockville RCMP officers following an investigation in Prescott and at Dorval airport, Montreal, where the offences took place. Items smuggled included a gold wrist watch, undeclared in the spring of 1949, a lady's diamond brooch and a lady's pendant watch, brought in during May 1950. All three items were said to have been purchased in Switzerland.

The RCMP officers told the court Caldwell had co - operated with them in their investigation, pleading guilty at a summary trial and paying $971.87 in duty on the three items.

WOMAN STABBED SIX TIMES

Toronto, May 10 — (CP)—Police say Mrs. Rosmon Smith, 37, was stabbed six times with a butcher knife during an argument early today with her husband.

The mother of five children was taken to hospital. After an emergency operation, her condition was reported improving.

The husband, William Smith, also 37, was arrested on a charge of wounding. Police said Smith struck his wife of going out with another man.

ALCOHOLISM IS A CURSE

An indication of what may be necessary in all the larger centres across Canada came from a bench of justice this week in Ottawa. In sentencing an admitted alcoholic three months in jail, a deputy magistrate urged that cities be set up in the capital city to deal with men and women whose lives are governed by alcohol.

Within late years, the plight of the alcoholic has come more and more into the public eye. Twenty years ago, the habitual drunkard was regarded as an eyesore and a blot on the community. He was considered to be without morals, without conscience, and any pity or emotion that was manifested was directed towards his long-suffering family. Attitudes have changed, however, and it is now recognized that alcoholics are possessed by a disease, just as much as one whose body has been ravaged by tuberculosis or cancer, or any other illness. With that realization, there have been movements to help such men and women, and successful rehabilitation of drunkards, once thought to be in the realm of the impossible, is now a reality.

Alcoholics Anonymous has provided the framework and the tool to help many thousands of men back from drunken lives. Thousands have found support and comfort in the help that the organization offers, and as many homes have been restored to a decent status. But there still remain many men and women who have had no contact with the organization, or if they have, were not able to dissociate themselves from alcohol completely. These are the people who appear in courts across the land with monotonous regularity, with whom the police and magistrates can do only one thing — impose a jail term.

Establishment of clinics as advocated by the Ottawa magistrate would do much to help the situation. The costs of such clinics would be small indeed, when one considers the immense amount of money spent each year in court costs, in maintenance of jails, and in actually providing for prisoners during their terms. All have to be tied, buildings have to be maintained, guards must be paid to protect the public from the influence of the alcoholic. In the long run, drunkards might better be given medical treatment in the hope of rehabilitating them, as far as cost to the taxpayer is concerned.

Aside from the monetary aspect, there is the hope that some of these men might be led back to normal, useful lives. Too many fine men and too many fine brains have gone to waste in past years because of alcoholism. Every step must be taken to salvage their abilities.

THE IMPORTANCE OF ICELAND

Another important step by a western nation to prepare for a Third World War, if it comes, has been taken by the United States with the establishment of a troop site on Iceland. With that country's consent, a contingent of men has arrived to aid in the construction of defences.

It is believed that the first move of the United States troops will be to survey the island to determine the possibilities there for air bases. Iceland, and Greenland as well, could become important points in an air war that might encompass the northern areas of the world. Both Canada and the United States fully appreciated the value of air bases in Newfoundland during the last war, and it is likely that Iceland and Greenland, in a next war when bomber ranges might conceivably be longer, would form important links in the chain of command.

The operation has been carried out with a minimum of discussion, and no apparent ill-feelings. It might be thought that Iceland would resent the invasion of western troops, if she wished to run her own affairs. There is no indication, however, that she will be interfered with because of the presence of the troops, and the advantages to both will be quantified over and above any hard feelings. Added to the fact that the island can become an important link for the western nations is the point that Iceland, by herself, could never hope for self-protection if a shooting war should start.

Iceland is without an army, navy, air force or coast guard. The only guns that would protect the island in case of need would be those manned on a volunteer basis by the 140,000 residents. By comparison, ten Icelands would fit into Ontario's area, and this province has twenty times the population of the island.

Even so, Iceland's position in world geography made it important during World War II as a loading and assembly point for convoys going to Russia. Should Russia start an all-out war this time, Iceland will be in a highly vulnerable position, and communist possession of the island could mean more concentrated attacks on western nations by the aggressor.

The island may yet occupy an important position in world politics, and it is well to see that the North Atlantic Pact is being implemented for the benefit of both the island and the western nations.

OUR TOWN

By JACK SCOTT

HAVE WE LOST?

(This is the second of two columns in which Pierre Berton, articles editor of Maclean's Magazine, is answering questions about the war in Korea. Berton has been in Korea for the past two months.)

Q. What is your opinion about the outcome of the Korean war?

A. This is a pretty personal viewpoint, I think we'll beat the communists militarily. They just can't stand up to our superiority in the air and to our massed artillery. Morally and psychologically I feel we lost the war irrevocably. As one educated Korean said to me: "You've made beggars of our children, pimps of our men and prostitutes of our women. Is that's liberation you can have it." In my view we have failed signally, in most cases, to be the ambassadors of democracy among a people who had never known freedom and are interested, first and foremost, in personal survival and respite from starvation.

Q. What about the Chinese soldier?

He's a good fighting man, poorly equipped. He fights purely and simply because he is told to fight because he has no other alternative. He is a master of camouflage and concealment and he is very, very tough. I like him.

The Chinese seem to be fairly well equipped with light automatic weapons but their lack of artillery and air is a damaging handicap. Their tactics are now and experienced, are considerably better than Korea against any foreseeable number of Chinese soldiers.

* * *

Q. What was the effect on the troops of the firing of General MacArthur?

A. The first immediate reaction was one of considerable shock. The troops had not been prepared, in any way, for President Truman's decision. Although carrying stories from Washington to the effect that the army was predicting a row between Truman and MacArthur, the army newspaper, the Far East Edition of Stripes, carried no hint of it. Three days before MacArthur was dismissed, the Associated Press carried a full "dope" story predicting the row. Stripes should have to let him go. This story did not appear in the army paper. Nor did similar stories from other wire services. Thus the actual story when it appeared was with stunning surprise to most soldiers in Korea.

Among Commonwealth troops and foreign troops the reaction to Truman was fairly favorable. Most that I talked to argued that Truman was acting like an officer whose subordinate had been needlessly insubordinate: to retain its own command he had to fire him, however, reluctantly. Among the Americans, however, there is a solid deal of pro-MacArthur feeling.

Q. The UN aim now seems to be to "kill Chinese," rather than take terrain. Is this strategy justified in your opinion?

A. Yes, Ridgway has repeatedly said he's not interested in "real estate". It seems to me that, in this limited war, the only way to knock out the Chinese is to destroy their divisions—thus diminishing the numbers of their fighting men and troops. Pushing them back to the Manchurian border would not necessarily solve anything unless we can also wreck their army organization. The general feeling in Korea during the recent offensive has been that a retreat on our part doesn't matter a damn as long as we can inflict heavy casualties on the enemy. I'd say this strategy has already had a pretty telling effect on the Chinese command.

Q. What's your strongest impression, as a Canadian civilian, after two months in Korea?

A. This is tough to say, and may be unpopular; but my overall impression has been that Asia is a horribly hard place to live in. Even when I first arrived in Tsegu an American sergeant, with a bullet in the lung, died several weeks and who was waiting for a plane back to the U.S. Several Korean civilians, buttion-holed me. "You are a reporter," he said, "what's your opinion of the war?" I was reading the 38th Parallel?" I had to answer honestly that I thought that I hadn't formed any opinion about the Korean war. And I hadn't.

Ph. D. degree these days have opinions. Personally I think that the greatest blunder we could have made. It has served to prolong the war, to make it more costly and less, and which must be a major tragedy to the people of Korea, who are the scrapping. On a global scale our objectives—and by 'our' I mean the free world—have been tions— seem very clear: We have resisted communist aggression in one corner of the globe. But when you get on the ground you begin to wonder about the wisdom of the ultimate objective. Certainly we have resisted Communist military aggression.

But the question I keep asking myself is this: Have we stopped Communism? Have we made new friends for the West? Have we brought to the Asian masses democracy in the minds of a private soldier? The answer to all these questions, it seems to me, are a resounding "No!"

Stagonof's fascists or Egyptian egypti was unknown then. Again, how shamefully the rank and file of the medical profession reviled and persecuted the great Hungarian physician, Ignaz Philipp Semmelweiss, and the great Amsterdam physician-doctor Oliver Wendell Holmes, when these doctors told the simple truth, namely, that puerperal fever was an outbreak of yellow fever of course the fact that yellow fever spreads only through the agency of a filthable virus carried by the breed of mosquito called the Stegomyia fasciata

Public Sees Treasures of 'Sweet Bowhill'

(By a Woman Reporter of the Edinburgh Scotsman)

"When Summer smiled on" opened Bowhill, people for Walter Scott's "Lay of the Last Minstrel." Well, it wasn't Summer at the weekend, when the Selkirkshire home of the Duke and Duchess of Buccleuch was open on behalf of the Queen's Nurses and the Border Area British Legion; the "smiled" part was the fair promise of what might be to come.

Crowds of people poured through the beech avenue skirting the lake, and paused on the terraces in front of the house to drink in the beauty of the fields and woods that lay sparkling in the sunshine.

Sir Walter Scott, a frequent visitor, had gazed on this scene over and over again. References to Bowhill appear in a number of his works, as well as in Lockhart's Life. Romance lay around deepened and intensified by his pen and the magic cadence that came rippling back as I stood there — Carterhaugh, Philiphaugh, Ettrick Forest, Yarrow and the dowie dens, and the old tower of Newark where lived ancestors of the Scotts of Buccleuch.

Bowhill has long been the Border home of the Scott family, though the original eighteenth century house was completely reconstructed in 1825.

* * *

Inside, the Duke and Duchess of Buccleuch, their son, the Earl of Dalkeith, and their younger daughter, Lady Caroline Scott, whose engagement to Mr. Ian H. Gilmour was announced last week, were waiting with friends to welcome their guests, to conduct them round and point out objects of special interest.

Bowhill has one of the finest private art collections in Britain, consisting of pictures, furniture, and silver. Many of the treasures had adorned Dalkeith Palace since the time of Charles II and were brought to Bowhill during the past 50 years.

The interior of the house was reconstructed concurrently with the work being completed only last year, after extensive damage during the first eight years of military occupation. Many of the rooms now have pale-colored walls which give a pleasing effect of lightness.

Passing up the staircase with its famous portraits, I came with the crowd to the gallery hall hung with a set of immense tapestries, each covering an entire wall. Three depict the triumph of Julius Caesar, and were woven at Mortlake about 1670 from the designs by Mantegna, the cartoons being at Hampton Court Palace.

Each room was so crowded with treasures that it was difficult to decide on which to concentrate. We passed the Van Dycks and turned, in the first room we entered, from cases of miniatures by celebrated painters to gaze on Dresden vases, a decorative piece from Meissen composed of fruit and flowers, and a set of Dresden teacups in mauve, with fluted rims and dainty handles, each cup showing a different picture.

* * *

Among the objects of greatest interest were some of the earliest known examples of English silver in the form of dessert plates showing scenes from the parable of the Prodigal Son, with the date, "London 1589."

The focus of interest in the dining room was the table, laid entirely with silver, except for the wine glasses. The idea of doing this came, I understand, from the Earl of Dalkeith, who takes a great interest in the family treasurers.

Many days were spent by the butler, Mr. T. C. Williams, in cleaning and polishing the silver till it shone in its original brightness. It took him a whole day to prepare two giant candelabra that were so outstanding.

Nearby stood a gigantic wine cistern — weighing 2,000 ounces. It is really a silver piece — it is doubtful if it has ever actually been used — and it is considered to be, very probably, the largest silver piece in Scotland.

The drawing-room is a very beautiful room with a large bay window. Its walls are covered with red silk brocade, while curtains of the same rich material hang at the windows. The room is filled with French furniture, mainly of the Louis XV period, and including a suite with eighteenth — century Aubusson tapestry. Examples of the famous Boule furniture are found there, as in other rooms of the house.

Of special interest is a Louis XV games table composed of various inlaid woods in marqueterie in floral sprays on four cabriole legs. It opens out in different directions and contains candles attached to two sides.

There are many long mirrors in this room, as well as a fine collection of china. One piece contains a set of green Sevres china that belonged to Madame Dubarry, while another holds further specimens of Dresden china. An unusual fireplace is placed directly under a window.

* * *

We passed through the Duke's room, admiring a beautiful portrait of the Duchess painted in 1921, and the Duchess's boudoir, its floor covered with a green carpet, into which is woven the monogram "C.A.R."

The homeward way led past the flats of Newark Tower, so closely associated of old with the Buccleuch family, and the scene of both the beginning and the ending of Scott's "Lay."

TOUCH OFF FUMES

Petersburg, Va., May 10— (AP) — Two soldiers, standing on a street, lit cigarets and let the lighted match fall to the ground. Whoosh! Flames shot 50 feet high. The match had touched off fumes from a leaking gas line. Sgt. Victor Knight and Cpl. Lewis L. Grono suffered minor burns.

MAY BE MANPOWER CRISIS

Chicago, May 10 —(AP)—Maj.-Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, selective service director, said yesterday that there will be a military manpower crisis in the United States within 18 months and that it will last about eight years. Hershey said that during the depression of the 1930s the country's birth rate of male babies sank from 130,000 a month to 97,000. When the selective service hits the depression-baby supply, he said, the shortage of manpower will start.

Wellington, N. Z. — (CP) Bartenders and bar porters in New Zealand are seeking a boot allowance or double pay for a week because they claim that beer rots their boots. Six per cent beer is as hard on their footwear, they say, as the pre-war variety with a 15-per-cent alcohol content.

WEDDINGS

FENNEGAN—DOYLE

A pretty wedding was solemnized in the Sacred Heart Church, Marmora, at 10 a.m., on Monday, May 7, when Vera Catharine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Doyle, of Marmora, was united in marriage to John Patrick Finnegan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Finnegan, of Uxbridge. Rev. Father J. O'Neill officiated, assisted by Rev. Father G. O'Hearn, of Stirling.

The wedding music was played by Mrs. Hugh Brady and Mrs. James McGrath and, "Ave Maria" and "Our Lady of Fatima".

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was daintily gowned in white silk organdie and French lace, the fitted bodice featuring off the shoulder neck line trimmed in white lace forming cap sleeves; a large flat bow of lace ornamented at the front. The gathered skirt was very bouffant. Her veil of tulle was held by an open crowned bonnet of lace. She carried a bouquet of red rose and baby's breath.

Her bridesmaids were Dorothy Forestell and Margaret Doyle, who were frocked in green and mauve organdie respectively with bonnets of silk organdie and bouquets of rose carnations.

Linda Long, cousin of the groom, was flower girl, attired in yellow net over taffeta and carried a bouquet of pink carnations.

Robert Morian was the best man and Harold Doyle and Michael McDonald were ushers.

Following the ceremony the wedding dinner was held in the Sacred Heart Parish Hall, with catering by the Catholic Women's League.

A reception was later held at the home of the bride's parents, where the bride's mother received wearing a gown of dusty rose crepe and navy hat, with corsage of yellow roses. The groom's mother, who assisted, wore a gown of grey crepe with a sky blue hat and a corsage of pink roses.

On their return they will live in Burlington.

BEYOND CRITICISM

Swansea, Wales — (CP) — A poetry society president, intrigued by a poem in a magazine by Henry Vaughan wrote inviting Vaughan to join the society. "Writers find our criticisms useful," the letter said. But Vaughan is beyond criticism — he died in 1695.

Soft Music Features Charming May Tea

An attractive May tea and sale of homecooking was held yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. A. Wonnacott, Green Street, under the auspices of Mrs. G. Matthew's group, Minerva Chapter, Order of Eastern Star. Despite the dullness of the day, many friends and members found their way to this hospitable home where the door was opened by witnesses Mrs. Gertie Orr, and a cordial welcome extended by the Worthy Matron, Mrs. F. Little, and the gracious hostess, Mrs. A. Wonnacott.

Lovely Tea Table

The tea table was a symphony of pastel tints with its lovely centrepieces of fragrant sweetpeas in pale pink and bluish-mauve, intermingled with glistening huckleberry sprays and bright green cedar, the whole flanked by tri-branched silver candelabra, with ivory and blue tapers rising from lacey ruffs, bringing out the soft blue of the surrounding walls, and the silver services upon which a handmade "Grand Dame" lace cloth.

The dainty trays of cakes and sandwiches, centred by a cluster of pink sweetpeas and the salad plates with their green pickles and yellow carrot attractions, were pictures of loveliness, while over all watted the soft strains of the piano under the pleasing touch of Mrs. M. Jordan, adding to the festiveness of the occasion.

Those presiding were: Mrs. W. Adams, Mrs. C. Clark, Mrs. W. Coulby, and Mrs. W. Broad; while Mrs. A. Williamson looked after the guests to the tearoom. Those who served included, Mrs. A. Valleau, Mrs. A. Stalker, Mrs. K. Lawrence, Mrs. L. Hunt, Mrs. A. Wonnacott, Mrs. W. Kilbank and Mrs. G. Matthews.

Delicious Pastries

The home-cooking table in charge of Mrs. P. Smith and Mrs. H. J. Carter, was arranged on the verandah, where many delicious pastries were in attractive array. There were chocolate loaf cakes with white icings, layer cakes, apple pies, golden brown and delicious looking; taffy tarts, lemon tarts; cookies of all shapes and sizes; nut-topped cakes, and a huge pink-iced, three-layer cake waiting to be claimed by the bolder of the lucky ticket, which was ultimately discovered to be Mrs. Ray Cleaver's. Mrs. A. Stirland was the convener of this cake, and also the treasurer for the afternoon.

A dainty tea, charmingly conveyed.

Woman's Aux. Meets In Convention

Brockville, May 10. (CP)—More than 400 members representing seven Eastern Ontario dioceses attended the opening ceremonies of the 65th annual meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Church of England in Canada at St. Peter's Anglican Church here, Wednesday.

Ven. J. H. H. Coleman, of Kingston, celebrated the morning communion, while Ven. H. R. Stout, archdeacon of Frontenac, greeted the women and Rev. J. L. Hutchinson welcomed them on behalf of the host parish, St. Peter's. The sermon at the morning service was delivered by Rev. A. C. McCollum, of Sydenham.

Highlight of the afternoon session was an address by Millicent Houldcroft, a teacher at Fort Georges School in the Diocese of the Arctic, some 375 miles north of Moose Factory. Miss Houldcroft told of the work being done among the Indians and Eskimos in that area, emphasizing the help given by the Woman's Auxiliary.

Life membership were awarded to Mrs. W. Fred Reynolds, wife of Brockville's mayor, and Miss Margaret Cooke, of St. Mary's parish, Kingston, for their appreciative work over the past years.

Dr. Florence Nichols, director of the Anglican Mission Hospital at Kingoy, India, spoke to the evening gathering. She described the work being done by the hospital and Church of England there, and the aims among the natives in that area.

The conference continues this morning.

Club Activities

KEEN AGE CLUB

The Keen Age Club of Tabernacle United Church held its monthly meeting last Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. Shirley Kelleher, in the form of a surprise party in honor of Mrs Grace Firth, bride-elect of the month, who was presented with two beautiful gifts. Crew expressed her gracious thanks to the club for the lovely gifts.

During the evening, games were played and several contests were held.

The hostess served dainty refreshments and an enjoyable evening was brought to a close.

Collection for the day amounted to $1.54 and there were 19 members present

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A man who is thinking himself

It's very easy, how easily and how often we see ourselves into think... we're doing something for someone else when all we actually have in mind is our own interests. A lot of research is what happens when people refuse to be honest with themselves and neglect to examine their own motives to make sure that they know exactly what they're doing and why.

I find it quite hard, for example, to have patience with the attitude expressed in the following letter, which comes from a man who does not mention his age, but who undoubtedly is a plenty old enough to know better.

"I have been keeping company with a woman for almost 15 years," he writes. "During that time, we have practically lived as man and wife. No one has ever left me and taken up with another man, and although we did find fault in the same place, what she has done was just as bad as if we had lived together.

"What I want to know is, should I let this other man know just the size of it, or should I, in order to save him from the same kind of hell I got? The reason for this is that this other man may want to marry her, and I don't think it is fair to him, as she may do the same to him and leave another broken heart. Her only reason for leaving me is that she claims this other boy friend can give her more than I can as responsible position and so have I."

Not Welfare—But Revenge

Now I don't think for a minute that this man has slightest interest in the welfare of his new fellow who has moved in with him. I don't think he cares one bit whether he gets a broken heart or not.

What I think he is trying to do is to beat the other man out by believing that he has a noble motive, when what he's really after is to regain the affections of the woman. If she's double-crossed him, he's jolly well going to double-cross her. Both men can't have him and get away with it! He'll show her!

It's likely, too, that another part of his purpose in wanting to turn his ex-mistress over to him so she'll come crying back to him. If he can just get the chance to send her packing, she'll be glad enough to go where she's wanted.

And so for being interested in saving the interloper from getting the same deal he himself received, he's got it in for him, too. For whether he knows it or not, he's putting on a case of "dog in the manger" performance. If he can't have the woman, he's not going to let any other man have her.

Why No Marriage?

What I'd like to know is, why didn't he marry her in the first self long ago? If he is a married man, having himself a time on the side, he got no more than he deserved when she finally walked off and left him. If he wasn't married, what was he doing living with her for 15 years without making her his wife? While I hold no brief for the woman from any point of view, I can readily see how she might get extremely tired of a 15-year-old romance that was obviously getting her nowhere faster and faster. Both by charms and his pocketbook might well have reached their limits, so that a fresh face and an unexplored wallet no doubt had their attractions.

I can't see that the writer of the letter has a leg to stand on, and my advice to him is to write this whole miserable business off as a dead loss, and see if he can do anything to make his next 15 years show for the last. He can start by letting this woman go without a struggle, and without any self-induced delusions about rescuing her new lover from a heartless adventuress.

BEAUTY

Dainti ness is a beauty requisite

Some women always look as crisp as a May morning

Your nose, your eyes, your other features are not of your own choosing. If they are pleasing, you are lucky; if they aren't, you make the best of them. Appearance is something else. Then too many ways of making oneself appealing to the eye, and daintiness of person is one of them.

There are women who always looks as crisp and fresh as a May morning, even though they are tearing the house to pieces, cleaning everything like mad, and putting the house together again. They catch dust, but dust never seems to catch them. They are fastidious as to personal grooming, are neat as a pin, have a sense of order that applies to themselves as well as to their surroundings.

Their desks are not littered with old letters. There is no powder spilled in the make-up box. The top is on the tube of toothpaste. The mirror in the bathroom is never be-spattered. They don't spend any more time doing their domestic chores than do other housewives. They have their work organized, save steps when they can, and so are free from that agonizing sense of being a drudge that makes so many women bored and unhappy.

The daisy woman keeps her shoes on shoe trees, puts them away in a cabinet so they don't catch dust. She keeps her hankies, gloves, scarves and little do-dads in separate boxes with sachets between them. Her jars of cream are not greasy on the outside. She has at hand a good-sized supply of powder pads, so she does not have to use soiled ones.

Hats are packed with tissues, so they will keep their shape. Shoes are placed in boxes or on standards covered with cellophane caps. The medicine cabinet is in order, every item carefully labelled. Her jars and bottles arranged according to size. She is fussy about the bathtub, keeping it so clean each day that it never goes dingy and grey.

She knows that make-up will not camouflage a poor complexion, so she is mindful of her eating habits. Malnutrition is responsible for some of those grey faces you see. Overindulgence in rich foods will make the skin oily and coarse of texture. She drinks plenty of water, gets her eight hours of beauty sleep, willy-nilly, rain or shine. She finds time each day to get out of doors, lap up oxygen.

The daily bath is a must. She finds it a relaxing process and realizes that nothing else will contribute quite so much to dainty appearance.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Tips on Your Conversing

Emerson said, the famous words, "Conversation is our account of ourselves." How about your conversation? Does it give a good account of you, of your way of thinking, of your way of speaking? Think about that.

Gwendy father, as best man, sometimes walks in recessional

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When the groom has his father as his best man is it ever considered correct for the father, like any other man who is best man, to walk in the recessional, with the maid of honor? I'm the groom-to-be, and if at all correct I'd like to have my father walk in the recessional. My bride-to-be would like this also, but if it isn't approved, My father is a grand person, tall and very good-looking, and would look quite very well (ours is a formal afternoon church wedding, the men wearing cutaways), stripped trousers, and I'd be mighty proud to have him in the recessional, and wouldn't I can't see any reason why he shouldn't be, if he's the best man. What do you say, Mrs. Beeckman?

Ken W.

I say . . . have your father, your best man, walk in the recessional, with the honor attendant. Although, I'm sure, this is not always the plan when the groom's father is the best man (he usually returns to the vestry) it is sometimes the plan . . . Indeed, I went a short time ago to a large metropolitan church wedding, an eremely beautiful and fashionable wedding, and that was the procedure. The groom's father and his partner, both very handsome looking, and he added great distinction to the group of attendants. And I agree with you that if everyone concerned . . . the bride, the groom, the father . . . would like to be the plan, there is no real reason why it shouldn't be!

To give her in marriage?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am planning to be married in June; to have a church wedding. My father is dead. I have one brother, but I have not been able to locate him for some time. For about ten years (I am now twenty-three) I have been living with a family—the husband and wife are middle-aged—and I would like to know if the husband could give me in marriage?

G. R. B.

You don't give me very much information, but I should think that if you have no relative (mother? uncle? cousin?) whom you wish to have give you in marriage, it would be very unusual for you to wish to be given in marriage by this man who is the head of the family who have apparently been so good and kind to you. Since you have lived with this family since you were thirteen years old, you must regard them really as your family, and they must think of you as the "daughter" of the family!

MARIO ... in his distinctive feature about FOOD ... What's Cooking?

No one bothered to eat lamb in Australia. A hundred years ago one rancher was reputed to have boiled down a thousand sheep a day just for their tallow. Leftover lamb chops didn't concern this big time shepherd.

One of the most tasteful and economical ways of using leftover lamb is to make crisp brown croquettes.

The meat for croquettes should be cut into tiny cubes rather than ground. Ground cooked meat has a pasty consistency that seems to rob it of all flavour. A croquette mixture should be made the day before, if possible, so that it will be easy to shape. The croquettes should be shaped and breaded, then stored in the refrigerator several hours before dinner. Cold croquettes will be less likely to break apart when frying.

Serves 6.

4 tablespoons butter or vegetable fat
4 tablespoons flour
1 cup hot milk
2 cups cubed cooked lamb
2 cups cooked rice, cooled
2 eggs
3 tablespoons finely chopped scallions
Salt—pepper
1 cup bread crumbs
1 can undiluted cream of asparagus soup
1 teaspoon curry powder
½ cup milk

Melt fat in a saucepan. Remove from flame. Stir in the flour. Gradually stir in the 1 cup hot milk.

Add the lamb, the rice and 1 egg slightly beaten. Add the scallions and salt and pepper to taste. Stir very well.

Put the mixture in the top part of a double boiler over simmering water. Cook, stirring occasionally, about 30 minutes. Transfer to a platter or baking dish. Store in refrigerator 6 to 8 hours or overnight if possible.

Shape mixture into croquettes, cylinder-or cone-shaped.

Beat 1 egg well. Add 2 tablespoons water and beat well. Dip croquettes in bread crumbs, then in beaten egg and again in bread crumbs. Fry in deep fat heated to 370 degrees or hot enough to brown a cube of day-old bread in 60 seconds.

To make curry sauce mix the soup, curry powder and 1-3 cup milk. Heat but do not boil.

Money Troubles ShadowPeerage For Young Pair

London (AP)—The girl with soft red hair potters around the kitchen in her duplex, making lunch sandwiches for her young husband, a radio engineer at $50 a week.

She looks like any other suburban English housewife, which is what she likes to be. But fate has made the girl who was just a plain wendy Bell a year ago at once a peeress and a girl with a million dollar headache.

When she was married in the village church at Lockham last year her husband was plain Mr. Arthur Liddell. A month after the marriage an uncle died, and he became the eighth Baron Ravensworth. Wendy, 25, became a baroness.

Get Another Shock

This spring came another shock. Although the title is genuine, the wealth is not. Arthur had been left a gross estate of £400,000 pounds, or about $1,-127,000. Almost half the legacy is in nearly worthless real estate, including a run-down old castle at Gateshead owned by trustees.

Various duties and legacies totalled £267,496 ($802,488). And he must be paid £5,000 ($15,000) personal estate which totalled only £156,219 ($492,657). So the young baron and baroness are a lot worse off financially than if they had never been born.

Despite this, letters have poured into their home from all parts of England asking for slices of the "fortune." It got so bad that their solicitor gave a statement to the press asking that no further references be made suggesting that he had inherited a fortune.

"The executors are having great difficulty with persons mentioned as legatees in the will," said the solicitor's letter. "And feel that Lord and Lady Ravensworth would be allowed to meet their problems without further publicity."

Meanwhile Wendy, or Lady Ravensworth, is more concerned with making up Arthur's mild-day lunch than with being a baroness. Neither she nor her husband use the title, and she lives up with the rest of her neighbors for the weekly meat ration. Arthur Baron Ravensworth, has no intention of quitting his job as an engineer with the B.B.C.

Beauty Care of Your Hands

Something new in the hand cream line is a tinted cream that will match your skin tone. Available in five shades, it leaves the skin smooth, soft.

By HELEN FOLLETT

WORK and neglect will put the prettiest, softest hands out of form. Women who indulge in outdoor sports; who not only run the family bus, but often wash it and clean its interior; women who do gardening or pound a typewriter; those who do housework, all these will suffer from lack of punishment. It is not enough to keep them clean with soap and water. They must have the consolation of frequent applications of soothing lotions all the year round, if they must be creamed like all get out at least once a week.

If the skin looks drawn after soap is used, try another brand. What you are using may be good for the average hide, but yours may be extra sensitive, need even blander product. Sometimes it is a good plan to rub in a cream before using soap and water. If there are deep lines in the knuckles—as happens to demon gardeners—add a little yellow cornmeal to the suds. The tiny kernels will dig out grime, the starchy content will heal the sensitive flesh.

Gala Evening

When togging up for the gala evening or the bridge game it is a neat idea to rub a little cream into the backs of the hands. The hands will appear soft and velvety-white, be a beautiful background for perfectly-groomed nails and polished nails and for whatever jewelry you are sporting.

While we are on the subject, a word about elbows. Do you ever take a bird's eye view of yours? Probably not. Few women do. If they appear dingy — and they often get that way if one wears silk blouses that friction the skin —cut a lemon in two, cup your elbows in them, rub round and round.

The skin on the arm hinges is coarser than elsewhere on the arms and that is why a little cream now and then won't do a bit of harm but will do a lot of good. Another beauty task to add to your list!

CAMPBELLFORD

Council Completes Heavy Agenda At Meeting

Campbellford ratepayers for refinishing [illegible] Memorial Arena received notice at the Monday evening meeting of the Campbellford Town Council, and the tender of Mr. Walter Jones of Campbellford at $100 was accepted. This will entirely refinish the present floor and preserve its appearance.

All members of the council were on hand for the May meeting in the council chambers with Mayor J. E. Aylsworth in the chair. A communication from the public school board stated they did not see any way in which they could reduce their expenditures for the coming year, and a request was made for an increased operating cost. Council had previously requested the board to reduce spending to the 1951 basis.

To Bar Part of Sewer

Arthur Collette addressed council re putting a sewer into a property he had recently purchased on Booth Street. The sewer in this instance is to run from the opposite side of the street to Mr. Collette's property, and council agreed to bring the sewer to the centre of the roadway and Mr. Collette could take it from there on to his property at his own expense.

The matter of damage to town streets caused by digging and filling in sewer excavations was brought to light, and a couple of instances named, where persons have used a backhoe for the sewer excavation and automatic digging machines for digging the trenches. These machinery, ripping and twisting on the pavement has in some cases resulted in considerable damage to the pavement. Also, when the trench is being filled, the pavement is "built up" for a considerable distance on each side of the excavation and this is thought to be unnecessary. The permit that is issued for work of this kind stipulates that the holder of the permit is responsible for any damage to the street, and this is going to be investigated. The chairman of the road and bridge committee was instructed to notify the town foreman to personally supervise the laying and back-filling in future operations. The back-filling is to be done by hand and not by a bulldozer.

Reports on Insurance

Councillor MacMillan, chairman of the Property committee made his report on insurance carried on most of the town properties, and it showed that present insurance is inadequate. Mr. MacMillan recommended increased insurance in most cases. The local hospital carries $2,500 on property and $500 on contents. This should be increased to $5,000 on property and $2,500 on contents according to the recommendation. The building occupied by the Water and Light Commission carries $2,000 and this should be $5,000. The fire hall carries $2,000 on property and council is the contents insured for $1,000. This should be increased to $5,000 on property and $2,500 on contents. The fire truck carries public liability and property damage in sufficient amount, also collision, but no fire or theft. Council decided that they did not want any citizen would steal the fire truck, and that it was also unlikely to be destroyed by fire, so the insurance carried would be dispensed with. The report also recommended that insurance be carried on the contents of the town offices and also on the parts and staff of the hospital. The matter of the insurance on these was left until after the budget is in and the tax rate about to be set.

Survey Power to Act

The matter of erecting the street name signs was left with the police committee with power to act. A suggestion from Councillor Rutherford that the steel post be filled with cement before they were erected was deemed advisable and this matter was left with the committee.

On the advice of the town solicitor, council endorsed a suggestion from the council of the town of Goderich regarding the equalization of assessment. The practice of including the business assessment for county purposes was thought unfair as business properties were in reality being taxed twice, while farms were taxed only once. The request asked that council endorse a petition to the provincial legislature that Section 96 of the Assessment Act be amended by deleting the words "business assessment" from the Act.

Setting of Rate Held Up

The setting of the 1951 tax rate will be held up for a week or so until council secures information from the Municipal Board as to what they can do with their accumulated surplus. The town also wishes to know if the Public School Board has any surplus, and if so if it can be used to reduce the current outlay for expenditures. It is hoped to be able to hold the present tax rate by using a portion of its accumulated surplus. As soon as the information is received a meeting of council will be called at which the new tax rate will be set.

Permission was granted to the High School Area Board to use the council chambers for their meeting on June 1.

Clerk J. F. McGregor was instructed to get in touch with a Norwood firm to secure a price on placing the names of approximately 26 men on the war memorial. These are men who were killed in action in World War II.

By-laws for the remaining six certain town streets, and also for changing the days of nomination and election in the town is being read and passed.

Nomination day will now be the last Monday of November and election day will be the first Monday in December, which is one month earlier than previously.

Good Paint Brushes Will be Scarce Soon

By FORBES RHUDE
(Canadian Press Business Editor)

If you own a good paint brush, take care of it, because it may be hard to replace, says the Canadian Paint, Varnish and Lacquer Association.

The reason: a good brush will contain a large percentage of Chinese hog bristles, and Chinese sources which normally supply 80 per cent of the world's requirements have dried up. In addition the paint association gives us the following explanation:

"It takes a Chinese hog an entire lifetime to grow enough bristles for one good paint brush, and each year some 12,000,000 hogs are called upon to make the necessary sacrifice."

The scarcity of bristles has led the National Production Authority in the United States to limit the uses of present supplies and, since Canadian manufacturers obtain their bristles through the United States, the order will be felt here.

Hints on Proper Care

The association gives the following advice for the care of your present brush:

When using oil paints, the brush may be wiped off and suspended in linseed oil. It is important that the bristles do not touch the bottom of the container; otherwise they will become bent.

Varnish or enamel brushes may be kept in linseed oil or varnish but don't leave them in it too long; limit to overnight, or 48 hours at the most. Be sure to wipe off all the oil before using again. When varnish accidentally dries or hardens on a brush, it may be loosened and removed with a strong solvent or paint remover.

If the brush is not to be used for some time, it should be cleaned with a solvent such as turpentine, or some good commercial solvent. Then give it a good washing with mild soap or water. Squeeze the excess water and wrap the bristles in paper so that the original shape will be retained.

Brushes used for lacquers should be cleaned with lacquer thinner, brushes used for shellac or alcohol stain, should be cleaned in alcohol. Brushes used for water paints should be cleaned in water.

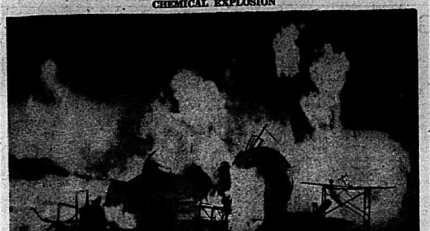
NEW LABORATORY

Kenora, Ont. — (CP) — A new provincial laboratory here will provide gasoline for a wide area of northwestern Ontario in testing samples of blood, milk and water submitted for analysis. Previously such samples were sent either to Winnipeg or Fort William.

CHEMICAL EXPLOSION



Explosion of a butadiene tank at the Polymer synthetic rubber plant at Sarnia, Ont., shook Western Ontario for miles and caused unestimated damage in a fire at the plant. Belleville Motor Car Co. Opens Fine New Garage

A. C. "Al" Reynolds, Owner, Operator Is Well-Known

Presenting a definitely "new look" in automotive sales and service, the new plant of the Belleville Motor Car Company Ltd., 14 Bridge Street, West, will be officially opened to the public on Friday.

On Friday and Saturday of this week the management of the company and staff will hold "open house" to Belleville and district residents. All will be welcomed to visit the plant and see for themselves the auto sales and servicing facilities of this well-known local automobile firm.

During the two days of "open house" attendance door prizes will be given away free. Included is a $25 credit certificate for services either at the Belleville Motor Car Company Ltd. garage or at their new Supertest service station adjoining the property on Coleman Street. Prizes will be drawn for at 11 o'clock Saturday evening.

Will Broadcast from Rooms

Also as part of the opening day program the regular radio program of the automotive company will be broadcast from the showroom on Friday evening from 7:00 to 7:15, while there will be an additional radio program broadcast from the showroom on the same evening from 7:45 to 8:00 o'clock.

Conveniently located only one block from the downtown shopping district, the new garage of the automotive firm is the only downtown garage on the No. 2 highway route. The modern and impressive appearing showroom faces on Bridge Street, while the service station adjoins the garage property on Coleman Street. Included is an up-to-date used car lot.

Can Obtain Model of Choice

The Belleville Motor Car Company Ltd. has the Belleville franchise for Mercury-Lincoln-Meteor affording potential customers the model of their choice in any price range. Their sales volume in new cars with the many trade-ins also assures a constant and complete selection of popular makes and models of used cars.

Mercury trucks, one of the automotive industry's popular models, are also sold. Here also there is a good selection of used trucks available.

Owner of Belleville Motor Car Company Ltd. is A. C. "Al" Reynolds, well known in local automotive circles. Following a three-year lapse in operation during the war years, the company was re-organized in 1945 and the following year was appointed the Mercury-Lincoln-Meteor dealer for Belleville. Mrs. Reynolds, popularly known as "Sally" to a wide clientele of customers, is vice-president of the company and acts as secretary-treasurer and office supervisor.

Expansion Rapid

Since its re-organization less than six years ago the expansion of the firm has been rapid. Then there was a staff of but six employees. Today there is a full-time staff of 29.

The new Bridge Street addition to the company's plant is of block and brick construction with measurements of 103 by 50 feet. It provides accommodation for the showroom with its wide expanse of windows; for general offices and private offices for the manager and auto sales staff, and also for the stockroom. On the second floor fine office space is provided for the London Life Insurance Company, and also for the Department of Health, Province of Ontario Chest Clinic.

Spared No Efforts

The White Lumber and Construction Company as general contractors for the new building spared no effort in completing the fine appointments of the new structure. First, it is every bit the showplace intended, and at the same time convenience and efficiency for business operation were not forgotten.

Interior of the new structure is of varnished plywood on the walls with acoustic tile ceilings. Floor of the showroom is terrazzo with central design. Inlaid tiles cover the floor of the offices and main corridor. It is one of the best lighted buildings in the city with fluorescent lamps augmenting wide expanse of windows in the showroom. The showroom adequately displays three autos.

Office personnel, besides Mr. and Mrs. Reynolds include Jim Rutherford, George Bongard and Robt. Noyes.

Parts Department Provided

Directly across a central corridor running parallel to the general office counter is the parts department, which is a major phase of the business. It is new and modern in design and carries the largest stock of genuine Ford parts and accessories for all Ford products in Eastern Ontario, One of the features of this department is its availability to the public and this itself has aided in promoting a large volume of both wholesale and retail trade. In charge of the parts department are Les Parks, Leonard Graham and Vince Muldoon.

Garage Re-designed

With the construction of the new building the former garage quarters have been completely re-designed and the 5,000 feet of floor space provides adequate accommodation for personnel and for the various pieces of technical auto servicing equipment.

Here in the service garage all types of service ranging from motor tune-up, to fender bumping and front end alignment is featured in separate departments. The motor tune-up section is equipped with the latest diagnostic and test equipment assuring efficient and precision workmanship. In the general repair section all types of mechanical repairs to all makes of autos and trucks are carried out.

Increased door height clearance in the service department allows accommodation for all types of large trucks or transports. The garage is well lighted and painted with special emphasis being placed on cleanliness.

Equipment of "Bear" Type

Front end alignment and frame straightening equipment at the garage is the "Bear" type, recognized as the best by many auto manufacturers. This equipment is conveniently located with a separate entrance provided. The equipment is recessed to allow for a level drive-in and easier accessibility. Wheel balancing is also featured in this department.

The body and fender department is equipped with the latest time saving tools. Steam cleaning of underparts and undercoating service is also offered.

Head of the service department is Vincent Wringe, service manager. Mechanics include Doug. McBride, Lloyd Landers, Gordon Wright, Norman Crozier, Ed. Reid, Bill Sallans, Ross Mason, Stan Bronnick and Del Tarditf.

Modern Service Station

The Belleville Motor Car Company Ltd. also features a new and modern Supertest service station which was recently opened. This is owned and operated by the company and is completely equipped with locally manufactured Stewart-Warner greasing equipment . . . the choice of the industry. Separate equipment is maintained for spark plug testing, and the latest type fast and slow battery charging is offered, as well as a tire changing and repair department.

Manager of the new service station is Elwood Kerrulah, with helpers being Johnny Sanford and Maurice "Steve" Sine. Supertest gasoline and oils are handled as well as Dominion tires and tubes.

With an eye to providing the type of service wanted and demanded by the public, all three phases of the business — parts, service and service station — will remain open during the evening hours. The parts department will be open for business from 8:00 a.m. until 10:00 p.m.; the service department will be open from 8:00 until 11 p.m., and the service station from 7:00 a.m. until 8:00 in the evening.

The genial service manager at the garage is Vince Wringe. Vince takes down the work orders and assigns the mechanic for the job. He is shown here at his desk making out a customer's work order.

The general repair shop at Belleville Motor Car Company Ltd is well lighted and ventilated making for ideal working conditions for staff members. With over 5,000 square feet of floor space the department is conveniently arranged and capable mechanics are ready to do all kinds of general repairs to all makes of autos or trucks. Reading left to right the mechanics are Ed. Reid, Del Tarditf, Bill Sallans, Gordon Wright, and Doug McBride.

Picturesque Windmills Give Way to Electric Power

By Ted Townsend, in the Kingston (N.Y.) Observer)

We used to think the windmill just outside the kitchen door was about the tallest thing in the world. At that time we hadn't heard of the Empire State Building and there were no tall white concrete silos on the skyline in the North Country.

When the hired man climbed the ladder up the side to oil the machinery up where the wheel turned in the wind, we thought he was almost the best steeplejack in those parts.

One day, about the time we got our first pair of long pants, (other than overalls), my uncle said, "The windmill is sticking, do you want to go up to the top and oil the wheel?"

Something stuck in my throat for I'd much rather climb keeping one foot on the ground, but I swallowed, and then, not daring to speak, I reached for the oil can.

* * *

There were some metal straps extending either side of one of the corner braces, and up I went, hoping my uncle wouldn't hear my knees knocking together. At the top just below the big wheel was a small platform, and I hung on tightly with one hand while I oiled the mechanism. The wheel was not in motion, for the "tail-piece" had been fastened at right angles by means of a long wire reaching to the ground. After oiling the "mill," I took courage and glanced off across the fields. It was a pretty sight from atop the mill.

* * *

Windmills, according to the encyclopedia, are "contrivances which utilize the energy embodied movements of the atmosphere and develop power and perform work."

We can say it a lot simpler than that. When the wind blew steadily we had the windmill operating and a long wooden shaft would move up and down with the "swings" revolving at the top down into the well far below ground. Water was pumped into a tank in the attic, so we were able to have water from a faucet, instead of using the old hand pump at the kitchen sink.

We would have a week or so with no wind, and no wheels turning. Then we had to take time out to disconnect the long shaft on the mill and pump by hand to get enough water in the tank for household use.

* * *

Sometimes in winter, the tank would develop a leak, especially if the temperature dropped to zero and the water froze. And having water dripping down through the ceiling was one thing the family did not enjoy. My aunt had an eloquent speech she could use on such occasions.

There are two types of windmills, one being four wooden vanes or wings covered with canvas sails. This is the type used in Europe, and the picture of Holland would not be complete without at least one of these great wheels with canvas sails alongside a canal. The mills were also used for grinding grain, as well as keeping the water off the land.

The more modern type, which used to be a landmark throughout this section, is smaller and comprises a wheel with several metal vanes. These were common on farms and were used primarily for pumping water.

* * *

Windmills designed along the lines of an airplane propellor have been used to a limited extent for generation. One is on top of a New Hampshire mountain where a steady wind sometimes puffs in at the rate of 70 miles an hour. Electricity is generated for lights and heat in a mountain cabin.

A few years back the "twenty-four-hour-a-day" hired man came to the majority of farms in Central New York, and the picturesque windmill stepped into the background. Electricity hooked up with a small motor and pump furnished all the water that could be used, every hour of the day, in place of the erratic action of the windmill.

With the new pumps it was also possible to get pressure by use of a small tank in the attic, thus eliminating a bulky tank in the attic which might mean trouble, especially if the water froze in winter. So the metal towers topped by a wheel with metal vanes have been gradually disappearing until today their use is the exception rather than the rule. A few are still in operation. Some are kept as a sort of "recollection of by-gone days."

* * *

The mill over in Ontario County that we used to think was the tallest in the world, has disappeared, and two electric pumps are used. One brings water into the kitchen from the well below where the mill used to stand, and the second pumps rainwater from the cisterns in the cellar.

The big windstorm last Thanksgiving took down at least three windmills that we used to see on the horizon.

We miss the towers with whirling wheels that used to stand adjacent to the house or barn, but their disappearance is just another step in making life a little easier in our rural areas.

We can't see the new "hired man" that comes through a wire, but he is on the job all the time.

Vietnam Populace Slow To Develop New Independence

Saigon — (Reuters) — Vietnamese generally are showing little enthusiasm for the state's newly won independence within the French union. After four years of war and devastation, the average Vietnamese wants only to be left alone to grow his rice and fish at a good price.

The attitude of the masses toward nationalism in the Franco-Vietnamese occupied areas of Indo-China is in sharp contrast with that in many other parts of Asia which have won Independence.

The toll of the prolonged war between the French union forces and the communist-led Vietminh forces has been as much responsible for the "pacification" of the country as the existence of the hundreds of army outposts that dot the vast expanse of rice-fields.

State of Administration

Neutral observers here describe the Vietnam government as a state administration rather than government. It has so far always been "hired and fired" by the Annamite Emperor, Bao Dai, the official head of state.

But now those in and around his "administration" are anxious to change this situation.

According to usually reliable sources, three factors have prevented the Vietminh — which wants complete independence from France and is getting military aid from China to fight for it — from mounting a new offensive.

1. They need time to train and equip reinforcements in southern China to replace their heavy losses in their last attack.

2. French Hell-Cat and King Cobra fighter-bombers are playing havoc with their military concentrations and disrupting their difficult Tonkin mountain communication lines.

3. French union forces are expanding and becoming better equipped with American weapons, setting a tougher problem for Vietminh strategists.

Spring Strategy

Further attacks this spring will undoubtedly again be aimed at French Tonkin Delta defences. If the Vietminh cannot get through this year, some French officials believe they will become more and more dependent upon China. For the Tonkin Delta is their prospective reservoir of men and goods.

They also believe that the Vietminh's communist leader, Ho Chi-Minh, will find it more difficult to retain Asian sympathy as a nationalist if he is forced to rely more and more upon China.

For these reasons, this year appears the appropriate time for the French-sponsored Vietnam state to get on with political reforms and convince the rest of Asia that it is not just a "French puppet state."

France gave Vietnam this lead last December when she signed conventions extending Vietnam's self-governing powers to complete internal independence.

Most neutral observers consider that the attitude and activity of French officials in Vietnam since then indicate that France meant what she said in the conventions. But the Vietnamese have been slow so far in taking up where France left off.

N.Z. Government Plans Big Outlay on Timber Scheme

Auckland (CP) — The New Zealand government has announced conditions under which it seeks the co-operation of private enterprise in developing a vast pulp, paper, newsprint and timber project in the north island. It will be the largest industrial undertaking in the Dominion's history.

The total cost of the scheme in its initial phase will be about $82,000,000, but of this $41,000,000 will be spent by the government in providing railways, a deep-water port electric power and housing.

Co-operative Enterprise

The government is asking private enterprise to take over the installing and operation of the pulp, paper and timber project, which will cost another $41,000,000. It is also prepared to take 15 percent of the capital, but the rest will be left to outside sources, which will have direction and management of the enterprise.

It is anticipated that a large proportion of the capital will have to come from abroad, as will much of the management and skilled labor. Proposals for taking part in the scheme must reach the government by Nov. 1. Overseas investors will be permitted to transfer net profits from the country each year.

The proposal is based on the Kaingaroa state forest, the biggest man-made forest in the world, now nearing maturity over an area of 260,000 acres near Lake Taupo. The organization operating the pulp and paper plant will obtain the right to buy from the government 23,000,000 cubic feet of timber annually for 75 years. A further 5,000,000 cubic feet can be purchased if desired.

"It is estimated that the possible annual yield from the "working circle" around the mill area is 30,000,000 cubic feet annually. It is believed that nowhere else in the world is such a large wood supply concentrated within so short a radius of the site of the plant. The average haul to the plant will be less than 20 miles.

Suitable For Pulp

The timber, mainly Californian pine, Douglas fir, Corsican pine, and Ponderosa pine, has been tested in Australia and the United States. All four pines proved suitable for the production of sulphate pulp, and the Californian type produced newsprint with only minor short-comings expected to be corrected in commercial production.

It is anticipated that the project when in full operation will supply a substantial portion of the pulp and newsprint needs of Australia and New Zealand. Production for sale is estimated at 70,000,000 board feet of sawn timber a year, 300,000 long tons of newsprint, 10,000 long tons of printing and writing papers and 25,000 long tons of sulphate pulp.

The government considers that by operating the project as an integrated pulp, paper and timber plant, all the products will be able to compete at world prices in the Australian and New Zealand markets.

As the public works side, the government proposes to build about 42 miles of railway to link Murupara, which will be the centre of the scheme, to the main railway system. It will also develop a deep water port at Mount Maunganui, on the east coast. The rail haul from Murupara to Mount Maunganui will be only 90 miles.

Murupara is expected to develop into a town of 10,000 people. The government will undertake extensive electric power reticulation and will build over 1,000 houses for renting to employees of the pulp and paper project and its own forestry employees. It will assist in the immigration of skilled workers if the purchaser wishes to bring them to New Zealand.

Make Mind a Blank Good Sleep Recipe

Montreal, (CP)—The trick of getting a good night's sleep involves leaving your mind a blank—not by counting sheep—says Dr. Norman Viner, an authority on the subject.

Some reasons for lack of sleep are unavoidable such as money problems, family problems, actual miseries of the day or a guilty conscience.

Another way to miss your beauty sleep and sit up all night is to chase sleep, says Dr. Viner, and a great many people do.

Most of the differences against sleep are normal. Only where the lack of it is due to causes such as mental or physical disease does it need to be treated as medical thing.

If a person has not been impressed by the suggestion of the ill-effects of coffee before bedtime, a cup or two will not hurt, he said.

Be careful of sedative drugs, Dr. Viner warns. They may be useful servants, "but often they turn out to be very bad masters." Too many people rely on them until they cannot do without them.

If you want your beauty sleep have a clear conscience and a blank mind—and a comfortable bed.

Unusual Search Reveals Clever African Artist

Port Elizabeth, South Africa, (CP)—The story of a African who changed the whole course of an industry in which he was once a laborer was told at the Port Elizabeth Agricultural show by an official of the company.

Two years ago 30-year-old Freddie Mputing, an African from the eastern Transvaal, was instrumental in bringing about a radical change in the company's output.

Workmen at the receiving end of a long kiln in which clay insulators were baked from time to time found clay animals hidden under the insulators. Unaware of their real artistic worth they often destroyed them.

One day a Johannesburg artist, Mrs. Marjorie Sangster, saw one of the figures and immediately recognized its value. The unknown artist has hitherto only been sought for the purpose of a reprimand for using company materials and time.

Narrowing The Search

The search was then instigated for another purpose, and was narrowed down to 20 Africans who were placed in a row and given clay to model.

The natural artist, Freddie, although unwilling to disclose his name because he thought he would be punished was unable to hide his talent and modelled a perfect figure.

Freddie's talents were given free rein, and he was set to the work he loved. His models of animals, detailed with acute observation, were marketed and instantly created a demand.

Expansion in the ceramic field was started. Five potters were brought from Italy, Holland and England, and the output of glazed ware has reached about 3,000 items a day.

Freddie, who uses no tools but his hands and has had neither lessons nor guidance, continues to model his individualistic figures and critics predict a great future for him.

DOCK WORKERS BACK

Liverpool, May 9—(Reuters)—Four hundred dock workers, who struck over a five-minute change in working hours, went back today.

They stopped work yesterday because the Dock Labor Board tightening ordered them to report five minutes earlier than usual. due to begin.

The neighboring Birkenhead docks, where 1,00 men came out for the same reason yesterday, were still idle. The dockers said they were locked out when they turned up at the regular time.

Claim Extra Pay For Illegal Jobs

Wellington, N.Z., (CP) — New Zealand's extraordinary liquor laws, under which hotels close at 6 p.m. but many carry on illegally for many hours later, have led to the curious situation on the hotelworkers' union making a formal claim for extra pay for men engaged in illegal sales.

The Union put forward demands for an extra $6 a week for men employed as "droppers" "look-out men" and others engaged in after-hour trading. The claim was made at a conciliation council meeting—a tribunal at which a government-appointed chairman attempts to bring agreement between conflicting claims on wages and conditions by employers and employees.

It was explained that "droppers" are men who sell parcels of beer from the doorways of hotels to customers waiting in cars or taxis outside. Duties of "look-out men" are to watch for the police.

The union further asked that a clause be written into the award stating that "no person shall be employed in these duties "only where an agreement exists between the employer and the union giving the men protection from the consequences of any breach of the licensing act."

Employers' representatives strongly objected to the claims, stating that the demands "constitute an intolerable slur on the majority of hotelkeepers, who conduct their business in a law-abiding manner."

Union officials replied that they were prepared to name hotels at which such men were employed. They said it was regrettable that prices paid for hotels made such after-hour trading necessary.

BUYERS' MARKET

Edmonton — (CP) — Able Seaman Gerry Sinclair, on leave after duty with the Canadian Navy in Korean waters, said Hong Kong is the shoppers' paradise of the Orient. With no taxes there, top quality British tweed suits were $35 and good wrist watches $7.

Ironing out dented fenders and making crushed auto bodies as good as new is a repair service featured at the Belleville Motor Car Company Ltd. garage. The department is completely and modernly equipped to take care of all types of body and fender repairs. Here two members of the department, Ross Mason and Stan Brogick, work on a car.

Waist, Wrist Films Radium Safeguards

Toronto, (CP)—Specially treated films from Chalk River laboratories are among the most important protections of Dunlap Cancer Clinic workers against deadly radium rays.

Workers at the Toronto clinic who handle radium now wear a strip on this film at their waist, to ascertain the amount of radiation they are receiving. It comes from the Chalk River plant, the National Research Council, diation Hazards Control Board of

At the end of each week the film is returned to Chalk river for examination.

As the nurse handling the needles gets more radiation than the doctor who only has to insert it in the patient, she wears a film bracelet at her wrist as well as at the waist.

Nurses are only permitted to do the actual handling of radium for two-month periods. Then they are put off this work for four months.

At the Dunlap clinic the ne are kept in a massive lead and are filed according to the amount of radium they contain. By operating a dial the nurse can remove the desired needle.

Nurses and doctors don't wear gloves when handling radium as there is no glove that is workable that is not penetrated by the rays. Long forceps are used to hold the needles which are carried back and forth to the treatment rooms in lead cases on little carriers.

1,000 Enlisted In 27th Brigade 2,292 Applications

Ottawa, May 10 (CP) — Recruiting for the 27th Brigade destined for European service, has swung into high gear with nearly 1,000 men enlisted, it was announced today.

Up to 4 p.m. yesterday, the number of personnel actually attested stood at 932, while another 2,325 applications were being dealt with.

This included 648 men enlisted in the third day of the campaign, which opened Monday, and 534 third-day applications. However, it did not include men enlisted during the third day in Quebec command, nor the number who applied during the third day in eastern command, since these figures are not yet available.

Recruiting box-score to date:

Eastern Command—189 enrolments and 383 applications being processed.

Quebec Command—48 enrolments, 697 applications.

State Secretary Not Leaving Says Truman

Washington, May 10 (AP) — President Truman said today there is no foundation in fact to reports that State Secretary Dean Acheson may leave office within days.

Truman also told a press conference reports he will recall William O'Dwyer as ambassador to Mexico likewise are rumors.

The questing of Acheson's future in the administration was raised by a reporter who told Truman there had been reports Acheson was getting out.

Truman's attention was called then to published stories that former New York Mayor O'Dwyer would be recalled from Mexico City as the aftermath of the Senate Crime Investigating committee's report.

The crime committee's report was highly critical of O'Dwyer, saying he had failed to combat crime vigorously while mayor.

Gun Carrier, Car Collide Within 10 Feet of Train

Toronto, May 10 — (CP) — A Bren gun carrier and an automobile collided Wednesday within 10 feet of a speeding train at a suburban Alderwood level-crossing. As they came to rest, the train roared by, missing both by inches.

In the car were five Toronto area women, bodied for a shower at Oakville, 20 miles west of here. Two, Mrs. C. E. McWilliam and Mrs. Peter Ratcliffe, were taken to hospital with leg and rib injuries. The others, who escaped with a shaking up, were Mrs. R. Love, Miss E. Ward and Mrs. E. Doyle.

Sgt. R. Alexander of Toronto, driver of the gun carrier, said that, just as his vehicle crossed the rails, one of its treads stuck, throwing the carrier into the path of the car.

Warships of Four Navies Help In Saving Life

Tokyo, May 10—(AP)—Naval Lieutenant Michael Barrow of Toronto, stricken with acute appendicitis during operations off Korea, probably owes his life to the combined efforts of warships of four navies.

Barrow was stricken on the Canadian destroyer Huron during a carrier offensive. A navy release today said the other ships that helped out were the British light fleet carrier Glory, the United States light carrier Bataan and the Australian destroyer Warramunga.

Authorities released this story: Barrow became ill while the Huron was in a destroyer screen for the Glory. The Huron's doctor, Surgeon Lt. William Cooke of Toronto recommended Barrow's removal to the Glory, where better facilities were available.

A rigging was set up and the patient sent across in a stretcher to the Glory. There, Surgeon-Lieut. J. B. Crawford of London operated successfully, but two days later Barrow suffered a relapse. He became dangerously ill.

The Glory's principal medical officer, Surgeon-Cmdr. J. E. Mitchell, flew in a helicopter to the Bataan for consultation with Lieut.-C. McBride of the U.S. Army Medical Corps.

They decided to rush Barrow to hospital ashore.

Again Barrow was placed in a stretcher. This time he was transferred to the Warramunga. The Australian destroyer proceeded to the base at full speed, and Barrow was removed to the army hospital.

'Operation Wolf' Tough Battle But Police Win

Sarnia, Ont., May 9—(CP)—"Operation Wolf" was a tough battle, but the police finally won.

Mrs. Henry Hilts of R.R. No. 1, Sarnia started it all. She reported that "a funny looking dog" was killing her chickens and biting their heads off "with one snap."

Constable Thomas Shields of the provincial police, with revolver in hand, discovered the intruder was a wolf. He stalked for it for three hours across field and dale, but the wolf was too elusive. Then Shields got a rifle and scored a dead hit.

The grey animal was five feet long and weighed 80 pounds.

Patient Quartet Picketing Year At B.C. Plant

Vancouver, May 10 — (CP) — Four weary pickets yesterday greeted an interviewer in the cramped trailer they have made their home for a year and said they have seen a settlement will be reached soon.

They have been picketing since May 1 last year when 18 men walked off the job at the Amalgamated Electric Corporation, Ltd., workings here.

The men, members of the United Steelworkers of America (C. I. O. - C. C. L.), struck over wages and working conditions, and to the patient quartet went the job of maintaining a round-the-clock picket line around the plant.

"That means seven days a week, 24 hours a day," said one of them, Cliff Walker.

So they moved into a six-by-four-foot trailer parked alongside the plant and started picketing — and housekeeping.

Ewart Orr, the union's business agent, said: "We are quite hopeful of a settlement. Nobody likes — a strike, but, if necessary, we'll keep it going indefinitely.

Plague Bacteria Found In Gophers Twelve Year Hunt

He catches rats, which with the fleas that infest them, apparently even today in British Columbia carry germs of the "Black Death," the disease that once killed a quarter of Europe's population.

Dave is on a scientific team called the Rodent Plague Survey. For 12 years this group has combed British Columbia's rat population in search of the plague germ.

Last summer they found the first, but refused to say where. They announced merely that the plague bacteria had been identified in the flesh of a gopher "trapped somewhere in the interior."

They said this was not a reason for alarm, but indicated the need of caution and continued research.

The provincial government took over the survey work last year. The research group is now under the department of Claude R. Stonehouse, chief sanitary inspector.

From May to September he tours the interior trapping rats and shooting gophers. He kills the animals with cyanide gas, thus immobilizing their fleas at the same time. Then he combs the rodents' hair for the fleas and dissects the body for tissues to be studied.

He has been inoculated against the plague germ.

"I guess this is one of the most peculiar missing-persons hunt yet," Davis said. "It often seems like looking for a needle in a haystack."

Authorities say they expect there never will be a recurrence of the dread disease on the scale of the great London outbreak in the seventeenth century. Twelve years of research has indicated the plague reservoir is small.

People now are cleaner than those of the Middle Ages and are less likely to be bitten by the germ, authorities say. New drugs can combat the disease and doctors today can recognize plague and isolate cases immediately to forestall an epidemic.

FRANKFORD

Scout F. Stickle Represents Scouts At Naturalists' Course

Frankford—Scout Francis Sticle represented the First Frankford Boy Scout Troop at a week-end naturalists' course, held at Blue Springs, near Guelph. The boys, two from Trenton, one from Batawa, and one from Frankford, left Trenton shortly after noon Saturday, with Commissioner Doug McInnes, arriving at their destination late in the afternoon.

That evening, films were shown on animal and plant life, along with slides. Between each showing, a short talk was given, and discussion took place. The night was spent under canvas.

Next morning, an exploration hike was organized, and each party made notations of their observations along the way. They were well informed by representatives from the University of Toronto, who were studying Nature. The boys all report an excellent week-end.

The weekly Boy Scout meeting was held on the Frankford school grounds. A ball game was enjoyed, following which the Scouts took part in a number of experiments with the compass.

U.N. Can Win Korean War Without Sacrificing Unity Of Free World Says Austin

New Orleans, May 10—(AP)—Warren R. Austin, chief United States delegate to the United Nations, today expressed confidence that the U. N. can win the Korean war without sacrificing the unity of the free world.

Austin did not mention Gen. MacArthur, but his statement apparently was aimed at MacArthur's declaration that the U. S. should carry the fight to red China even if it means going it alone.

In a prepared speech, Austin said political and military considerations are so closely linked in the field of collective security that it is impossible to separate them.

He cited the U. N. victory in Greece as an example of how military and political considerations must be taken together. There, too, communist troops had operated from a "privileged sanctuary," but the U. N.'s unity of purpose had forced the communists to withdraw.

"No cease-fire arrangements were made," he said, "no truce agreements reached, no treaties signed. But, militarily and politically, communist imperialism was defeated. Militarily and politically the United Nations was victorious."

He concluded that political forces now at work in communist China may bring the same results.

Diefenbaker Says CNR Not Worker Should be Tried

Prince George, B.C., May 10—(CP) —The manslaughter trial of Alfred John Atherton opened yesterday with the suggestion by his defence counsel that perhaps the Canadian National Railways should be facing prosecution.

Atherton, 22-year-old telegrapher, was charged following the Canoe River train wreck in British Columbia last Nov. 21, in which 11 lives were lost when two trains collided.

He is alleged to have relayed a message incorrectly, resulting in the crash, and is charged in the death of Frederick Jaskunda, fireman aboard the troop train involved.

While the defence lawyer, John Diefenbaker, was cross-examining a witness, R. E. Perdue, Deputy Attorney-General, objected to searching questions regarding use of wooden cars, saying: "The CNR is not on trial it is the poor devil in the box."

Mr. Diefenbaker replied: "Perhaps the CNR should be."

Truman Plays Short Concert On Gift Piano

Washington, May 10 (CP) — President Truman last night obligingly rendered a tune or two on a "United Nations" piano presented to him by the country's leading piano manufacturers.

After his brief informal concert —light classics and popular tunes —he dashed off a short lecture on music that seemed sure to alienate two classes of voters.

Boogie-Woogie he scored as "noise" comparable with the "daubs they call art these days." And he said he is bored by "high-hat" opera, although he sometimes has to attend it for social purposes.

The piano, specially constructed of materials from several countries in the U.N., was presented as a highlight of National Music Week.

When one of the official committee remarked that Truman was the first president to be an accomplished musician, Truman said:

"There are some people in the country who think (it) would have been better off if I had gone ahead and become a professional musician."

Falling Scenery Disrupts Ballet

London, May 10—(AP)—Those hurried little steps across the stage were not part of the Sadler's Wells ballet performance last night. It was just that the scenery kept falling down.

For 10 long minutes two ballet soloists at the Royal Opera House acted back and forth across the stage as if it were part of the performance of "Les Patineurs"—The Skaters.

The audience gasped at first, then maintained stoic British silence as seven pieces of scenery suddenly began to sway, then came crashing down one by one onto the stage.

Soloists Elena Mossford and Rosemary Lindsay just kept dancing and dodging. Royal Opera House officials explained later that someone had bumped into a pivotal piece of scenery backstage.

BOY FOUND DEAD

Norwalk, Calif., May 10 (AP)—A 10-year-old boy sought for a month was found dead yesterday, locked in an abandoned icebox two blocks from his home. Police said Charles Henry Houghton apparently crawled into the icebox, pulled the door shut behind him, and suffocated.

$4,000 JACKPOT

Chattanooga, Tenn., May 10 (AP) — Merchants have kicked in with a $4,000 jackpot and other prizes for the girl who tells here in 25 words why she would like to be the city's queen for a day. The "other prizes" include a paid-up burial insurance policy, contributed by a funeral home.

30 Show Horses Found Starving In Malton Barn

Toronto, May 10—(CP)—Two veterinaries are today treating 25 to 30 Clydesdale show horses, victims of malnutrition, who were found Wednesday by Toronto Humane Society officials on a farm two miles north of nearby Malton.

Inspector Robert Johnstone of the society said there was no hay or straw in the barn and the horses had been standing in 15 inches of filth.

"It is obviously a case of the horses being neglected all during the winter months," said Col. George Reid, president of the society.

Johnstone said the only reason given by the farmer for neglect was that he was too busy seeding his land. Some of the horses had been exhibited last year at the Royal Winter Fair in Toronto.

CALLOUS DROWNINGS

Brantford, May 10—The Humane society here have started an investigation into the drowning of four police dog puppies. The puppies, about six weeks old, had their tails tied together and had been thrown into the Grand River, Leslie Leivers, president of the society said. Three of the pups were male and one female.

"It was one of the most callous acts brought to the attention of the society here," President Leivers said of the drownings.

A fisherman found the puppies. The tails were so securely tied, Leivers said, that when one of the puppies was lifted from the water all four were lifted.

CELEBRATE DATE OF DEPOSITION

Japan's Emperor Hirohito and his Empress are shown as they acknowledge a "banzai" in their honor from the ceremonial stand in Tokyo during the observance of Japan's constitution day. The Emperor played a major role in the ceremonies honoring an event that stripped him of his former powers. A labor demonstration free-for-all, that ended in the arrest of 35 persons, concluded the days festivities. — Central Press Canadian.

WANTS CONFIDENCE VOTE

Paris, May 10 (AP)—Premier Henri Queuille today asked for another national assembly vote of confidence—his ninth in three weeks—on his plan to hold general elections in June.

He made his request only a few hours after he received an overwhelming 410-to-187 confidence ballot. The vote rejected a communist motion to delay voting on a bill to end the life of the assembly July 4.

The new vote asked by Queuille will be on the bill itself.

MEASLES IN GREENLAND

Copenhagen, May 10 (AP) — An emergency expedition of two doctors and four nurses, taking with them serum, vaccine and 14,000,000 units of penicillin, left today by plane for Greenland to fight a dangerous epidemic of measles.

Several hundred people were already stricken. The Arctic Island's southernmost colony of Julianehaab—with more than 250 of its inhabitants ill—has been placed in quarantine.

Polio Victim Received Quick Cure by Prayer

Melburne, May 10—(Reuters)—The Melborne Argus today published an interview with a 21-year-old poliomyelitis victim who said she received a lightning cure by prayer.

Former nurse Joan Westblade said she felt a movement in the paralyzed muscles on her right side as she prayed before a statue of Our Lady of Fatima April 25.

"I did not dare believe I was cured. Somehow I got up . . .

"When my two sisters saw me walking the three of us cried with joy."

Joan, daughter of a farmer, said she now can do "anything I ever could. I have been riding horses and even doing work on the farm."

The doctor who had been treating her told the Argus: "I am only a doctor. They are things higher than our work. Joan's case was a bad one."

"Three days before her cure she took the irons off her right leg and leg crumpled under the slightest pressure she put on it," her father said.

Russia Agrees to Sell India 50,000 Tons of Wheat To Aid Famine-Stricken Areas

New Delhi, May 10 — (CP) — Prime Minister Nehru told Parliament today that Russia has agreed to sell India 50,000 tons of wheat to help her famine-stricken areas.

He also said India will not trade atomic-energy materials with the United States for wheat sought there.

Nehru said Russian ships already are en route to India with the precious cargoes. The full consignment, bought for cash, would be delivered by the end of June. Russia has offered to supply a total of 500,000 tons.

Nehru was cheered loudly when he expressed his gratitude to the U. S. for "efforts they have made to send food grains." The U. S. Congress has under consideration two bills concerning 2,000,000 tons of wheat.

He said these bills "in our view have no political or discriminatory conditions attached to them, and there can be no objection on these grounds to our accepting either of these two."

His statement appeared directed toward conciliating the American Congress. Indian differences with American policies, especially in Korea, have contributed to a delay in final Congressional action on a grant or loan of 2,000,000 tons of wheat.

Recently Nehru stressed India's refusal to accept outside help to which political strings are attached.

The prime minister, noting the U. S. suggestion that India pay for the wheat with strategic materials, including minerals used for atomic production, said:

"We would be glad to supply the U. S. such materials as we have available. But it is a fundamental part of our foreign policy not to supply such materials as are mainly related to atomic-energy propuction to foreign countries."

NOT AT WAR

Tucson, Ariz., May 10 (AP)—A former United States Marine who fought in the Korean War has been denied treatment in a veterans' hospital because he is not a veteran of a recognized war, Col. J. E. Gaines, hospital manager, said he was unable to help David R. Arelland because the United States is hot at war.

MORE POWER FOR HOLLAND NAVY

At a special ceremony in Boston, two veteran U. S. destroyer escorts, the U.S.S. Stern and the U.S.S. Risner, are delivered to the Royal Netherlands navy. The Dutch crews aboard their new commands, recrisscrossed the De Zeewe and the Van Zijll, as the Dutch flags are raised as well as the U.S., Canada, has supplied arms for Holland's military forces. — Central Press Canadian.

Synthetic Fibre Causing Concern to Wool Growers

By J. C. GRAHAM
(Canadian Press Staff Correspondent)

Auckland, N.Z. — (CP) — The threat to world wool markets from development of synthetic fibres is becoming a real problem for wool growers, suggests R. G. Lund, chairman of the International Wool Secretariat.

The secretariat was formed in 1937 when the wool industry undoubtedly had the threat of synthetic fibres in their minds. Lund, on his current tour of New Zealand, has been telling farmers that the threat today is much more serious.

Many new synthetics were being brought on the market, especially in the United States, and enormous sums were being spent to improve these products and to persuade the buying public that they are substitutes for wool. Lund says there is no real substitute for natural wool.

The powerful incentive for development of synthetics afforded by the present period of high wool prices may result in wool growers themselves being asked to make a greater contribution to the cost of research and promotion of the use of natural wool.

Big Budget

On behalf of the International Secretariat Lund has placed before the wool boards of Australia and New Zealand the largest budget in its history. He said the secretariat feels that at this time its work must be intensified in all directions, especially in the fields of research and education.

Wool has become important not only to such producing nations as South Africa, Australia and New Zealand, but to the Commonwealth as a whole, he said, since new wool is second to rubber as the largest dollar earner.

Lund was wary about the synthetic program. Asked if expansion of synthetics might mean an increased demand for natural wool for blending purposes, he said the whole purpose of blending synthetics with wool was to cheapen the resultant product. He believed the continued use of synthetics for blending with wool was likely to result merely in damaging the reputation of wool itself.

PRESIDENT ARIAS

ly was Remon who spearheaded the drive to retain the 1946 charter. He and the president negotiated for hours last night until Arias acceded to the police head's demands.

Arias remained in the seclusion of his palace, staged by a police guard which Remon said was taking orders from the president.

The president said then he acted against a subversive plot by oppositionists and communists. The 1946 constitution provides a four-year presidential term; the older document gives him six years and wider powers.

Raging Violence.

Panama city became a scene of raging violence yesterday as anger over Arias' action reached fever pitch. Administration and opposition mobs clashed in the main square, where there was heavy shooting.

Stone - hurling oppositionists barricaded the plaza to stop trucks filled with administration supporters. Other crowds, facing gunfire, wrecked the government radio station.

REGISTRATION

"This matter is thoroughly worked out. . ."

Cannot See Eye to Eye

Turning to other matters, Mr. Claxton said Canada regrets the "failure" to standardize western arms and added that the most discouraging factor is that the United Kingdom and they United States can't even see eye to eye on arms they are adopting for the future.

He disclosed that the defence department has been looking for factory space for a huge area—100 miles by 30 — large enough to train army formations as large as a brigade. It has its eye on one in the east but it is hoped that arrangements for overseas won't have to do winter training there, because much of the time would be spent shovelling snow.

The U.S. kept Canada's special force, 25th Brigade at Fort Lewis, Wash., for $20,000 a day or $2.46 a man—cheaper than Canada could have done it herself, Canada would have had to spend millions to rehabilitate a camp to handle the training of the brigade, now in Korea.

Canada, he said, will be getting the most modern U.S. tanks — Pattons — among the equipment being sent here to replace the two divisions of British-type equipment sent to Europe.

Sees No Difficulty

Providing Canada had a formation as large as a division in the field in any war, he could see no great difficulty about operating abroad with either U.S. or U.K. arms because either one or the other of those powers—and likely both—would have large forces in the same theatre.

Mr. Claxton said original plans for production of military motor vehicles in Canada have had to be modified because the cost would be "fantastically high" for the public. Canada now would manufacture those vehicle parts she could turn out most economically and buy others from the U.S.

Referring to the Royal Canadian Navy, Mr. Claxton said it will be late this autumn before the first of Canada's new anti-submarine escort vessels are launched and it will be a considerable time longer, before they are at sea. Plans to produce them were announced more than a year ago.

Gen. Pearkes had charged that the aircraft carrier Magnificent was out of date. In the opinion of the defence department the carrier "has three or four more years of useful life." Her aircraft were of the type still being used by the U.S. or U.K.

Canada, said Mr. Claxton, cannot afford to have a larger aircraft carrier, one for the Pacific coast as Gen. Pearkes urged.

CANADIANS

"They came in on Evans first. He spotted them just as the first wave put a machine gun and up a fire fight that lasted an hour and held them off.

"When they tried McLennan's (L. Cpl. Neil McLennan of Otawan). They got on top of Mac's and he opened up and held them off until one of his men was hit in the stomach with a grenade. All the time they were mortaring us—just to keep us interested. Mac's men brought the wounded man back to platoon headquarters and returned to find their position over-run. They just grabbed their ammunition and high-tailed it back to platoon headquarters, where they jumped into the slit trenches and fought with us from there."

"There's a whistle, they get up with a shout about 10 feet from our positions and come in.

"The first wave throws its grenades, fires its weapons and goes to ground. It is followed by a second which does the same, and then a third comes up. Where they disappear to I don't know. But they just keep on coming."

Was Not Quiet Long

Evans' forward corner wasn't quiet long. The storm spilled along to the whole company front and half an hour later he had been wounded in the leg and in the chest. On he fought. He wouldn't give up.

It was his Bren gunner, Pte. Ken Marsh of Toronto, who reported the Chinese right among the Canadians. So Ross ordered Evans' men back to the headquarters area.

Evans wanted to fight on right there and finally had to be carried out by Marsh and Pte. Bob Tolliver of Fort Qu'Appelle, Sask., his friend.

Around Ross's headquarters the men lay then were four and five in slit trenches dug for one or two. They shared their ammunition and got what they could from another section, still holding out under Cpl. Archie Wasaka of High Prairie, Alta.

Still the assaulting waves poured in.

Said Pte. Carl Deschamps of Carleton Place, Ont.: "They would come up from a little hollow about 25 yards from the top, and in the moonlight they made wonderful targets."

The fight was carried on from there until almost all the platoon's last round was gone, and all its grenades.

Then Ross said: "We're out of ammunition, there's no use staying. Pick up the wounded. Let's go."

Lilley confirmed the decision and ordered him to fall back. The distance was 50 yards.

Ulmer carried another moment by throwing his rifle, bayonet attached like it spear into the body of an advancing communist, knowing that he could reach himself later with a weapon from one of the casualties.

With the others picked up what they could, collected all the wounded and carried them back to the main company perimeter. Ross and three others stayed forward to give them covering fire.

Ross and his runner, Pte. Dynarty Fodchuk of Vancouver, fired from their slit trenches. And Ptes Wayne Mitchell of Winnipeg and Marsh got up with their Bren guns, and firing from the hip held the still-oncoming hordes at bay. Mitchell remained in battle though twice hit in the face, and has refused to be evacuated as a casualty.

(But Mitchell apparently was forced to, later. He was listed in an Ottawa casualty list issued April 30 as wounded. His next-of-kin was given as his brother, Sherwood Mitchell of Virden, Man.)

By morning the Chinese appeared to have had enough.

Said Lilley: "They just couldn't keep that up indefinitely without having to reorganize."

They fell back and the little bit of ground Ross abandoned during the night was effortlessly retaken in the morning.

Within inches and feet of the Patricias' trenches were 17 bodies the enemy hadn't carried away. Another 50 were found in hastily scratched graves. More, together with the wounded, must have been carried away. The Chinese seldom leave casualties, and few dead on the battlefield.

Gentlemen:

We are pleased to recommend the Coleman Floor Furnace for economical oil heating.

In our store, space is valuable, and this type of installation leaves our floor area completely free.

A particular advantage is the freedom from fire-tending, and the confidence of clean controlled heat — day and night.

Gentlemen:

It certainly gives me great pleasure to recommend the Coleman Floor Furnace which you installed for us last year.

Our family has been very comfortable and my wife especially appreciates the relief from the dust and dirt of coal and ashes. Our house has been nicely decorated and we find that cleaning has been kept to a minimum. For myself, I find that I have a great deal more time at my disposal to spend on my hobbies and for relaxation.

My heating bill was especially low. It cost me only $80.00 for a full Winter's heating.

For low cost, completely automatic oil heating, your Coleman Floor Furnace cannot be excelled.

Yours truly,

9 Mount Pleasant Road

Gentlemen:

We are very pleased with the operating efficiency of our Coleman Floor Furnace. It is so clean and quiet. Our basement is not cluttered with pipes, but most important we heated six rooms house last winter for $75.00.

Mr. C. R. Ledman,
Thomson's Business,
North Front Street,
Belleville, Ontario.

MR. G. HORN,
Canniffon Road

MR. R. WILLIAMS,
Wellington, Ont.

MR. V. MORRIS,
204 Station Street

Gentlemen:

Heating is in my line, and I can say with sincerity that in my experience there is nothing I could have bought to heat my house at double the price or more, that could heat as economically, and as comfortably, and could be so quiet and clean. My house is 26' x 26' and every nook and corner is cozy.

Dan Wilson,
Coleman Street,
Belleville.

Briefs From Britain

(By The Canadian Press)

Allestree, Derbyshire, England. (CP)—Tim Bowers was adjudged the champion baker of England and Wales. Judges said that the loaf he entered was the best in ten years.

Chigwell Row, Essex, England. (CP)—Firemen fighting a grass fire have looked anxiously at a nearby farm. Three farmers were trying to plow land waterlogged by recent rains.

London, (CP)—Recent laboratory tests of London's water supply showed 99.9 per cent of the samples met the highest standards of purity. It was the best showing ever made.

Credenhill, England. (CP)— A pilot recently transferred from this R.A.F. base in Hertfordshire paid an unexpected return visit. His Spitfire crashed near the station but he escaped unhurt.

Bognor Regis, England. (CP)— Women from a neighboring district who annually make an excursion to this Sussex resort have not forgotten that local councillors once called them "fish old ladies". Twelve coachloads of them have promised to sing outside the council offices.

Chalfont St. Peter, Buckinghamshire, England. (CP)—After three weeks of struggle with the parish council postponed plans for a football match. Sponsors said "we will inspect the pitch when it is navigable."

St. Helier, Jersey. (CP)— Six radium needles were stolen from a general hospital here. The stolen needles had been insured for £600 ($1,800).

Looe, Cornwall, England. (CP) —Local canning factories said they could accept no more pilchards because they were short-staffed. So the fishermen agreed to work day and night shifts to overcome the difficulty.

Southend, Essex, England. (CP) —Engineers investigating local interference with television reception found the trouble stemmed from slot machines along the pier.

Stockport, England. (CP)—A woman cyclist, fined for ignoring a stop sign, complained that a policeman shouted "hey" instead of blowing his whistle. "He wouldn't shout 'hey' at a motorist," she said.

Chesham Bois, England. (CP)— This Buckinghamshire town held a plebiscite on the question of street lighting. Result as few ballots were cast that the vote was declared void.

Trying to Save Giant Pines Almost 1,000 Years Old

By Willard G. Van Name, Associate Curator Emeritus of Living Invertebrates at the American Museum of Natural History, in a letter to the New York Times.

It is probably pretty well known that most of the surviving groves of the famous giant sequoias, or big trees, of California are now safely preserved in national or state parks and no longer in danger of destruction. There is, however, one very large and fine grove that is still in private ownership. This is the South Calaveras Grove, situated in Tuolumne county a little more than 90 miles from Sacramento, only a short distance from the North Calaveras Grove, which has been a state park for many years.

Park Proposed

There has long been a plan to have the state purchase the South Grove also and enlarge the park to include both groves in its limits. This has never been carried out, perhaps partly on account of the expense but more probably because the deep rocky gorge of the Stanislaus River separates the two groves, so that only the North Grove is generally visited by tourists. The much finer South Grove has up to the present been accessible only by poor roads and circuitous routes.

Though the two Calaveras groves were the first discovered of all the California big trees and were famous in the early gold-mining days of a century ago, the most remarkable feature of the Calaveras area is still unknown to most people. It is not, as is pretended, the fossil sequoia Grove but a small tract of forest lying near it on the north, along Beaver Creek. Most visitors to the sequoias do not get much of a view of it.

Magnificent Trees

This small area, hardly more that half a square mile in extent, bears the most remarkable stand of pine trees in the world—super pines, California's most beautiful forest trees, some of them 300 to 320 feet tall, with trunks over eight feet in diameter; also some immense Ponderosa pines slightly less in height, but of immense size—trees little inferior in the strange sequoia in size and magnificence, such as can be seen nowhere in the world at the present time.

They are the last of their kind, probably the last on earth. If not a thousand years, would be required to reproduce them if destroyed, and they are much more important to save than the neighboring sequoias, many groves of which are under safe protection already.

Now, are the people of California (and for that matter of the whole country, for this is a national, not a local matter) going to let the wood be pulled over their eyes and spend their money buying the sequoias which nobody wants to cut, as they make inferior lumber, and do nothing to secure this remarkable stand of pines for the park? That is what the lumber interests and their political allies hope.

These wonderful pine stands must be bought now, along with the sequoias. Now or never.

The lumber interests are trying to get the state to buy only the sequoias now, and "then anything the pine stands until later on—that is, to wait until the pines have been cut and there are none left to save.

This deadly course would put an end to the last hope of having in the Calaveras region the most magnificent state park in the country.

He Came to Kill

By Adeline McElfresh

Leeana was not conscious of the noise but she was suddenly in his arms. He was kissing her again and again, and whispering against her hair that he loved her.

"Mart" she murmured. "Mart, don't ever let me go. I'm shakily—"might be afraid of you, too."

He kissed her again.

"How touching!"

Sondra, a little smile on her provocative lips, came into the hall. She tossed her mink jacket toward the hallrack and paid no attention when it fell in a heap on the floor.

Little defenceless Leeana with her hooks in a man! Stop blushing, darling, it's no old fashioned sin." She gave a throaty laugh. "Mart Preston, you're a fool. Never marry a Thorne. They're all bad. I know."

Mart was still scowling at the stairs, as though he still saw Sondra's shapely legs climbing them.

Cynthia Carstairs greeted Leeana with obvious hostility when she finally found her—sitting beside Arthur Jones in the greenhouse. Old Arthur was still shaking his head over something Mrs. Carstairs had said.

"What's cooking?" Leeana asked brightly.

"Not dinner, if that's what you mean," Mrs. Carstairs snapped. "I've quit."

"Quit!" Leeana yelped. "But why, Cynthia?"

"I can and I have!" decisively. "We provide fussy men boss me around like I was dirt!"

"I don't have to stay here!" she burst out defiantly. "Nobody can make me—not even Clem Purdy—if I don't want to! I'll be next. Why shouldn't I be?"

"Why should you?" Leeana inquired, puzzled and a little bit frightened at this second burst of hysteria from staid, morose Mrs. Carstairs.

"Tell her," old Arthur suggested. "She loved Miss Maggie, too. She's not like—them."

"She's a Thorne. They killed—all of them."

"No, Cynthia." Arthur Jones spoke gently, almost pityingly. "Just one of them did." He repeated it dully. "Just—one."

"If you know anything, Mrs. Carstairs," Leeana put in quickly "tell me. Or better—let me get Mart or tell him."

Mrs. Carstairs shook her head. "Maybe you won't get me in trouble." She cocked her head, looking like a small fat querulous robin, as she continued, "my boy, Miss Leeana. He asked for it—"

"He? Peter?"

Surprise was in the round pink face. "How did you know?"

"I think it's Peter, too" Leeana said simply. "Just a you—"

"Oh, but I don't!" Mrs. Carstairs cried, "try that hussy!"

But Peter had the key," Leeana pointed out.

"No. He just asked for it. Said he had lost his."

"When was that?"

"Right after he came."

Leeana dreaded going back to the house, but Mrs. Carstairs had told all she could—or would. She had mentioned Peter's need for locked doors, had been answered curtly that it was none of her affair if he was afraid all kinds folks might resent his intrusion again and he'd thank her to forget her ever confided in her. He had, Mrs. Carstairs admitted regretfully, given her his "help me" forget." Leeana swallowed her fear; it looked more and more like Peter.

Peter had written a letter that must have been incriminating or Arthur Jones would not have mentioned it. Peter had needed Mrs. Carstairs' master key badly enough to excite suspicion in "order to get it. Peter needed money —always.

Thinking, Peter, Peter, Peter! Leeana let herself in quietly and hurried down the hall to the back stairs. She didn't want to see anyone. Not until she had searched Peter's room—provided, of course, that he wasn't in it.

Her knock unanswered, she tried the knob. Locked. So Peter did have a key.

She looked around. The long wide hall was dim with gloom of late afternoon. It was almost 4 o'clock and 4 o'clock, with lowering November skies, was depressing—hinting at early nightfall. Moving silently, and with complete stealth, Leeana crept, ready stiffening shoulder, Leeana slid a chair along the carpeted floor and climbed up. By listening, she could look through the transom.

Peter was inside. He was standing at the window, his back to her. All the tenseness was gone from him: his shoulders slumped, his hands pushed deep into his pockets. Fascinated, Leeana held her breath as he turned.

But he didn't see her. He flexed his long fingers, studying their strength. . .testing them. . .Leeana felt terrible burbling up in her throat, where last night hands had choked off a scream.

She opened her eyes. Peter was gone!

There was the click of a key, and the door opened.

Peter said, coldly, "won't you—come in, cousin?"

Terrified, and as though hypnotized by the cushed anger in Peter's eyes, Leeana stepped off the chair. She would not go into that room! She backed away, but Peter was quicker. Fingers closed about her arm.

"Don't be a fool!" he hissed "if I wanted to kill you—" He broke off, shrugging. His hand pulled away from her wrist. "Go if you like, Leeana, but I'd like to talk to you."

Leeana stepped past him into the room. Peter followed her, stood for a moment with his hand on the knob, and closed the door. Then, smiling faintly, he handed the key to her.

"I'm not afraid of you, Peter. Keep your key."

He put it on the bureau and returned to stand beside her.

"So you're not afraid of me?" he said thoughtfully. "But you think I killed Aunt Margaret, and tried to kill Aunt Agatha — and you."

"I didn't say that."

"You don't have to say it."

He was looking at her steadily, his face carefully expressionless. Leeana fought to subdue the rising fear; it wasn't show...

She forced a smile. "Don't be silly, Peter. Mart sent me to find you. He wants to—to talk things over with you. He knows I'm here."

"Does he?" Peter shook his head. "It's no go, Leeana. I told you once your fear showed all over you—remember? Well, it still does. You were spying on me. You wanted to search my room to find evidence that would convict me. Well—" he gestured broadly—"go on. Search."

He seated himself on a straight chair by the door, nodded toward the bureau and said:

"You might begin there."

Suddenly Leeana knew that he should trust her so childishly, Leeana yanked open the top bureau drawer. Socks were there, meticulously arranged according to color. So were handkerchiefs. She went on to the other drawers. Let Peter Thorne laugh up his other sleeve if he thought she wouldn't search his confounded bureau! Her probing fingers encountered paper.

She went on with her methodical search, hoping that Peter's matching eyes had not noted the momentary hesitation. She pushed the last drawer shut with an intentional bang.

"Don't think we've fooled me, cousin," he said soberly. "You found it, didn't you?"

Leeana, silent, nodded.

"And you're dying to tell your copper boyfriend. Or come back later yourself." Peter had not moved a muscle. "I'll save you the trouble. Get the paper, Leeana."

Obediently Leeana took it from the drawer. "What Peter said from it!" sternly, she did.

Gleaming with a million fires imprisoned in ice, stone and half a dozen smaller ones ranged around it, was the lavaliere—the Thorne family heirloom.

Leeana stared at it. "But—but I thought Sondra—"

"Sondra," Peter said softly, "understands it by contact with New York's off-color business world, my dear cousin. The old gent who left her here 25 Cs recognized it—chiefly, I must admit because I had seen it once before—and called me. He knew Sondra from the old days, too. People like Sondra and I borrow on our baubles quite often."

Leeana lifted her eyes reluctantly from Miss Aggie's jewel. It was hard to believe Peter ever had been hungry. He looked much too suave.

Hollywood Turns to Bible Again for Super Films

The Good Book, virtually untapped since the '30s when Cecil B. DeMille [illegible] "The Ten Commandments," made movie hits of "King of Kings", and "The Sign of the Cross", made movie history, has been quietly getting a thorough dusting.

Leader in the new cycle is the same man who started the first one—Cecil B. DeMille. When the famed director of cinema epics hit the jackpot in 1949 with a gaudy version of the Old Testament story of Samson and Delilah, the race was on.

Now two studios have Bible-based colossals ready for release next fall.

One, "Quo Vadis", a story of Christian martyrdom in Nero's Rome, was filmed in Italy at a record cost of $6,500,000. The other is "David and Bathsheba".

DeMille, who has brought four Bible stories to the screen, holds no other source combines so many of the elements of drama, love, hate, lust, treachery, passion, faith, selfishness and self-sacrifice. He once said: "You can make a film from any 50 pages of the Bible."

In "The Ten Commandments" filmed in 1922 at a cost of $1,400,000, he used 4,000 extras and 40,000 animals. In the climactic scene the Red Sea parted before the Israelites, then closed in on the pursuing army of the Pharoah.

M.G.M.'s $4,000,000 "Ben Hur", released in 1926, was not to be outdone. Its fabled chariot race is considered by many the most thrilling scene on film.

The big scene in DeMille's 1927 "King of Kings" was Christ's Crucifixion. It showed some 6,000 actors whipping up a tortuous path to the hill of Golgotha.

Story of the Flood

DeMille rebuilt ancient Rome for "The Sign of the Cross" in 1932. An added attraction was Claudette Colbert talking a milk bath.

"Samson and Delilah" had Victor Mature slaying a lion with his bare hands and slaughtering an army with the jawbone of an ass.

"Quo Vadis" features a scene in Nero's arena with 80 lions pitted against a handful of Christians. "David and Bathsheba" shows David killing the giant Goliath with his slingshot and assaulting the wife of Rabbah with his army.

"King of Kings" the most-played film of all time, has been seen by almost a billion people and is still shown 1,500 times yearly, mostly in churches.

He doesn't hesitate, however, to sugar-coat his message. Some churchmen objected to "Samson" on the grounds it put too much emphasis on the strong man's love affair with Delilah.

DeMille, although his name is synonymous with Bible films, was no pioneer in the field. The movie industry cut its teeth on them.

"Quo Vadis", based on a best selling novel, has been made four times. The French did it first in 1902. A 1913 version produced in Italy ran nine reels and was the longest picture made up to that time. The third, also Italian, starred Emil Jannings.

In recent years the non-profit Cathedral Films, Inc., has turned out more than 30 short features based on Bible stories. It reports demand exceeds the supply and some 4,000,000 people see them weekly.

U. S. SOLDIER SHOT, REDS SEND "REGRETS"

Russian authorities in Vienna, Austria, expressed regret over the fatal shooting of Cpl. Paul J. Greene, a military policeman, of Rochester, N.Y., by a Soviet soldier in the city's international sector. Greene was hit by seven machine pistol bullets. The reds have agreed to a joint investigation of the incident. — Central Press Canadian.

RAWDON

George Butcher Presents Fine Illustrated Lecture

Rawdon—On Friday evening last Mr. George Butcher, Stirling, gave a splendid address and illustrated lecture in Wellman's United Church, under the auspices of Wellman's Daisy Mission Band. There was a large attendance from the community and all enjoyed the missionary program.

Miss Muriel Morton contributed piano music for a 20 minute period as the guests were arriving. Mrs. James Chumbley was financial secretary and the silver-door collection amounted to $6.54. A portion of this will be used to pay for 18 copies of the Junior Scientsen and a copy of "World Friends" for each family in the community who have children.

The leader Mrs. Burton Morton, presided and welcomed Mr. Butcher and his son George, of Stirling. She also welcomed Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Russett and Sandra Dale who made their first attendance at the church.

The worship opened with "In Christ There is no East nor West" and the 23rd psalm "Blessed is the Nation Whose God is the Lord" was read alternately. Group Speaker

The leader then introduced Mr. Butcher and asked him to present the first half of his lecture.

Mr. Butcher was born in Peterborough, and later went with his parents to Saskatchewan. He attended Bible College in Toronto and took a course on Medical Missions in New York.

In 1936 he and his wife journeyed to Rhodesia, Africa, where they served until 1945. Two sons were born in Africa. They hope to return to Africa this October to resume their missionary activities.

Scenes of Children

This part of the lecture gave various scenes of children at work and play, in the hospitals and schools as was enjoyed by the Mission Band children.

Richard and Donna Dracup gave a duet, "Bringing in the Sheaves." Harry Russett, Charles Nix, Brenda Chumbley and David Heasle, as a quartet rendered "Little Soldiers of Jesus." Muriel and Mildred Morton contributed a piano duet, "The Curly Head Maid". Yvonne King, Nancy Chumbley and Marlene Haggerty rendered in solo and chorus style the song "Lily Bell Rings," with each girl singing a separate verse.

Travelers Entertained

Mr. Butcher then continued his travelogue of "Missions at Work in Africa." At the close Mrs. Morton graciously extended thanks and Carol Beckett the youngest Mission Band member made the presentation to the guest speaker of a box of homemade candy.

EUROPE COUNCIL CONSIDERS DEFENCE OF YUGOSLAVIA

War production of most European countries outside the Russian orbit would go to equip Yugoslav peasants in case of attack on their homelands if the Council of Europe adopts a motion by Duncan Sandys, British representative and son-in-law of Winston Churchill. At the Strasbourg council session, Sandys, with the backing of 29 other members, introduced a motion for the commitment of all European members of the council to go to the aid of Yugoslavia if the threatening words and gestures of her neighbors explode into outright war. — Central Press Canadian.

GOOPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By: GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

AND THEY'RE AMATEURS!

We know at least one coach who won't have any player, Goodwin or other besides which usually associate themselves with an athletic team.

The opposition won't be in a position to "sneak" any players, or even bribe them. There'll be no trades, nor chances of residence rules to bother him. Furthermore the opposition won't be able to scout the team's practices, nor even get an inkling as to whom will comprise the starting battery.

There'll be no "behind-the-grandstand" offers to play with another team next year, for the majority of the team are signed to long-term contracts. Spring training will be confined to the home "stadium", and the coach will have no need to worry about the boys breaking training rules. They are in bed every night at a certain hour, and are subject to no temptations.

They will be playing all their games at home. No long bus trips for these lads. And their sponsors are keenly interested in their welfare. So much in fact that they keep an eagle eye on them at all times. What more could a coach like?

The team? It will be known as the Kingston Saints and will play for the first time in the City Amateur Softball League. And only a few special visiting "fans" will be able to see the boys perform. The grandstand crowd will always be on hand to cheer the boys to victory.

The team, which is composed of inmates of the Kingston Penitentiary has received permission to play in a regular league. In former years it played exhibition games with outside teams within the prison walls.

"DROME" TOURNAMENT OFF TO START

The Belleville Bowl-O-Drome fifth annual open scratch bowling tournament got away to a good start last week, that manager Bill Bateman says there is plenty of room left for additional entries.

* * *

The tournament is an attractive one in that 95 per cent of all entry fees goes back into prize money with the high spare taking 50 per cent; second high 30 per cent; third 15 per cent and fourth 5 per cent. There's a call for mens' and womens' teams, doubles, singles and mixed doubles. The handsome Bowl-O-Drome Trophy will be awarded to the team rolling the highest score.

* * *

Entry fee is $1.50 per person for each event, and this includes your bowling. You can bowl as often as you like and any time you like. Looks like a good bowling show and plenty of interest is being shown not only from city bowlers but those from various parts of the district and province. The tournament will end on May 26th.

SPEED DELIONS

Dick Burrowes, proprietor of the Speedway Park, near Marysville promises thrills, chills and spills in his auto stock car derby scheduled for the track on May 24th. Dick has several crack drivers from Toronto entered as well as a number of local lads. 'Tis a sport that will keep your spine atingle and your nerves on edge. The event will open the 1951 season as Dick plans a number of meets at Speedway Park this summer. Together with the stock cars, he has a number of special racing types coming that are guaranteed to produce a thrill a second.

* * *

Speaking of auto-racing, lovers of the sport should not miss the picture "To Please a Lady" that Tommy Mascaro is showing at the Capitol Theatre today, tomorrow and Saturday. It features Clark Gable, in a driver's role, and there's enough speed and action in the film to keep an audience on edge for its entire run. There are some blood-chilling scenes as speed-mad drivers roar around the track in search of victory. It is action plus with a brilliant cast of troupers tossed in it, Gable fashion, to make the film a highly entertaining feature.

* * *

PONDEROUS FALS?

Poker-faced Eric the Derelict, who teethed on six-inch logs in his native Yukon, and frolicked with polar bears when he was six, will stalk ponderously into action here on Friday night against another human bulldozer, Wladyslaw Talun, the Polish underground giant in what should be a test of sheer brute strength. Roughly, nearly 600 pounds of bone and muscle will be in action, and while you won't be dizzy with the speed of the fray, the action of these Brobdingnagians will keep your mind off taxes, the rent, and doctor bills.

* * *

If Yukon swears to wear his lumberjack boots (he usually wrestles barefooted) it will be that much more interesting. For the wrestler from Pole with five years of life in the Polish underground where they gobbled rat souffle for dessert, has been known to chew harder things than hobnailed boots, and for pastime. So it looks like an interesting evening when these behemoths clash.

Earl "Moose" McCready meets Lee "The Lee" Henning, nuff said in the semi-final with Nate Brown who once fought Joe Louis and was declared after ten rounds, meeting Toni Lanza, a newcomer in the opener.

MAYBE LONG DISTANCE

"Gomes was pitching for the Yankees one day and I was catching. The Athletics had two on in the last of the ninth of a tie ball game and Jimmy Foxx was at bat. Well, you know Jimmy. He looked big enough to drive a ball into the next county and often did. He sometimes hit Gomes pretty good, too.

* * *

"Well, Lefty stands out there looking down at me, shaking off every sign I give him. He doesn't want a curve. He doesn't want the fast ball. He doesn't want a change-up. So I walk out to him and say: 'O.K., wise guy. What do you want?'

* * *

"He looks me straight in the eyes and as serious as can be says: 'Let's just wait a while. Maybe somebody will want to be on the telephone.'"

Defeat Fort Frances 3-1 In Seventh Game of Series; Presented With Allan Cup

Owen Sound, Ont., May 10—(CP)—Owen Sound Mercurys climaxed a fight from the brink of elimination last night by defeating Fort Frances Canadian 3-1 to win the Allan Cup and the Canadian senior hockey championship.

The series went the full seven games before Mercurys ousted the Canadians, breaking out of a scoreless deadlock with three third period goals.

The victory was a sweet one for Owen Sound and the capacity crowd of 2,300 fans. At one time Fort Fraffces had led the series 3-2 and needed only one win to take the trophy.

Mercury brought this Georgian Bay city of 17,000 its second national sports trophy in a year. Last fall the now-defunct Owen Sound Greenals won the Mann Cup, emblematic of Canadian senior lacrosse supremacy.

Five members of the hockey Mercurys also played for the Greenals. They are Harry Kazarian, Doug Gillespie, Bill Allum, Freddie Smith and Tommy Buttinglon.

McEeavy Scores First

Then at 3:26 of the third period, Pat McEeavy, working with Doug Gillespie and Allum, caught the lower right-hand corner. Burlington scored on a passing play with Jack Ingoldsby seven minutes later and Mike Bukachuk shot in 3-2 at the 13-minute mark, McEeavy assisting.

Fort Frances fought back, but a solid goal at 17:30 by Elzenzoph was the best the westerners could do.

From then on, Mercurys checked the Canadians into the ice and provided blanket protection during the two-goal lead.

After the game, George Dudley, secretary-manager of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, presented the Allan Cup to team captain PatMcEeavy. The John Ross Robertson Trophy, emblematic of Ontario Hockey Association senior 'A' supremacy, was presented to goalie Bob Gillespon by Tory Gregg, second vice-president of the O. H. A.

All games of the close series were played in Owen Sound, a fact which didn't meet with pleasure among Canadians.

Alexander Cup Finals Will Be Ended This Week

Toronto, May 10—(CP)—The mid-May Alexander Cup finals between Toronto St. Michael's Monarchs and Valleyfield Braves will be ended this week, the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association ruled Wednesday.

George Dudley, the association's secretary-manager, said the remaining games in the major key championship series will have a two game value.

That would mean that St. Michael's who lead the seven-game series 2-1, with one game tied, could win title in tonight's game in Montreal, 6-5th and sudden-death game, if Valleyfield wins today. It will be played in Toronto Saturday. The Monarchs defeated Valleyfield 6-1 here Tuesday night.

Part of Friday Will be Holiday To Honor Flyers

(By The Canadian Press)

Part of Friday will be Civic Holiday in honor of the Barrie Flyers Jrs. who won the Memorial Cup and Canadian Junior 'A' hockey championship.

Flyers won the best-of-seven final against Winnipeg Monarchs in four straight games. They played the final game Tuesday night and are expected to arrive in nearby Allandale about noon Friday.

Mayor Marjorie Hamilton Wednesday night proclaimed the holiday period 11.30 a.m. to 2 p.m. and the Chamber of Commerce plans a parade to follow the large float on which players and club officials will ride into Barrie.

At Sandown, England, North Carolina, a 50-1 American-owned outsider in the English Derby, came from behind Wednesday to win Sandown's derby trial stakes at 1½ miles.

North Carolina, running in the colors of Mrs. Josephine Hartford Bryce of New York, scored by half a length and paid 5 to 1. He was ridden by Harry Carr, the King's jockey.

At Loandon, England's favored soccer team surged from behind in the last nine minutes Wednesday to nose out Argentina 2-1 in an international match played before 100,000 spectators on the slippery turf of Wembley stadium.

With nine minutes to go, Stan Mortensen tied the score for England and five minutes later Jackie Milburn headed in the clincher.

The English all-star soccer team Wednesday night beat the American League all-stars 4-0 at New York. The English team, en route to Australia, left later for San Francisco.

ticipation did not depend on them reaching an agreement with the east Germans.

He added(however, that if current negotiations between the east German and west German Olympic committees—aimed at forming one unified committee—became "tragic, we have the right to withdraw our recognition of west Germany, I do not think this will happen."

The trophy and a $300 cash prize goes to the player who best combines efficient playing ability with clean and gentlemanly conduct during games. The selection was made by the league's five referees.

Reid spent only four minutes in the penalty box while playing 69 regular season games. The six-footer from Owen Sound, Ont., an outstanding playmaker, compiled 88 scoring points on 17 goals and 51 assists.

Eddie Lopat Continues Hex Over Cleveland as Yankees Streak to First-Place Margin

JACK HAND
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

As long as Cleveland is in the American League, Eddie Lopat has a great deal to say about it. Since 1949, the stocky New York lefty is 10-3 against the Indians.

With a record like that edge over the Cleveland gang, Lopat is enough in the basic strategy of Casey Stengel.

Lopat's ability to film flam the Indians is one of the important reasons for Stengel's great success as New York's Big Apple Boss. Casey is better than last night in his 10th straight success.

The wily old Case last summer when he used Lopat and Tommy Byrne against Cleveland. Byrne lasted only 2 innings before Lopat relieved him. Lopat shut out the Indians on 3 hits. Lopat was credited with the victory when Cleveland scored two in the fourth inning. Lopat had Lemon knocked out in the sixth, was followed by Lou Brissie and George Zuverink.

Ahead Two Full Games

It was the Yanks' seventh win in nine starts on their first Western trip that left them today at Cleveland. They stretched their first-place advantage over the Indians to two full games and left the Indians in third.

The Lopat victory probably was the most important of yesterday's games but New York Giants' 17-6 romp over the make-shift St. Louis Cards started more tongues wagging. Durocher's crew now has won eight of its last 10 starts.

Throwing off the shackles of their horrendous opening slump, the Giants' sluggers ripped into Max Lanier and three "savers" for 21 hits. Whitey Lockman's 3-for-5 tale tied the season high in both games. Sal Maglie outdueled with his way to his third straight win with a five-hitter.

In the other brackets of the National, Boston Braves took advantage of the Card collapse to widen their lead to five games. Vern Bickford allowed only two unearned singles in winning his fifth straight, 4-0.

Konstanty rescued Russ Meyer in the ninth with Pirates on third and first and one out. He forced Gus Bell and Ralph Kiner to ground out. Then he blanked them in the 10th while the Phils got to reliefer Joe Muir for the winner.

Clyde King tamed the Chicago Cubs for a 8-4 Brooklyn victory. A timely double by Cal Abrams scored two runs and broke a tie in the sixth.

The American League got notice to expect the worst from Hal Newhouser from now on as the Detroit lefty shut out Washington 4-0, with seven hits. After three workouts, the veteran southpaw has pitched two fine games in succession.

Philadelphia A's scored six in the 10th to drub St. Louis Browns 8-2 after tying the game on Eddie Joost's homer in the ninth.

NO CONFIRMATION

Rome, May 10— (AP) — The newspaper Il Tempo said Wednesday night Yugoslavia refugees reaching Italy from Belgrade have said Marshal Tito had been shot and wounded in a recent assassination attempt at his palace. There was no confirmation of the report from any other source.

According to the refugees, Il Tempo said, the attempt on Tito's life was covered up by news reports from Belgrade that the Yugoslav chief was in the hospital after a gall-bladder operation.

Slaughter, Stanky Aver Bean Ball Has its Place

New York, May 10—(AP) — Does the duster pitch really endanger the life and limb of the batter? Should the bean ball pitcher be punished?

Recent protests have drawn attention to "high and close" pitching by the pitchers that has batters going up and down like yo-yos. If it came to a head when Brooklyn's Jackie Robinson deliberately bumped Sal Maglie after the Giants' pitcher had made him hit his shirt.

Enos Slaughter of St. Louis Cardinals and Eddie Stanky of the Giants, two scrappers who probably have been forced to "bite the dust" more often than their contemporaries, were asked their opinions.

"There's nothing wrong with the duster," was Slaughter's reply. "Why outlaw it? It's part of baseball and only cry-babies are afraid they might get their uniforms dirty!"

"If those little Lord Fauntleroys think there are a lot of bean ball pitchers around today, they should have been playing around baseball years ago, days like Dazzy Dean, Burleigh Grimes and Freddy Fitzsimmons would make nothing of sticking one in your ear.

"Dusters never bothered me. I figure a pitcher is just trying to prevent me from taking a location pitch. I would do the same thing if I were in his place.

"Heck, if I were a pitcher and I saw two strikes and three pitches of long-ball hitter, you bet your life that next one is a 'duster.'"

Stanky, always a fiery sentiments. The spunky little second sacker, "the best low-salaried millions" of times, said he never once challenged a pitcher over the duster.

"That's his stork-in-the-eye," said Stanky. "Otherwise the batter would be running down his neck. I don't think there is a pitcher today who doesn't flatters inside—with an intent to hit him."

Pitchers have been throwing dusters for years but it wasn't until the 1920 Baseball started crying that anybody took any notice of it."

Kirkwood Keglers Maintain Lead In Spring League

Joe Kirkwood's cigar quintet now lead the spring AAA Bowling League by five points by virtue of their 7-0 defeat of Canada Cement last night at the Bowl-O-Drome.

Bill Bateman's Drome handed Thrasher's Millers a 5-2 setback to draw on even terms for second slot, while G. H. Wood's outfit nipped Callaghan's 3-2 to jump into third place ahead of Northern Electric who were turned back by Ashley Fuz 5-2.

Ritz Service football pin boy has been setting, veterans of the loop a fast pace. Over four nights play his average is 220. "Letty" Reid heads the triples with 900 followed by Jim McKenzie with 889. Bob Bagshaw and Jack Fitzgerald are tied for high single with a 378.

The team standing is, Kirkwoods, 34; Thrasher's Millers, 19; Bowl-O-Drome 19; G. H. Wood, 17; N. Electric, 14; Ashley Furs, 11; Canada Cement, 6; Callaghan Lee 5.

Cubs Asking Fans To Return Balls Hit Into Stands

Chicago, May 10 (AP): — The longest ball hit in the Cubs' Wrigley Field this season will be those that soar into the stands they'll wish to have back.

The Cubs are returning to the wanting practice of asking fans to return foul balls hit in the stands.

Cubs officials said they have received many letters from fighting men in Korea asking for baseballs as they could play in their off-duty hours.

Heretofore all balls going into the stands were souvenirs for fans who would risk life and limb in the struggle to nab them.

EIGHT FEET TALL, STILL GROWING

Elizabeth Sanchez, who is four years old, is looking with understandable awe at towering Felipe Birrier, who at the age of 22 is eight feet, two inches tall. Felipe left Puerto Rico hoping to find a job with a circus. He had to have a job fast to support his appetite. To give you an idea: For breakfast he consumes 17 pork chops, four dozen eggs, two quarts of milk and two loaves of bread. Doctors say that Felipe will grow until he is 20 or 25 and may reach an altitude of ten feet. He didn't have to look for the circus job. He was snapped up immediately by a Puerto Rican theatre in New York. — Central Press Canadian.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, May 10 — (AP) — Quiet out of town before it's too big, my lovers.

The refrain of [illegible] Cole Porter song [illegible] theme song for today's [illegible] the problems of the film [illegible] and trend is best out by a young man named Russell Rouse, a film writer - director and one of the creators of a new film called "The Well."

"The Well" was largely filmed in small northern California towns. Rouse advises that other producers should do more out-of-town shooting if they hope to cure the ailing box office.

"The picture business is in a strange condition now," he explained. "Even good pictures sometimes don't make money. The only sure money-makers are the very unusual and the very good films.

"I think that one reason for the public's lack of interest in movies is because people are fed up on the phoniness of Hollywood films. The glossy glamor of studio - made pictures is too far from real people. I want to put life [illegible] the way it appears in the films."

The Partner

Rouse and his partner, Clarence Green, aimed "The Well" to qualify as a "very unusual" film. They had been working on the subject for concerning a race and the problem of a well reside among the lives of the little Kathy Perkins story. One day Green came up with the idea of combining the two plots into one picture. The notion stretches the imagination, but is fairly logical and certainly qualifies as a "very unusual" subject.

The backers of the film urged that it be shot in Hollywood, but Rouse revolted.

"Of course, I could have shot it on the back lot of some studio," he said, "but that's just what I would look like on the back lot of a studio. No matter how skillful are the set designers, a studio street always looks phony."

After 18 days of checking, Rouse decided on Marysville and Grass Valley. He used local citizens for bit parts and extras. This resulted in economy as well as realism.

"We were getting sometimes 50 and 60 different camera set - ups a day," he asserted. "In a Hollywood studio, you're lucky if you get 10. As a result, we made a picture in a little over 21 days. It would have taken 50 or 60 to do it correctly in Hollywood."

AT THE BELLE

Based on the Bible story, "Samson and Delilah" follows in the wake of such illustrious DeMille spectacles as "The Ten Commandments," "King of Kings," "The Sign of the Cross" and more recently "Unconquered."

In the planning stage since 1935 when the first screen play was written, the actual shooting of the film took only 66 days once production got under way. This was no small feat inasmuch as there were huge crowds of extras in many scenes, and a great number of technical problems to solve.

The destruction of the Philistine Temple, for example, was a sequence that took eight days to film. And other key scenes in the picture—Samson's lare - handed battle with a lion, his assault on 1,000 Philistine soldiers, a fearful wedding feast thrill—also took more than a week to finish.

Casting of the film also lasted through more than a year of exhaustive tests. Mature had little competition, but Miss Lamarr won out over such beauties as Vivian Leigh, Jennifer Jones, Paulette Goddard, Ava Gardner, Gene Tierney and Joan Fontaine.

As in all DeMille productions, the supporting roles were handled by veteran players. "Samson and Delilah" boasts such well-known names as Nils Asther, William Important featured roles.

Veteran of First World War Gets Surprise of Life

Moncton, N.B., May 15 (CP)— A veteran of the First World War who served overseas with the Canadian 2nd Division, got the surprise of his life yesterday.

H. G. Palmer opened a manila envelope that had arrived in the mail, and which contained his commission and an official document classifying him as a musketry instructor during the war.

Dated 1916, both documents were in perfect order, the faded ink almost testifying to the 35 years they had been tucked away in some nook or cranny of some official desk.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

For Friday, May 11

March 21 to April 20—(Aries)—A generally progressive day, very favorably active for you if born before April 6th. For you other Arians; heed private affairs have most opportunity.

April 21 to May 20—(Taurus)—Lower your work, profession or business, strive hard to follow the rules and improve as you go. Aspects offer little help today but you still have ample advantages.

May 21 to June 21—(Gemini)—Leave no stone unturned in an effort to give right effort, make right answers, important for future as well as present. Mid-day hours may be irritating. Smile, be relaxed.

June 22 to July 22—(Cancer)—Finances and regulations will need minute watching, checking. Co-operate cheerfully with associates, family. Don't go off the beam. Look out for self-centredness.

July 24 to August 23—(Leo)—Unfriendly in spots concerning money, contracts. Suggest you be more careful in all things. Don't take sides in friend or other's affairs unless you can honestly remain neutral.

August 23 to September 23—(Virgo)—With proper study and mentals deduction of problems you should be able to manage well. Co-operate, gain and maintain friends' good will; assistance which we all can use. Don't worry.

September 24 to October 23—(Libra)—Not much to offer now. Be thoughtfully on guard, conservative in financial deals, making contracts, promises. An energetic start and a calmly directed course should take care of ills, hurt.

October 24 to November 22—(Scorpio)—Good possibilities if you will be alert, wide-awake. Be informed in all phases of your problems, especially with money, investments.

November 23 to December 22—(Sagittarius)— Conscientiousness stressed. Co-operate and don't be self-selling, manufacturing needed items, general business will progress depending on management. Be astute.

December 23 to January 21—(Capricorn)—If correctly informed in immediate problems you should be able to handle them for gains. Keep pace steadily rather than in jerky manner. Heart interests need gentle kindliness.

January 22 to February 20—(Aquarius) — You may have to supply your own incentive now—not too easy a job for some natives. It can be done if you study, concentrate, then double effort. Present, healthy outlook.

February 21 to March 20—(Pisces)—Today is somewhat dull outlook, but "forewarned is forearmed." Configurations become more favorable after 2 p.m. Follow up your action, initiative. Don't let things irritate.

YOU BORN TODAY are born under a strong and practical sign. Taurus. Have tremendous vitality, are very talented, capable, persistent. Once you start a job, can be depended upon to do it in a finished manner. You seldom rush things first and think afterwards. Your finer traits when properly developed and directed make for ed, a home lover, dislike quarreling and would rather close shop than bicker. Be moderate in all things, get sufficient rest; don't be pessimistic.

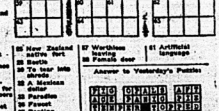
Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle



PROTEST STAG-HUNTING

Ilfracombe, Somerset, England—(CP)—Protests against the killing of two stags in this Exmoor village recently were answered by E. R. Lloyd, secretary of the Devon and Somerset Staghounds: "townsmen don't understand hunting," he said. "They only look on one side of it."

Briefs From Britain

(By The Canadian Press)

Ashford, Kent, England—(CP)—Out of 100 boys who visited the fire station here only one wanted to sing the fire bell. The 99 others all preferred to wear the firemen's helmets.

London—(CP)— Taxi-drivers went to the House of Commons to urge reduction in number of London's cab licenses from 9,135 to 8,500. The delegation left their 500 taxis parked outside.

Rhyl, Wales—(CP) — Eleven-year-old Willie Jones built a full model yacht in the bedroom of his home. Then he found he could get it out only by removing the window frame.

Leeds, Eng.—(CP)— A father, was handing a glass of orange juice to his son when it exploded. A few yards away in another home another glass tumbler exploded at the same time. It was thought a chemical used in making the glass was the cause.

Kesteven, Lincolnshire, Eng.—(CP)—Finding a needle in a haystack is no harder than finding a pin of false teeth. A farmer who lost his uppers in a hay loft gave up the search and applied to the Wealth Ministry for a new set.

Thurton, Somerset, England—(CP)—Mrs. Fenner, 31, took 31 persons in his 31-seat coach 31 miles to support his application to run 31 motorcoach tours this summer. It took the traffic commission—you guessed it—31 minutes to grant his request.

Shoreham-by-Sea, Kent, Eng.—(CP)—A rabbit belonging to Roger Peters won a prize in a children's pastry class. His jam tarts were judged better than those entered by his elder sister and other children.

Rusenhall, Surrey, England —(CP)—At a horse show held here the riders ranged in age from 2½ years to 70.

Looe, Cornwall, England—(CP) —The cobbled streets of this town are to be filled in with concrete, because women wearing high-heel shoes have been getting them wedged in between the stones.

London—(CP)—A 13-year-old boy in juvenile court told the magistrate he had missed school because the other boys teased him for being fat. The magistrate remarked sympathetically that people had often made unkind remarks about his own size.

FOXES PLENTIFUL

Digby, N. S. — (CP) — Red Fox are increasing in this district at an "alarming rate," according to reports from woodsmen and farmers. The increase in red fox is blamed for almost complete disappearance of rabbits from many sections.

Garden Hints

(By Gordon Lindsay Smith)

There are a few little special jobs that distinguish the average good gardener from the rank amateur. Most of these consist of extra care that makes a world of difference in results.

Plant Ties — Most beginners are too gentle or tender. They hate to do anything approaching surgery. Take the handling of what the trade calls bedding plants. These are half-hardy annuals in both the flower and vegetable line which are grown from seed, sown indoors or in hotbeds, or are bought from the seedsmen or florists, usually about a dozen to the box or flat. The beginner is inclined to keep these out without any pinching back, or without even removing flower buds or leaves. If just before or after planting one pinches off quite a lot of the growth, and especially all flowers or buds, one will get much sturdier growth and in the end more flowers or fruit.

Support—With some tall things, too, it is an excellent plan to provide support. This may be in the form of short stakes or even twigs and it may be necessary to tie the stems of the plant to the same loosely with soft raffia. Some of the special twisting material sold by seed stores will be found useful for such as peonies, most experienced gardeners place a wooden or wire loop around the plant fairly early in the spring. This will provide effective support and even hold up the heavy blooms.

In the famous Kew Gardens near London, last year, they even discovered an excellent trick for supporting such fierce, large shrub-like flowers as delphiniums and even climbers like sweet peas. Some there actually have grown more than a few inches high, some old branches or brush are fairly stuck into the ground close about them. Pruning off fruit trees or shrubs is an ideal. As the plants develop they will grow in and around these and these dead branches and be firmly supported.

Staked Tomatoes — Tomatoes will repay in earliness of fruiting and size or crop some extra support. For most gardens it is advisable to stake. At the time of planting good stout stakes about six feet high are driven well into the ground and with a few inches of each plant. To these the main stem of the tomato plant is loosely but securely tied. All side shoots are nipped off just as soon as they develop, but none must be carried out to remove the fruit or flower clusters. It is important that every side shoot be nipped off and be kept nipped off. This is a weekly job during the growing season. Eventually the main stem of the tomato plant will reach the top of the stake, and then it, too, is nipped off to encourage fruit to set into top flowers. The plant is tied about every foot of growth. When staked, tomatoes can be grown about 18 inches apart and in small gardens, around the edge of the plot.

Heading the Last Frost — In certain parts of the country there may be still danger of late frost. For a few extra early and tender things like tomatoes, cucumbers and tomatoes one doesn't need to worry if some extra protection in the form of special paper caps or miniature glass or plastic cloches or houses are used. These will furnish ample protection against quite a severe frost for a few weeks. By using them one can plant any of these tender things outside from two to three weeks earlier than usual.

WALLBRIDGE

Wallbridge—A number of children are confined to their homes with the measles.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Pound were Friday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Harris.

Mr. D. Perry is spending a few days with his brother, Mrs. Fred Trow and Mrs. Trow of Toronto.

Mr. J. Bushell spent Friday evening with his uncle Mr. William Sine.

Old Friends Meet

Mr. John Moore and brother, Mr. Jim Moore, of Queensboro, called on Mrs. Martha Harris on Sunday afternoon. All being well advanced in years they recalled the days when they went to school to Mrs. Harris' father Mr. Allan, when he taught school at Queensboro.

It has been many years since they have met and they spent an hour of recalling their young days they had spent together. Both families lived at Queensboro nearly 90 years ago and have seen many changes during those years. Mrs. Harris being in her 95th year loves to meet her old friends of her girlhood.

STUDY KOREA JETS

Wiesbaden, Germany, May 10—(AP)— Observers from nine allied air forces in Europe will go to Korea for one month study of large-scale use of jet air power, it was announced today.

United States Air Force headquarters in Europe said two observers will be sent from the air forces of Belgium, Denmark, Canada, France, The Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, Greece and Turkey.

GOOD AND BAD

Patricias in Korea compare two mortar bombs lobbed into Canadian positions during a communist attack. Acting Sgt. Harry Szlabetka of Toronto, left, compares a dud with the tailpiece of another held by Lieut. C. A. Petrie of Edmonton. Pieces of shrapnel picked up around the dugout are piled in the lieutenant's lap. — (CP from National Defence.)

GORE

Gore—Several ladies from this line attended the W.A. district rally at Consecon United Church on Friday. A fine program was enjoyed.

Seeding operations are in progress with the long delay caused by so much rain.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hoskins, of Oshawa, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Pulver.

Master Eric Hatfield met with a painful accident on Tuesday when he had fingers on both hands cut on the seed drill. He was rushed to Dr. Bruce Price where stitches were required to close the cuts. Fortunately the finger bones were not crushed.

Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Pulver were dinner guests on Sunday of her brother, Mr. George Price and family of Selby. Mrs. Price Sr., accompanied them home for a visit with her daughter, Mrs. Pulver.

Mrs. W. J. Hubbs visited her daughter, Mrs. Harvey Brown over the weekend.

FIRE BREAKS OUT

Vienna, May 10 (Reuters) — Clouds of black smoke hung over the Lobau oil area of the Soviet zone of Austria when a three-week-old fire in the Matzen oil field in northeastern Austria flared up again, Flames shot 150 feet into the air from the middle of it.

Oil experts in Vienna, where the whole sky was lit with a red glow during the night, said the danger of it spreading has greatly increased.

MAKES LAST RUN

Regina — (CP) —The man who fired the first railway engine from Fort William, Ont., to Winnipeg, Man., over the Grand Trunk Pacific in 1910 made his last official run from here. Mr. G. Covell, retiring after 44 years in railroading, will live in Burnaby, B. C.

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper ma started to sew a button on my coat before it had time to come all a ways off, and then she stuck the needle in a funny kind of bumpy so she stuck her hands in, saying, Corks, corks, nothing but corks, and pin masses of corks. William, his coat pockets are litterly suffred with corks, she said.

I hope none of them have bottles attached, pop said, and i said, Well aw jimminies, ma, I'm working on an invention.

Well cant you work on it with just cos cork? ma said, and pop said, Yes, there's that over, Benny if Newton could discover the law of gravity by having an apple fall on his head; who's to say your own discovery wont come to you with the less painful accident of a single cork falling on your fool? he said.

All I know is, I dont want to discover a sea of disreputable cocks all over one of my floors, and I'm sure that will be the upshot of the outcome, ma said. What is this grate invention for land sakes? Whatever it is you have been wasting this room and cocks, she said, and I said, Sure I can, I'm even need more. The last time I tried, it wouldn't quite work with this many, I said.

What did you try, for Peet sake? pop said, and I said, I tried putting them in a bag and tying it around my neck to see if it would hold my head up in the bathing, but I've only added 5 more corks to the cullection since then. That's what it is, an invention to keep people from drowning while they're taking a bath, I said, and I'm ready to go to bath T said.

The final result being I'm still allowed to have the corks as long as I keep them in my room and out of my pockits.

FALSE TEETH
Slipping or Irritating?
Don't be embarrassed by loose false teeth. Just sprinkle a little FASTEETH on your plates. This neutral powder gives a remarkable sense of added comfort and security by holding plates more firmly. No gummy, gooey, pasty taste or feel. It's alkaline (non-acid). Get FASTEETH at any drug store.

Rundown, Couldn't Eat Had Headaches Every Day

Whether you are 18 or 80 you may at times begin to feel run-down, nervous and easily exhausted. Digestion is poor, appetite lost, and sleep is neither sound nor restful. At times like this Syntona Herbal Compound has proved helpful to thousands of men and women of all ages. It acts on the stomach, kidneys, liver and bowels, helps tone up the system and soon you are feeling like yourself again.

"After my baby was born I was run-down, nervous and couldn't want to eat. I had terrible headaches every day. My nerves seemed to be all on edge. I was always tired, and couldn't get any sound sleep at night. A few weeks ago I read about Syntona helping other people, so I got some and the first bottle helped me. In a very short time my appetite returned and now I enjoy all my meals, my nerves are relaxed down, and I am free of those awful headaches. I sleep well and do not get tired out as I did before."

Why not give this Pure Herbal Medicine a chance to help you, too? Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST.

WHAT THEY CAN'T CARRY, THEY LEAVE

With an idle longshoreman, right, looking on, two Russians are shown struggling with their own baggage as they prepared to depart aboard the S.S. America just before sailing from New York. The dock workers refused to load the baggage of 15 Russian nationals who sailed aboard the vessel en route to Moscow. Most of the sailing Russians were minor employees at the U.N. One crate consigned by them reportedly contained a refrigerator. They loaded whatever luggage they could handle, but the precious refrigerator was among the crates left on the dock. — Central Press Canadian.

Tokyo, May 11—(AP)—United Nations troops advanced three miles up the east Korean front today, in the west they dug in to meet an expected communist offensive.

Eighth Korea made the eastern advance north of Parallel 38 against light opposition. One infantry company marched into Inje without firing a shot.

Elsewhere the front was quiet except for restless, probing patrols. But there was continual movement back of communist lines.

The reds were building up four reptile pockets for a possible two-pronged drive on Seoul. They appeared to be massing in air area north and northwest of the old South Korean capital.

North Koreans slipping through the hills were concentrating about 30 miles north of Seoul between Munsan and Uijongbu.

Communists fired mortar shells at a truck tank patrol rumbling into Chunchon, 45 miles northeast of Seoul. For the five preceding days allied patrols had clanked through the city unopposed.

Smoke Screens Countryside

Far to the north, smoke pots screened the countryside. Troops presumably were moving under the smudge.

Loudspeakers blared across the mountaintops urging Red communists to hold their positions, telling them reinforcements were on the way. But allied officers said there was evidence of a general red withdrawal between Yanggu and Inje. It was in this eastern sector that the U.N line opened up.

The Eighth Army revised its estimate of red casualties Thursday to 2,500.

An American F-80 jet was shot down over Korea Thursday.

B-29s bombed air strips at Sariwon and Sinmak in the west in the red supply line to the western front from Pyongyang, north Korean capital. It was the seventh consecutive day or raids designed to thwart a possible red air offensive.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, May 11 (CP) Synopsis: A disturbance centred just southwest of Lake Erie this morning is moving eastward and weakening rapidly. It caused heavy rainfalls on Thursday but at present only spotty light rain is falling immediately south of Lake Erie and Lake Ontario.

A mild sunny day is in store for most southern Ontario. Tonight's cool air will again push southward to and be present mild spell.

TWELVE KILLED AFTER FOUR DAYS OF PANAMA RIOTS

President Arias Deposed By Police, Public Opinion

Panama, Panama, May 11 (AP) —Panapa's police army and public opinion gave the country a new president last night, after four days of riots and revolution in which at least 12 persons were killed and hundreds wounded.

After a three-hour battle inside and around the handsome little presidential palace, the national police —the country's only armed force — hauled deposed president Arnulfo Arias off to jail. Nine persons died in the fighting and 80 or more were wounded.

Arias' successor, Alcibiades Arosemena, was expected to move today into the palace which yesterday's fighting left a shambles. He was vice president until the Arias dictatorship ended in the fighting and 80 or more were wounded.

Arias' successor, Alcibiades Arosemena, was expected to move today into the palace which yesterday's fighting left a shambles. He was vice president until the Arias dictatorship ended in the fighting and 80 or more were wounded.

Still in the saddle as Panama's strong man was Arias' brother-in-law, Col. Jose Antonio Remon. Remon put Arias in the president's chair in 1949, then helped oust it yesterday after public clamor supported the impeachment.

Premature to Discuss Future Of Formosa While Fighting Continues in Korea--Morrison

London, May 11. (CP)—Foreign Secretary Herbert Morrison said today that it would be premature to discuss the future of Formosa as long as fighting continues in Korea.

He told the House of Commons that in Britain's opinion, the 1943 Cairo declaration, promising to return Formosa to China, could be achieved only in a general Far Eastern settlement. Korea comes first, he said.

At the 1943 conference, the United States, China and Britain agreed that Formosa—now the centre of Chiang Kai-Shek's Nationalist government and then occupied by the Japanese—should become Chinese.

It also contended that in due course Korea should become free and independent.

He said the people of Formosa should be given a say in the future of their island.

He said that Prime Minister Attlee told the House last Dec. 14 that the problem of Formosa could not be settled "until China shows by her actions that she'is not adventurist in furtherance of the Cairo declaration in respect to Japan."

Morrison said many countries now are concerned in Formosa's future and added:

"It is not, however, the most urgent of the problems facing us in the Far East.

"The most important is Korea, and in our view it would be premature to discuss the future of Formosa while operations continue in Korea."

He said the question of Formosa will come up in the context of the proposed Japanese peace treaty.

"Our aim is to secure an early peace treaty without allowing the difficult issue of Formosa to delay these negotiations."

The U.S. and Britain have been seeking early agreement on a Japanese peace treaty—one which could presumably contain only Japan's renunciation of claims to Formosa and leave to a future settlement the island's political future.

GIVEN SECOND READING

Ottawa, May 10 — (CP) — A new pipeline bill for incorporation of a company which plans a gas pipeline both to the west coast and to eastern Canada from the Peace River and Alberta, was given second reading in the Senate Wednesday.

The measure, introduced by Senator G. P. Campbell (L — Ontario), was in substance the Champion Pipeline Corporation, Ltd. Senator Campbell said the company would be backed by a Canadian group with the aid of a New York financial house.

Veteran Achieves Objectives Through Grim Determination

Today, at 39, 5ft will receive a high school teacher's certificate ending five years of struggle to achieve that ambition.

His wife now is in hospital expecting the second Canadian born child.

The square-jawed Kingston native said in an interview that he has got so much on his mind "that I'm not sure I know what I'm doing."

His story is one of success against odds.

Since 1946 when he was discharged from Canadian postal corps with 58 months of Veterans Affairs Department credits to his record, Mr. Bailey has worked his way through the years at University of Toronto and one at the Ontario College of Education.

"The government gave me $135 a month," he said. "But when there are nine in the family the monthly grocery bill runs around $100."

The depression prevented him from going to college and he went to work . . . in a grocery store.

Now he's a specialist in English and social studies and also is equipped to teach French or German.

"If in 1946 I had foreseen some of the difficulties I might have been too discouraged to start," he said. "But when the difficulties came I hoped I'd lick them as best I could—once I'd started something I don't like to turn back."

Because of rule barring new qualifications past 35, Mr. Bailey probably will have to seek a teaching job in another town. He believes he has lined up a position out of town that looks good.

Council of Blind Urges Abolition Of Means Test

Kingston, May 11 CP)—Members of the Canadian Council of the Blind today urged abolition of the means test which calls for legislation on a separate blind pension system.

Delegates to the convention of the council's Ontario division said in an act should be "separate and distinct from the Old Age Pension Act."

They said 2,398 blind persons in Ontario now are receiving pensions. Under the new arrangings should be raised so that blind persons receiving the pension could earn more than $720 a year, and a married man could earn more than $1,200 maximum."

Also the ceiling on the strict means test was raised, blind persons would be able to earn what they could without being subjected to heavy pension deductions, they said.

1,475 ALREADY ENLISTED

Ottawa, May 11. (CP)—In four days of recruiting, a total of 1,-475 officers and men have been enlisted for the new 4th Canadian Infantry Brigade, destined for service in Europe, the army announced today.

Another 2,854 applications are being dealt with.

Goal in the nation-wide recruiting drive is between 8,500 and 9,500 men, and an army spokesman described results of the campaign which opened Monday as "excellent".

Copper, Aluminum Controls Expected Soon

Ottawa, May 11 — (CP) Direct government control over copper and aluminum likely will be announced within the next two weeks, informed quarters disclosed today.

Both strategic materials and widely used in consumer goods, are likely will be allocated on the basis of consumption during the last six months.

The idea, said informants, is to discourage extensive stockpiling by speculators. If current stockpiles are found more than sufficient, the purchaser will be cut off from further supplies.

Similar controls already have been enforced on nickel.

STOLE STAMPS, CONVICTED

Toronto, May 11.—(CP)—A postal worker who robbed the mails to improve his stamp collection, sent to jail for a year, Magistrate Hyllon Mott, 36. Thursday was Dickey, post office investigator, said the only letters Mott stole were those containing stamps. They were addressed to prominent collectors.

CAR RETRIEVED

Albert Lea, Minn., May 11 (AP)—Mrs. Paul Simon had police chase away a coyote she found parked in her garden early Thursday. Later, her husband called and asked her how she liked his "surprise"—a new car. It was retrieved from the police pound.

Gold Smuggling Booming In Major Transfer Point to Far-East Marts

Kuwait, Persian Gulf, May 11—(AP)—The gold smuggling business is booming in Kuwait, major transfer point on the route to the underground gold markets of the Far East.

It's all out in the open in this sandy, oil-rich sheikdom. There is no law against the gold trade. In fact, the sheikdom likes it because it is a big source of income. Before oil began to flow, started flowing five years ago, gold was the big business.

The gold pours in chiefly by plane, at a rate of more than $12,-000,000 worth monthly, gold merchants estimate.

Most of it comes from Lebenon, where you can charter a plane to carry gold here for about $1,200. For all pratical purposes Lebanon is also a free market for gold movements.

The gold leaves Kuwait by small sailing ships. It may be hidden under a load of fruit or dates.

In the Far East, according to local dealers, Hong Kong now is the biggest port of entry for the gold trade into China. But Macao, Singapore and Bangkok are also said to be important shipping points.

Until five or six years ago the gold followed an east-to-west path. Since the war, the traffic has been reversed, and now it brings as much as double the legal price in the Far East.

One dealer said about 70,000 of Kuwait's 175,000 population are interested in the gold trade, and certain eight-or-nine- per cent of the trade's big business. Many of the sheikh's family have become rich in the trade—or big losers when the small sailing ships are lost in a sudden storm.

The present ruler of Kuwait—Sheikh Abdullah—was out of the country when the old Sheikh died about a year ago. He was down on the coast of Oman on the southern end of the gulf reclining a ship loaded with $7,000,000 worth of gold when he was aground in a storm on a run to India.

400 Office Workers Return

Toronto, May 11 — (CP)—Four hundred office workers at the Canadian General Electric plants in Peterborough and Toronto returned to work today after a two-day suspension for an unauthorized walkout.

Simultaneously, contract negotiations were resumed between the company and the International Union of Electrical Workers (C. I. O.).

The workers walked out to enforce demands for higher wages to bring office wages in line with production workers, it was said.

RECEIVES FOUR STARS

Tokyo, May 11 (AP)—Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway today received the rank of five stars of the new full general's rank. They were a gift from five officers who served on Ridway's staff in Europe in the Second World War. Ridgway was promoted from lieutenant-general yesterday.

Boy Without Hands Uses Toes To Hold Crayons

St. Thomas, Ont., May 11 (CP) —Johnny Page, 6, passes the time with crayons and picture books. Johnny isn't very successful getting the right colors for the right place, it's because he has no hands. He uses his toes.

Son of Mr. and Mrs. George Page of St. Thomas, he suffered severe burns about both arms six weeks ago when he touched a high tension wire at a hydro substation in Lorne Park, 36 miles west of London.

One hand was amputated at the wrist; the other was taken off at the elbow. Doctors say Johnny will be using hooks in about a year, undergoing skin gratfings on shoulder and arm muscles.

Meanwhile, the West Lorne Kinsmen Club is trying to raise $20,-000 for Johnny's artificial limbs and to cover medical expenses. London and St. Thomas residents have contributed $4,-000.

Provincial Police May Get Raise

Toronto, May 11 — (CP) — Attorney - General Porter said today he is considering steps to bring Ontario Provincial Police salaries in line with wages paid by municipal police forces.

"Last year, it was felt that the double yearly increases granted the force were adequate," he said in an interview. "But now it seems to be admitted that conditions have changed."

Present starting salary is $2,140.

LIBERAL MEMBER ACCUSES FORMER DEFENCE MINISTER

Pouliot Says Ralston Lost Many Canadians

Ottawa May 11 (CP)—A frontbench member of the Liberal party last night threw the Commons into a turmoil when he blamed a former Liberal Defence Minister—Col. J. L. Ralston—for the loss of "countless" Canadian and American lives during the Second World War.

The charge was made by Jean Francois Pouliot (L.-Temiscouata), 61-year-old stormy petrel of federal politics. Members of the opposition and members of the cabinet defended Col. Ralston who died a few years ago.

Mr. Pouliot's statement was described as vicious, nasty, unwarranted and nonessential.

Mr. Poulliot said that following Col. Ralston's resignation from the cabinet in November, 1944, on the conscription issue he made statements about weaknesses in the allied line on the western front which led to a major German attack in December.

Mr. Poulliot added:

". . . it is precisely on account of the untimely and uncalled for statements of that former minister of National defence in the House about the weaknesses in our army that the American soldiers and Canadian soldiers were killed in such numbers in the last days of the war."

"Nonsense," interjected Maj. E. D. Fulton (PC-Kamloops) chairman of the Second World War. Information Given

Korean Prisoner Delays Opening Of Spy Trial

Tokyo, May 11—(Reuters)—A Korean prisoner screaming "I am not a dog or cat" today delayed the opening of a spy trial in an allied military court.

He struggled against a hefty American guard in protest over a court ruling that prisoners should wear identification numbers around their necks.

The accused are charged with acts inimical to the security of the occupation and conspiracy to commit espionage.

Waves Pound Toronto Islands

Toronto, May 11 — (CP) Eight-foot waves driven by a 30-mile-an-hour east wind today crashed over the breakwaters at the Toronto islands, flooding sidewalks to a depth of 10 inches and lapping at beaches skirting the lakefront.

Harbour officials said the wind would keep the waves pounding the islands across the harbor mouth for most of the day.

Must Keep Allies Truman Message To Gen. MacArthur

Marshall Says Asia Greater War Risk Than Europe

Washington, May 11 (CP) — President Truman told Gen. MacArthur last Jan. 13 that Korean war policy must be designed to keep the support of allies whom "we would desperately need" in case of war with Russia.

This was contained in a message sent by Truman as a followup to a set of 16 possible courses of action the joint chiefs of staff had dispatched to MacArthur the previous day.

The text of Truman's message, in paraphrased form, was read by by Defence Secretary George Marshall to senate committees inquiring into MacArthur's dismissal as Far Eastern commander.

Not a Directive

Truman said his telegram "was not to be taken in any sense as a directive." He added that "its purpose is to give you something of what is in our minds regarding the political factors."

Truman's message read in part:

"Our courses of action at this time should be such as to consolidate the great majority of the United Nations. This majority is not merely part of the organization but is also the nations whom we would desperately need to count on as allies in the event the Soviet Union moves against us."

Marines, Marshall told the Senators the risk of war with Russia in the Far East is "more acute by far" than the hazard of Soviet intervention in western Europe.

Situation Not Comparable

Hickenlooper said he wondered why "we would accept a calculated risk in Korea and hesitate in war in Europe, and why on the other hand" we refuse to accept a similar calculated risk in the Far East.

Marshall said "it was felt we have no choice on western Europe but to proceed as we did, unless we allowed the free world to go by default to communist domination."

He said the situation is not comparable in Korea, "where we have the whole issue in the air, whether we can extend that action without involving an enlarged war on the Chinese side, on a full war because of the reactions of the Russians."

" . . . The situation as to the possible actions of the Soviet government is far more serious in Europe than that is western Europe. Because if they took over the community of interests and co-operative arrangement with China at this time, that would be a very great loss to them of something they now possess."

BODY RECOVERED

St. Catharines, May 11 (CP)— The body of Louis Molnar, 40, of Niagara Falls was taken from the water at Queenston early today by a freighter headed up the Welland Canal. Molnar has been missing since March 5 when he fell into the Niagara River off the docks at Queenston. Police and friends were fishing for smelts.

Mentally-Ill Vets Being Talked Out Of Their Terror Dreams as They Sleep

Cincinnati, May 11—(AP)—Mentally-ill war veterans are being talked out of their "terror dreams" by a prayer and the power of suggestion.

The American Psychiatric Association today heard a veterans administration doctor describe the use of a recorded "suggestion" treatment while patients sleep.

"I can talk to them as they sometimes, completely and in less than an hour," is the theory, Dr. Schmidhoefer said. He is a specialist in "mind a mind, relaxing more."

Dr. Earnest Schmidhoefer of Memphis reported these results: "Most patients have reported gratifying results within two to four weeks. Some have stated that they are able to take daytime naps for the first time in their lives. Others say sleep becomes less fitful and more refreshing.

Hypnosis is sometimes used in being replaced by more pleasant dreams of the same general theme or all sorts is allegedly reduced."

There were indications of a general decrease in the amount of awakening during the night.

Dr. Schmidhoefer said his patients are told to relax, to smoke, to pace about restlessly. . . .

400 LEGIONNAIRES TO MEET AT MADOC

With the provincial president of the Ontario Legion officials in attendance the Eastern District of the Canadian Legion will hold a special meeting in Madoc on Sunday. Upwards of 400 Legionnaires are expected to attend the meeting which will feature the election of officers for the coming year.

PREWEE LEAGUE BEING ORGANIZED

Boys of peewee age (under 13) who want to play softball this summer are requested to register their names at the Moira Street Fire Hall on Saturday at one o'clock. The Peewee League is being sponsored by the Belleville Commercial Softball League, and business men of the city.

$50 IN SACK STOLEN FROM GAS STATION

Between $50 and $60 in a gunny sack at the Patterson Service Station on Dundas Street, West, was stolen last night by intruders, Police officers in the police cruiser found the lunch-kit beside their routine check shortly after midnight. Entrance was gained by smashing a pane of glass.

SPECIAL MEETING

Lieut. Col. Max Porritt, MC, commanding officer of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment (reserve), has called a special meeting of his company commanders for tonight. The conference will take place in the regimental headquarters at Church Street armouries and will have to do mainly with recruiting for the active force.

Old 'Sweat' Ready to Join Up Again

"Old soldiers never die, nor do they fade away" to paraphrase what has lately become a much-reiterated statement.

They're telling the story in recruiting circles of the "ancient sweat" who declared he had not had "enough of the army and war."

He presented himself to a recruiting office in a nearby centre and offered to enlist.

He smiled. "How old are you, dad?" he queried.

"Forty-five, sir," came back the quite-sprightly answer.

"Hmmmm" mused the R. O. "How come all those medals?"

"They belonged to my late father," replied the old soldier, quick as lightning.

"Sorry, dad, but we can't take you in yet," said the R. O.

Later it was discovered he was 81 years of age and was a veteran of the Boer War, and World War I.

POLICE COURT

Liquor Control Act charges predominated in the city magistrate's court this morning as no less than five drunks, up for second, third and fourth offences, appeared before Magistrate T. Y. Wills.

Two offenders charged with second offences had fines and costs set at $25 or one month in jail. One man up for third offence will spend the next thirty days in the county jail, while a fourth offender will spend the same time in custody.

Another man up for fourth offence was remanded to appear next Tuesday in court.

Important Motion Will be Placed Before Convention

"Maintenance of continuity of Canadian families through withdrawal from combat areas of sole remaining members, with the exception of the short recommendation to be made at the annual convention of the Army, Navy, Air Force Veterans in Canada scheduled for Toronto in June," Jack Londberg, 1st vice president of the Ontario Provincial Command said today.

It is felt that in the event of a family having three or more sons in the firing line, in case of war, and all but one are killed in action, the remaining member should be withdrawn and placed in a non-combat area.

The convention," Lundberg said, "is by far the most important in the history of the organization." Belleville delegation, composed of branch president Bill Ford, secretary Ken Edgecombe, James Lazenby and Welcurer Bert Wells, will present recommendations concerning veterans' benefits and unemployment insurance. Londberg will attend in his official capacity.

The convention, a four-day conclave will terminate with a reunion and church parade on June 17th. Members of the various branches will travel by bus and train to take part in affair. It is expected one or more buses will be chartered to take the Belleville contingent.

Comic Includes Belleville Among 'Wild Places'

The Chamber of Commerce, and the Belleville Rotarians, may have destroyed all their radios by now, if they heard a comedy broadcast out of Toronto (CBL) last evening. One line in the script referred exactly complimentary to the fine city of Belleville.

Part of the show was built around a circus, and in particular, its freak show. One of the wits (?) on the program was acting as barker, and during his spiel extolling the freaks inside the tent, claimed that there were present fat ladies, thin men, dog faced boys and others from all the strange places of the world. Then came the punch line. "Hurry, hurry," he said, "See the freaks from Singapore, Hong Kong and that strangest of all wild places — Belleville!"

Chances are that man will never play this town.

Inspector Names Boss of Wire Service in Ont.

Toronto, May 11. (CP)—Inspector William Tomlinson, head of the provincial police anti-gambling squad, testified Thursday that a Toronto man, "a professional operator", is boss of the wire service that feeds racing news to bookmakers in Montreal, Hamilton, Windsor and Toronto.

Rober, he said, also operates the Daily Turf and Sporting News, "a scratch sheet", and had a radio station broadcasting race results and track entry changes.

The inspector connected Rober with the operation of race news services in Windsor, uncovered by provincial police last year in a series of investigations climaxed by a raid Dec. 2 which crippled the alleged source of race news relayed by telephone to Detroit.

Dream Materializes for Owner, Staff Belleville Motor Car Co. As New Showrooms Opened

A dream came true Thursday evening for Mr. and Mrs. A. E. "Al" Reynolds and staff of the Belleville Motor Car Company, Ltd., and their host of friends and customers.

After months of planning, building and preparation, the new showroom, parts department and general offices were completed and they celebrated the occasion with a pre-opening day banquet at which district dealers in Ford products and other supplies were guests. Present too was Mr. M. E. Snedden, of Windsor, head of the Mercury, Lincoln, Meteor division.

Over two hundred persons, including staff members of the Belleville Motor Car Company and their wives, sat down to a bountiful banquet served by the staff of Lattimer's Tea Room. Mantle of responsibility for the banquet program consisting of musical entertainment and congratulatory messages from many of the guests was Brig. Fraser Fulton, of Northern Electric.

Served in Garage

The banquet was served in the service garage, but scrubbed and painted floors, gleaming white walls and ceilings, and with festive streamers pinned up for the occasion belied the fact.

As head of the Mercury-Lincoln-Meteor division Mr. Snedden minutely criticized the development for the economy restrictions recently imposed to curb luxury buying. "The motor," he said, "had been made to curb inflating which he described as the ability of people to buy goods in excess of the supply."

Restrictions on automobile buying simply increased the inflationary pressure, he maintained. The auto was one of the last luxury class, but was a vitally necessary means of transportation.

Asks Industry Barometer

He said that the auto industry was the barometer of Canadian industry and prosperity. Four hundred thousand passenger cars had been sold in Canada in 1950 as compared with 125,000 before the war.

ANAF Endorse $400 Scholarships To Two Schools

Branch No. 201, Army, Navy, Air Force Veterans in Canada at its regular monthly meeting last night endorsed a committee resolution recommending the awards of annual scholarships amounting to $400 to children of war veterans attending St. Michael's Academy and the Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School.

The recommendation was presented to the meeting by comrade the Rev. F. H. Richer, chairman of the scholarship committee which included comrades Art. Cole, James Lazenby and Ken Edgecombe.

The committee, it was pointed out by the chairman, had conducted extensive investigations, and received the unanimous co-operation of the Board of Education and officials of St. Michael's Academy.

The scholarships, three all told include one each for St. Michael's for junior matriculation grades; $150 to the Belleville Collegiate Institute for senior matriculation graduates and $100 to the Vocational School for all gradings.

Students eligible for the scholarships must be sons or daughters of war veterans regardless of parental war organization affiliation.

Dwindling Milk Supply Forces Factory to Close

3rd Sidney — A dwindling milk supply caused to a certain extent by farmers turning to the fluid milk market has caused the Sidney Cheese and Butter Company, 3rd concession of Sidney to close. A special meeting of the factory shareholders was held Thursday with the decision being made to sell all equipment, together with the factory and factory residence.

The factory has been ready to open for the season with the cheese maker hired and all supplies purchased. However, it was made a survey and found the milk supply was insufficient to operate the factory efficiently. They then called the general meeting at which all points attended and decided to close the plant. The cheese maker Art Carleton had made a name for the plant in four seasons.

The factory has been in operation for nearly 80 years, but in recent years this number had dropped to less than half. Some of the patrons' milk this season will go to Mountain View factory, while other farmers will send to Wallbridge and to Frankford.

MODEL FOR INDUSTRY

Rates of Pay In Active Army Are Attractive

Members of the reserve battalion of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment have been given outstripped civilians in application for enlistment in Canada's active Service Force.

Today, Lieut. Angus Duffy, administration and training officer of the regiment announced that 80 potential recruits have been forwarded to Kingston for documentation and examination from this city and the regimental area.

Sixty-six of this number were members of the reserve force with the remainder being civilians.

From the regiment has come 24 from Belleville headquarters; 21 from Picton; 16 from Trenton, three from Frankford and two from Bancroft.

Lieut. Duffy again reminded former non-commissioned officers of the first battalion that they will be accepted with their rank on discharge. However, they must undergo a 40-day trial and if not qualified at the expiry of this period can resume their civilian jobs.

Rates of pay are attractive, he pointed out. An untrained private of the rank and status receives $79 per month; a trained private $93 and a private first class, $90. A married private with no children receives a marriage allowance of $20 per month; with one child an allowance of $42, or $151; $155 or $162, according to training status. With two children, $231 and with two or more children $216.

Trenton-Based Helicopter Sent To Fight Fire

Toronto, May 11 (CP) — All forest fires in the province were reported well under control today with the exception of one 48 miles north of Biloli River in the Sault Ste. Marie district.

Land and Forest officials said that the RCAF had sent its Trenton-based Sikorsky helicopter to the fire area to lend aid in subduing the blaze which has covered an area of approximately 300 acres.

The fire spread Thursday in a southwesterly direction and today bulldozers moved in to cut a firebreak in its path. A tank with 400 gallons of water-chemical pack tractor, both recently developed by the department for use in rough terrain, have also been sent to the fire area.

Although rain has improved conditions in other parts of the province, the forest fire hazard remains "very high" in the Algonquin Blind River area and other sections of the north. Fire control officers continued to urge all woods travellers and workers to exercise extreme care with smoking materials and camp fires.

There is a total of 12 fires being handled throughout Ontario. The Sault Ste. Marie had six; Sudbury three; North Bay two; and Fort Frances one.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, May 11 (CP)—Prices steadied at their lower levels as the session progressed on the stock market today.

Continuing Thursday's weakness they eased at the opening and then remained there. Trading was the slowest it has been this week. Volume for the first three hours of 693,000 shares was about 214,000 fewer than the same period Thursday.

In industrial papers, steels, utilities, foods, refining oils and manufacturing companies showed a majority of losses. Banks and agriculturals were higher and the rest of the board was mixed. Most changes were fractional.

Base metals had a mixed tinge but more issues were on the downside. Steep Rock, Quemont, International Nickel, New Calumet, East Sullivan and Falconbridge pace the list lower.

Western oils were fairly mixed but lower.

BUFFALO LIVESTOCK

Buffalo, N.Y., May 11 (AP)—Cattle 100: Receipts very light, early trading moderate, market about steady; good dairy type heifers 23.50-24.50; cutters 22.00-24.50; canners 19.50-17.50; good weighty sausage bulls 22.50-21.50; lightweight cutters 21.00-37.00.

Calves 150: Good and choice handyweight calves 40.00-41.00; culls and strongweight bobs 35.00-37.00.

Hogs 300: Good and choice nearby hogs 21.50-22.00; good sows 19.50-19.00.

Sheep and lambs: Market not established.

HOGS

Other markets were not reported.

ON CRITICAL LIST

Former U. S. Secretary of State Cordell Hull has been placed on the "critical" list at the U. S. Naval hospital, Bethesda, Md. In the Roosevelt administration, he was the principal exponent of the "good neighbor" policy. — Central Press Canadian.

PRODUCE MARKET

Creamery prints, first grade, 63-65 cents.

The egg market was steady with light receipts. Country shippers quoted graded eggs, cases free: Grade A large, 59-60; A medium, 57-58. A pullet 55-56; Grade C 41-42. Wholesale to retail: Extra large 63-64; A medium 61-62; A pullet 60-61; Grade B 57-59; Grade C 48-50.

Butter solids: First grade 63, cents (nominal); second grade not established.

NEW BOX CARS DELIVERED

Montreal, May 11 — (CP) The first of 5,000 new box cars went into Canadian National Railways service today and it is expected that 1,200 of the new cars will be added to the CNR freight fleet by the end of this month. The balance of 3,800 cars is to be delivered by August.

Delivery of the new units will increase the number of CNR box cars to more than 80,000.

DISCUSSIONS REACH STALEMATE

Mallorytown, May 11 (CP) — Salary discussions between the school board and teachers have reached a stalemate in this eastern Ontario village. Teachers of secondary school want an $800 salary increase. School board has asked Fred B. Fense of Kingston, president of the Ontario urban and Rural School Trustees Association, to represent it at a meeting with teachers federation representatives Wednesday.

Tear up Street To Annoy Reds

That is what the anti-communist administration of Vienna appeared up to today.

The city shut off for "repairs" an important stretch of the Ringstrasse, a wide boulevard on which 500,000 blue-shirted communist youths plan to march Saturday during a peace rally.

The city administration said the work had been planned for weeks and had nothing to do with the rally.

Philadelphia Spinster Founded Mother's Day

Toronto, May 11 (CP) — The celebration Sunday of Mother's Day will mark an observance started by Anna M. Jarvis, a lonely Philadelphia spinster who fought vigorously but in vain against its commercialization.

Miss Jarvis founded Mother's Day as the second anniversary of her own mother's death—May 9, 1907—by inviting a few friends at her home for a memorial service.

The movement spread and in 1914 U.S. President Woodrow Wilson proclaimed the second Sunday in May as Mother's Day.

Cadet Officers Stripped of Rank For Disobedience

Peterborough, May 11 (CP) — Twenty army cadet officers have been stripped of their rank for refusing to take part in a physical training class inspection.

The officers, members of the Collegiate and Vocational School Cadet Corps No. 13, eastern Ontario area, were demoted Wednesday during the school's annual inspection.

The action occurred after the officers felt out during the inspection and stood in a group behind the regiment. Lieut-Col. David Ingram, who didn't take part in the demonstration, resigned in protest over the action.

Cadet regulations, set up this year for the first time, require officers to take part in the training class. It is standard army procedure that officers take physical training with the troops.

Ingram said the officers wanted an explanation of why they had to take part in classes during inspection but were told only that regulation required it.

When stripped of rank, the officers formed a troop and, with tunics and shirts open, led the corps back to the collegiate.

The occasion now is recognized in 40 countries.

ADMISSIONS' RECORD

Chicago, May 11 (AP)—Patients entered hospitals in the United States last year at the rate of one every 1.2 seconds. The 17,023,813 admissions was a record, comparing with 16,659,973 the previous year.

NEW APPROACH

Peterborough, May 11 (CP) — A new approach to a drive-in theatre was tried last night by Harry Oakman, An aerial photographer, he landed his Piper Cub plane at the rear of the parked cars.

Our Respects...

TO MOTHERS EVERYWHERE ON MOTHER'S DAY SUNDAY, MAY 13th

Now, It's pretty hard to talk of Used Cars on Mother's Day ... but we wonder if maybe it's not a bad idea to address this advertisement this week to the Mothers of Belleville and District. When Father buys a Used Car, invariably, Mother is consulted, and while her opinion is based to quite an extent on the look of the car, yet she is also shrewd enough to question the mechanical condition before giving her final O.K., and she'll want to drive it, too!

TRUDEAU CARS are checked and repaired or rebuilt in our own Car rebuilding factory — that's why we know they're mechanically sound before we sell them. When you buy a Trudeau Guaranteed Car, the reputation which we have built over the past 25 years stands solidly behind our guarantee. Better tell Dad when he talks about a Used Car to SEE TRUDEAU'S FIRST.

AN OUTRAGE

Animal lovers with an ounce of decency in their bones have every right to be in an outraged mood these past ten days. Last week, dogs valued at more than $10,000 were found cooped up in crates and boxes in a barn near Pickering, subjected to treatment that could only be classed as an utter shame.

One dog had guns blind; it was left in a box so small that it could neither turn around nor stand up. Many of the dogs were vicious as a result of a bread and water diet that reduced them to gaunt shadows of their former fine selves. That is exactly the most forceful form, because it is vented on animals which can make no reply.

Now comes a story from Malton, where more than a score of fine Clydesdale show horses were slowly being starved to death in stalls that had not been cleaned for more than a month. There was no hay, no straw. The animals stood in 18 inches of manure. Unbelievably, the man who supposedly owns the horses had exhibited some of them at the Royal Winter Fair last year. His only stated reason for not caring for the animals in better fashion was that he was too busy seeding his land.

Still another case is reported at Brantford, where four police dog puppies were drowned by the simple expedient of tying their tails together and throwing them into the Grand River. When one pup was lifted from the river, all four were lifted, so securely were their tails tied together.

Evidence of such sadism, in all three cases, is sickening. No excuse can be found in any right thinking person's mind for such utter disregard of animals. It is an indictment against society in general for allowing such people to have control over animals at any time, in any way.

The sad part of the situation is that no punishment can be given humans who engage in such antics that is in any way proportionate to the suffering they have visited upon the animals. Society would not stand to see men tortured by starvation or placed in cages as punishment for their deeds. That sort of thing went out with the Middle Ages, and returns only during wartime, when unscrupulous nations resort to primitive prison tactics.

Nevertheless, the general reaction to such stories of filth and degradation is one of rage. That such acts should take place in these times is an insult to modern canons of justice and civilization as a whole.

The incidents also point up the value of the Humane Society, an organization which gets little credit the best part of the time for the work that it does. Action on the cruelty cases is brought through them, and they provide a service which is at the call of all citizens at all times.

In its history, the Humane Society has been accused of cruelty itself. What the critics do not realize is that any actions the Society takes are motivated by kindness in the first place, and any fine that any animal faces under Society hands is painless.

Regardless of that, ample punishment should be provided for persons engaging in cruelty to animals.

THEY TELL LIES EVERY DAY

It is amusing to see how a few actions by a handful of Russians can make all the communist propaganda in the world look silly. We have all heard of the marvelous benefits inherent in the communist system, of the freedoms that are a part of everyday life in the U.S.S.R. The glories of successive Five Year Plans have been directed to the heavens, and the efficiency of Soviet production has been brought to the attention time and time again.

It is all destroyed by fifteen Russians who were starting their homeward trek from New York. All diplomats, and especially those returning to their home countries, they piled the dockside with television sets, washing machines, refrigerators, and other shiny examples of overbearing and disgusting American capitalism. They had hoped to be able to get the luxuries home to make life a little more comfortable.

But the diplomats had reckoned without the longshoremen who were slated to load the Russian prizes on the ship. The stevedores spotted the labels on the crates, and that was all they needed to lift a hand, not even to put personal baggage on board. They did, however, offer the use of a hand truck, and the diplomats, faced with the dilemma, loaded their own personal gear. The crates were too much for them to handle, and the luxuries stayed on the dock.

Surely, in the glorious communist state, diplomats, if not the peasants, have some privileges. Surely they must be able to buy such goods at economical state-run stores, and surely there is plenty for all. They, then, the buying spree? The facts are that the Russian hierarchy is able to procure the luxury items, even cars, but minor officials are not in the state. A new statement to the contrary is a lie, a deliberate attempt to make things seem what they are not.

We do not condone the longshoremen's actions; neither do we condemn them. In America, or Canada, it is their privilege to follow their purse, according to their beliefs. In Russia or her satellites, the issue would have been settled by rubber hose, by knife, by whip, and by gun. On this side of the ocean, it is settled by preference.

It only takes one bomb to break down all the propaganda the Soviet Union might hand out in fifty years.

UNCLE

An uncle should be very proud
That such an honor is allowed,
And wear the title, day by day,
Like medals generals display.

A father rank can still be had,
Which is, of course, to be a dad.
Though sons alone that title

But when a man has looked and smiled
On brother's, or a sister's child,
He rises to an uncle's rank,
And gratefully the Lord should thank.

I'd say an uncle's pleasant task
Is to provide what children ask,
And frequently for them to buy

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Mackenzie King once told me that he had tried two or three times, but right back in fishing, at the urging of friends. But on those few occasion he went fishing, they had no luck back and he had lost interest in it.

It is very important to him to choose the time and the place, when attempting to convert a friend to angling. Every addict of the sport knows that there are plenty of blank days. These do not encourage the novice, nearly excite him all the more. If fishing were fire, it would be classed as dull as visiting the fish store. But the beginner who has no luck is aware of this. The beginner should always catch fish. Never take a possible convert on a trip that is doubtful.

If Mackenzie King's friends had borne this in mind, the whole course of the man's life might have been changed. The first thing that could have happened to him would have been marriage. You can't become an angler without cultivating the homes of your companions, not in the parlor or living room, but right back in the kitchen, where the trout are laid on the table. You even go upstairs to the attic or down to the cellar of your friends' homes to see your catch packed and ready. It is in such places you meet the sisters of your companions in unpresentable conditions, with their hair in curlers, and wearing old kimonos or sweaters. They might be even at the washtubs or at the cakes in the oven. It is seeing girls in this condition that finishes a man. Even Mackenzie King with all his caution could hardly have withstood the sweet attentions of his angling companions' sisters washing the dishes. That is mortally fatal.

But, no. Mackenzie King never caught a fish. He was always worn out him down to size. No children bothered the life out of him. In solitary dedication, he pursued his way, all because his friends took him fishing on a dud day.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

THE MEANING OF HOLY

The Sabbath is a holy day. The Bible is a holy book. The Church is holy. That is the meaning of the word "holy!" People use it every day and yet many who use it probably have no real idea what it means.

A thing is holy if it belongs in a special way to God. Or another definition would be that a thing is holy if it is set apart from the world and dedicated in a very special way to God's use. The Bible is in a very special way God's Book, for in it we learn about God and how we may live our lives. The Sabbath is a day set apart by God for special purposes. The Church is holy because it is separated from the world's selfish interests. It is an institution by which God makes known in a particularly effective fashion His will for man. It does not stand apart from the world indefinitely. It separates itself from everything in the world which is held apart from God's will and glory and dedicates itself to anything which will advance the Christian kingdom which Christ has set up in the world.

Those relationships which will draw us nearer to God. Therefore it is a holy day—one which belongs in a special way to God.

OUR TOWN

By JACK SCOTT

GOODBYE, ITALY

Venice, Italy.—Now comes the time to say goodbye to Italy. For while we expect to pass through this country on our way back from Yugoslavia to Switzerland and Germany, there will be no time to write.

Just one word about this very feminine city, which refuses to die. Honestly, you can't call the old lady lovely—not when the cold wind is whipping up the canal and streets anyway. But even the most hardboiled North American must admit that this waterlogged old beauty carries herself in her old age with unique pride and charm.

But, if Venice dies hard—it is dying.

No longer do the gondoliers sing as they propel the graceful craft on the canals. They are too busy dodging motor boats and maybe fumes of gasoline exhaust till the urge of the olden days is bolstered to break forth into song.

We heard singing here all night. But it was a muffle party of Americans dragging themselves home from a night club in the early hours of the morning'. And they were coming afoot through a back alleyway.

The thing we will remember most vividly of this 1951 visit to Italy was far removed from the glamour and sophistication of Rome. It was the little drama that took place in an open-air cafe in Venice.

A little girl of about nine or ten had very large eyes, which is a set with tea and pastries. She is neither very dark nor very fair, but very big, dark, appealing eyes. She holds out toward the people at the various tables a handful of colored cards—with a little picture of some saint or other. But at each table she is driven off the cake plate, the hunger almost literally leaps from her eyes, for it is hard for her to stand and in the twinking of an eye things begin to disappear. Delight and grief take leap to the hungry child's eyes. But two elaborately uniformed policemen frown toward the table. From the other direction comes a harassed waiter. In his hand he soon can read the whole story of Italy of 1951. He it at one and the same time amuses for the little girl to escape the police, but also professionally annoyed with her for driving off the trade of customers. But the child disappears in less time than the twinkling of an eye.

It's all over in a flash—and yet here is your story of Italy today. The most important thing about this country, as of now, is the terrible grinding poverty of the people. In some cases it is worse than the poverty I saw in India.

In India, you would have to be impressed by the appalling backwardness of the great mass of the people. It's right out in the open. But it is driven down to hide in one. There is the world on show—the rich people who eat at the swank hotels and on sight-seeing tours. And there is the other world so carefully kept out of sight.

We have found living here just as expensive as in America. If anything, the hotel rates are higher for comparable service. Money runs away here like water through a sieve. There is a terrible overwhelming majority of the white get incomes so small that you marvel how they ever manage to stay alive.

Yet, looking in a good university here gets the equivalent of about $25 a month—and that kind of a white-collar job as well in order to live. So all down the line. Here, as all around the Mediterranean, the rich live on a standard more luxurious than that of the ultra-wealthy even in America. And the poor live in distracting conditions which would have driven North Americans to desperate measures long ago.

In Italy, as in every other country I have been on this-trip, there is an amazing reservoir of goodwill for Canada. It is really heart-warming to see how these people throw a welcome when they take you for an American, and you say, "No, we are Canadians." Believe me, this is not so. Here in Italy, our army won a terrific battle than that—which broke the back of Fascism. They actually won the hearts of the people.

At a bus stop yesterday, a petite little lady, (beauty on another basis not ours) hurried over, breathless. She heard I was a Canadian and wanted to say thank you to all Canada because a Canadian army doctor (Sutherland of Vancouver) had brought her through a critical illness.

"He gave me life," she said twice, and meant it, too.

Incidentally, I have found why the Italian girls are so beautiful—why chic little girls are hostesses. The aisles are so narrow that, regardless of international airline standards, just could not make it.

Mackenzie's Column

Britain's Action In Cutting Rubber Exports Helpful

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

Spurred by pressure both at home and abroad, Britain today announces that it is cutting off all rubber exports to communist China and North Korea for the year.

That is to say, British agrees to drop this vastly-important phase of what is in effect trade with the enemy. Britain already has joined with Russia in an alliance to destroy the democracies, and Britain's ally is famous, the aggressor by the United Nations for her assault on Korea.

Appreciation and Relief

This step will be received with appreciation and relief in the U.S. and Americans will do well not to indulge in holier-than-thou attitudes of their immediate way of trade. They shouldn't forget how they sold scrap iron, oil and iron into Japan when she obviously was on the rampage just before Pearl Harbor.

Britain's action strengthens the belief that Britain (and France) likewise will support Mossadegh proposal in the U.N. for a world-wide embargo on munitions, arms, ammunition and war material to communist China and North Korea.

Of course the most effective embargo would be an all-out reshipment of arms to Chiang Kai-shek. However, a few are better than no embargo.

The announcement was made in the House of Commons after Foreign Secretary Herbert Morrison Churchill, called for an immediate stoppage of all British rubber shipments to Red China. He said the government's trade policy at Britain's recognition of communist China have been impairing Anglo-American relations.

Certainly Britain's action may be expected to help "clear the air." Nothing could be more illogical than for the democracies to lend support to a country making war on the U.N.

Rubber isn't an atomic weapon but it can be used to help kill American and British soldiers.

Churchill's appraisal of the position displays the shrewd common sense for which he is famous. He emphasizes the importance of keeping Anglo-American relations on a sound level.

That strikes this columnist as putting a finger on a basic issue of top priority. The two countries form the vital keystone in the democracies.

CONSTABLE CHARGED

Hawkesbury, May 10 (CP) — An RCMP constable will be charged with impaired driving following a crash in which a car passenger was burned to death, Provincial Police Attorney W. B. Hall said today.

A coroner's jury Wednesday night found Constable John Malkin of Rockcliffe RCMP barracks, near Ottawa, responsible for the crash in which Andrew W. MacDonnell of Green Valley, Ont., was burned to death. The accident occurred on the main highway shortly after midnight April 30.

Personal Health Talks

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

Signed Letters, Not More Than One Page, or 100 Words long, Pertaining to Personal Health and Hygiene, Not to Diseases, Symptoms or Treatment, Will Be Answered Personally by Dr. Brady if a Stamped, Self-Addressed Envelope is Enclosed, Etc.

THAT RUMOR OF THE CONDUCTOR'S DEMISE

This is the anniversary of the first syndicated health column. Lest some stup—some one misinterpret the word (as some dentists and physicians have done in attempts to discredit this column) here is Webster's definition Syndicate: To sell an article for simultaneous use in many newspapers or magazines;' to contract for publication through a syndicate; a business concern which sells to the press etc. In other words, I supply the goods to the syndicate wholesale and the syndicate retails to the consumers.

The consumers who read this column in the first daily health column to be syndicated, I discovered after my column had been launched that Dr. William A. Evans had preceded me as a newspaper health columnist, by two years. However, Dr. Evans did not precede me as a syndicated health columnist. Be that as it may I can't claim to be the World's first health columnist by a jot. That distinction belongs to Dr. Evans.

I believe this column has stirred things up, shall we say, more than all other health columns combined, Many of the things stirred up have reacted, directly or indirectly, to my benefit in consequence, to wit, getting me married. That, so far, I say, this is painful, and it is, at the moment, but when the kindly symptoms abate and I can look back and reminds me that after all the customer was small potatoes, the whole thing seems nearly amusing. For good morale the other side of the ledger assures me that some of the things I have harped on incessantly have contributed substantially to the betterments or reforms in the practice of medicine—the perpetration of insalliteracy, for example. The satisfaction I derive from this more than compensates for the things I have failed to get by the gradual cutting of copy till the mangled remains seem unrecognizable. Then when it is finally dropped readers will assume of Doc Brady has retired, etc.

This assumption, I suspect, has lent some probability to the story, various rich doctors and bunk merchants have for years told their gullible customers—namely that there is no such person as Dr. William Brady—Dr. Brady died long ago and the name is now used by a syndicate of medical men to promote something or other. That is not true. It is difficult to imagine, because as a group the medical men are the most honest, would probably be happier if I were out of this world.

I began my career as a newspaper in that iron mining town in Northern Minnesota, I forget the year, as a cub-reporter in an editorial article that although Dr. Brady had been under the care of three many times he still ground out his daily health articles etc. I suggested that if I can deed somebody ought to tell me so that I may behave as a ghost should behave. When the editor awoke—and saw my column right there in his own paper—he published it without the correction or apology. But, like every libel that there may ever be through the statute of limitations has still some time to go I shall not sue anybody on the line. Where he had the, slightest intent to damage my reputation is just not such a much confidence in the charlatans), this semi - official confirmation of the rumor of my demise was not cancelled by the subsequent correction.

Now, as my work lady informs me that she has read and believed me for years. Recently she mentioned something she saw in it to a relative when she was on a visit in Montreal.

The relative promptly disillusioned her. She informed her that "Dr. Brady, who once really wrote the column, has been dead for years." Which is why the column is being carried on by his successors." The lady says she has a little, when the relative explained this and hopes I can help her win her bet.

In the scientific sense of the word I'm probably half dead now for, I've averaged only 4 hours sleep during since the instant I attained the peak of growth and developmental commencement in the neighborhood of 25. Physical degeneration sets in, as a rule, between the ages of 30 and 45.

In the common sense of the word I'm not dead yet. It may be just the newsprint shortage. Or out of the kindness of his daily article and what's left may sound as though it were composed on the morgue.

I hope the New York lady can get a substantial bet with her relative as I'm not quite a good piece of it. I am confident I could have written the column when the Montreal man may stipulate, that the same Dr. Wm. Brady who has been writing the column before he was—the big war—still conducts it and that I had a standing, privy, substitute or assistant even temporarily. Except, I am happy to say, occasional contributions by medical colleagues, dentists, medical students, nutritionists, research technicians, physiparas and bone fighters who have been scanning by say that I think you children should hear.

Hydro Engineer Visualizes Vast Network of Lines

Montreal, May 11 — (CP) Richard L. Hearn of Toronto, general manager and chief engineer of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario, today foresaw a "vast network of power" lines stretching from Manitoba on the west to Quebec on the east and from James Bay in the north to New York State and Michigan in the south."

The forecast was made in a paper prepared for delivery before the 56th annual general meeting of the Engineering Institute of Canada.

"The authorities of Ontario, in conjunction with those of Manitoba, are continuing studies with a view to an interconnection which would benefit both provinces in the future," he said. "Studies are also being made in connection with further interconnections with the United States which would be beneficial in time of emergencies."

Mr. Hearn's paper included a tabulated summary of steam generating stations under construction by the Commission in the Toronto and Windsor and a proposed redevelopment of Niagara Falls.

The proposed new station at Niagara Falls "will have a capacity of 450,000 kilowatts and is expected to be in operation by 1954. Until it is in operation, we expect that the Toronto - Windsor steam stations, together with three new plants on the Ottawa River, will be capable of providing the capacity to meet all demands."

Dewey Urges 'Absolute And Total' Embargo

New York, May 11 — (AP) — Governor Thomas E. Dewey last night urged an "absolute and total" embargo by the free world against trade of any kind with communist China.

It was one of 11 planks in a global policy which he said is most urgently needed to stop Russia from taking the world "bit by bit."

The speech — a major foreign policy address by a two - time candidate for president was prepared for the third annual dinner of the New York State Republican Committee.

Dewey said:

"While the pace will change from time to time, this war will continue the rest of our lives or so long as communism rules Russia."

His 11 points included:

No recognition of red China and use of the veto if needed to keep her out of the U.N.

More aid for Chiang Kai-Shek's Nationalists and releasing his troops for any use he wants to make of them against the Chinese mainland;

Gen. MacArthur Partially Right Says Shawcross

London, May 11—(CP)— The House of Commons was told yesterday that Gen. MacArthur was partially right when he talked about petroleum products being listed on a British report of exports to communist China.

But MacArthur neglected to add, the Commons was told, that the word after each Item was "nil".

MacArthur, testifying before the Senate Armed Services and Foreign Relations Committee in Washington last week, read a list of strategic materials being shipped to communist China out of Hong Kong. Among a report which he said was received from the American consul-general in Hong Kong.

Sir Hartley Shawcross, president of the board of trade, told the General apparently had been quoting from a secret report, furnished by the British to U.S. authorities, "as part of the system of keeping a careful check on imports to China."

But General MacArthur," Shawcross said, "is correctly reported, seemed not to have appreciated fully the nature of the information.

"He had referred to petroleum, diesel oil, fuel oils, gasoline, kerosene and lubricants as being in the list, a recital which naturally caused great anxiety. But he did not appear to have mentioned that the list showed nil quantities were exported."

The Manchester Guardian, commenting today on the statement, said MacArthur's declarations "begin to look very shaky."

Shawcross said: "I don't want to reduce this thing to an absurdity. from the list . . . General MacArthur selected cameras.

Still Seeking Suitable Site For Collegiate

Orwekan, May 11 —(CP)—The Brantford board of education still seeking a suitable site for the erection of a new collegiate, approached the Six Nations Indian Council Thursday for a lease of approximately 20 acres of the Indian-owned Glebe property on the eastern outskirts of Brantford.

The Indians decided to put the matter over for a week and give their decision at a special council meeting next Thursday night.

The new approach follows attempts by the city last year to purchase the whole parcel of about 102 acres. The matter of sale was put to a vote among the people of the Six Nations Reservation but it was voted down for lack of a clear majority.

Trustee E. G. Reeves told the council that expropriation was never contemplated but that board representatives had attempted to find out whether the board had a right to expropriate.

Learned Cure for Snoring Too Late Chicago Man's Wife Seeks Divorce

The 35-year-old egg inspector came jubilantly into superior court Thursday to reclaim the affections of his wife, Florence, 30, an attractive blonde who agreed a month ago to hold up her suit for separate maintenance while he sought a cure for his big snore. Richard's night noises, she maintained, had wrecked her health.

Richard fought his affliction with gusto. He moved into a small hotel room. He parted over more than 500 suggested cures submitted by snore-weary folk in many cities who had learned of his plight.

They included hypnotism, an onion-garlic-goat's milk diet, the removal of tonsils, blood transfusions, and sleeping with a rubber bone around the neck.

With a hopeful sidewise glance at his pretty wife, the young man informed Judge Rudolph F. Desort that his snoring days were over. But before he could elaborate, his wife's lawyer intervened.

He told the court that Mrs. Michalak felt she could not live up to her agreement and return to Richard, whom she married two years ago. He said she intended to file suit for divorce.

Richard angrily handed the court three letters from fellow listeners in hotel. The letters said no snores had been heard coming from Richard's room for more than a week.

Michalak didn't disclose his snore-cure technique. His wife's only comment to reporters was that "something happened during Richard's 30-day trial period.

CAMPBELLFORD

J. E. (Jack) Bannister, a member of the staff of the Campbellford Branch of the Bank of Montreal since 1943, will take up his new duties as accountant at the Lockhow branch of the bank this month some time, Mr. Bannister came to the Campbellford branch from Stirling, and his promotion to accountant is a promotion in his banking career. His wife and family will follow him to their new home next month.

Cooking School

The IODE cooking school held in the Aron Theatre on Monday and Tuesday afternoons attracted a great many ladies of Campbellford and district, some attending both afternoons.

Canada Packers own Brenda York was on hand and made the time pass quickly with her interesting talk, as she made many good things to eat. These were given as prizes. Many other prizes, some donations from the business men of the town and some from Canada Packers were given each afternoon.

Mr. H. F. Taylor acted as master of ceremonies for both afternoons.

New Members

The regular monthly meeting of Branch 103 Canadian Legion BESL was held on Monday evening with a large number of members in attendance. Comrade C. Mannis read the minutes of the previous meeting which were duly passed.

There were several applications for membership and these new members were accepted on motion. They are John R. Connor, C. Alley, Wm. R. Nicholas, and Charles Shaw.

An organization meeting will be held in the Legion Hall on Thursday, May 17, at which time the grounds for a Ladies' Auxiliary will be formed. The Provincial President and Provincial Secretary will be on hand at this meeting to assist in the organization of the new auxiliary. It is hoped a large number of mothers, sisters, wives and friends of veterans will be in attendance.

New Fence

It was suggested that a new fence be provided for the property surrounding the Legion Hall and after much discussion, the Board of Trustees was empowered to look into the matter and take action.

Comrade, president A. MacDonald, reported on the zone meeting held in Trenton recently. He notified the Branch of the district meeting to be held in Madoc on Sunday.

Members were reminded of the Legion sponsored dance to be held at the Edgewater Park Pavilion on Friday, and asked to push ticket sales. It was decided that the exterior of the Legion Hall be painted and volunteers were called for to be present on Thursday evening for a working bee.

Gloucesters Took Brunt of Major Communist Drive

U. S. Eighth Army Headquarters, Korea, May 11 — (Reuters) — Lt.-Gen. James Van Fleet, U. S. Eighth Army commander, today paid new tribute to the Royal Gloucestershire Regiment for its part in taking the brunt of the major communist drive last month.

He issued a special communique praising the heroism of the British.

"They held the critical route selected by the enemy for an attempt to encircle and destroy the Eighth Army's First Corps," the communique said.

"These courageous soldiers without thought of defeat nor surrender demonstrated superb battle-field courage and discipline.

"Their sustained brilliance in battle, their resoluteness and extraordinary heroism are in keeping with the finest traditions of the renowned military forces of the British Commonwealth and reflect unsurpassed credit on these courageous soldiers and their homeland."

Moran Sentenced To Five Years

New York, May 11 — (AP) — James J. Moran, close associate of former Mayor William O'Dwyer, was sentenced today to a maximum five years in prison and fined $2,000 on a charge of giving perjured testimony before the United States Senate Crime Committee.

Moran, a former deputy fire commissioner, told the crime committee he met Louis Weber, Brooklyn numbers racketeer, about a half dozen times over a period of several years.

But witnesses at Moran's trial in federal court testified that Weber had visited Moran at least 111 times at his fire department office.

Moran was appointed to a $18,000-a-year lifetime post as a police commissioner by O'Dwyer shortly before the mayor resigned last year to become Ambassador to Mexico. But after testifying before the crime committee he resigned.

WEDDINGS

COOK—CALLAHAN

A simple, but impressive ceremony marked the wedding, performed Saturday morning, Rev. Lavington Park, to Sgt. Robert James Milne Cook, formerly of Belleville, son of Mrs. Donald Roberts, of Rush, N.Y. Msgr. Thomas Connors received the vows.

The bride wore a white gabardine suit with a corsage of white lilacs. She carried an altar prayer book.

Mr. Donald Hendrick of Rush, N.Y., was best man.

The bride's mother wore black faille with spring green hat and accessories and a corsage of cymbidium orchid. The mother of the groom, wore dusty rose with navy accessories and cymbidium orchid.

The bride, is a graduate of Nazareth Academy and the groom is a member of the Belleville Air Force stationed at Elmendorf Field, Anchorage, Alaska, where they plan to reside.

HEAF BIG FESTIVAL

Regina — (CP) — Three young treaty Indians from the reserve near Fort Qu'Appelle are returning in the Regina Music Festival this week. They are Grace Lavalle, 21, soprano; Clifford Goodwill, 17, saxophone; and his brother Kenneth, 16, who plays the cornet.

Mrs. LeRoy Boyd, Kingston, Heads Women's Group

Brockville, May 11. (CP)—Mrs. LeRoy Boyd, of Kingston, was re-elected president of the Ontario Diocesan Church of England Women's Auxiliary here Thursday.

Mrs. G. Wright also of Kingston, was returned as vice-president.

Meeting in St. Peter's Church here for the past two days, the annual meeting of the Anglican women's group attracted close to 300 church women from seven Eastern Ontario counties. Gathering in prayer, praise and business, the sessions wound up Thursday.

Highlight of the closing meeting was the award of the Diocesan Banner and cup to outstanding girls' groups. St. John's of Portsmouth won the Banner while the cup was awarded to the St. James group of Kingston.

St. Paul's of Westport, were next in line, followed by Amherst Island, Merrickville, St. Peter's of Brockville, and St. Luke's, at Kingston.

AVONDALE NEIGHBORS' AID

The regular May meeting of the Avondale Neighbors' Aid was held at the home of Mrs. K. Bird, with a good attendance. The president presided and opened the meeting with a song, the theme being, "Mother's Day".

Poems, bearing on the theme, were read by Mrs. J. Chambers and Mrs. J. Lough, while Mrs. Robson read the meditation, "Lilacs in the Rain", and "Mother's Prayer".

Business was discussed and the various reportsgiven. It was decided to send a donation of $10 to the Cancer Fund.

The program committee consisting of Mrs. Knight and Mrs. Bird won by Mrs. J. Chambers and Mrs. C. Holmes. A reading was given by Mrs. Knight on "The Romance of Seed", which proved interesting and instructive. The lucky draw was won by Mrs. W. Denyes.

The hostess for June will be Mrs. L. Reid.

SPORTING FARMERS

Dieser, Man. — (CP) — What looked like a district plowing match actually was the Deieser Sporting Club's co-operative work on two large pieces of land. To raise money for the club, the curlers hope to harvest a 60-acre field of oats and a 70-acre field of flax next fall.

Girl Guides, Brownies Hold Distinctive Blue and Gold Tea

Bright sunshine and blue skies augured well for the pleasing spring tea and sale of cookies, held yesterday afternoon in St. Thomas' Parish House by the Girl Guides and Brownies, which proved such an outstanding success.

After paying the admittance fee to Mrs. L. A. Kells the many guests who were welcomed by the receptionists, Division Commissioner, Mrs. H. G. Amos, and the secretary, Mrs. R. D. Arnott, were free to wander at will, purchasing the alluring results of the kitchen magicians' art in the form of apricot pie, heaped with mounds of golden brown meringue; honey-dipped Chelsea buns; luscious chocolate and coconut cakes; piled of cup cakes with toppings of pink, yellow, and green frostings, generously sprinkled over with nut meats; lemon, taffy and raisin tarts; oldfashioned gingerbread with sprinkled sugar, lacking only the centre raisin to take one back to childhood days, and many other confections, all equally attractive and delectable. Those in charge were Mrs. R. Keel, Mrs. W. J. Brown and Mrs. C. Wallbridge. Gowans Sagers

The candy table also had its generous supply of creams, fudge (both chocolate and coffee), nicely boxed and packaged in cellophane, ready for Mother's Day. Mrs. Ayers of this were, Mrs. H. Vaughan, Mrs. J. J. Trudeau, Mrs. J. P. Clute and Mrs. H. W. Anderkman, Mrs. W. W. Ponton, and Mrs. A. McLean Haig, Mrs. J. A. G. Hudson and Mrs. Arthur Smith.

Those replenishing the plates included Mrs. C. Weston, Mrs. H. W. Brown, and Mrs. J. Bennett, while those who served in the tea room and in the kitchen making tea were, Mrs. H. Samuels, Mrs. J. Tooth, Mrs. F. Fulton, Mrs. F. Murdock, Mrs. Dovitt, Miss Dorothy Stewart Mrs. T. Colden, and Mrs. S. Rose, Miss Helen Weston Barbara Dix, Miss Ann Briens, Miss Barbara Bennett, Mrs. H. Forrester, Mrs. W. Mansell, Mrs. R. Maund, Mrs. Mulcahy, Mrs. Townson, Mrs. Jordan, Miss Eleanor Clarke, Mrs. R. Post and Mrs. R. Fairman.

Additional Attraction

An additional attraction at the tea was that of the Brownie exhibit which occupied a prominent place in the assembly room. Here were displayed in captivating array, numerous dolls dressed in knitted suits of pink, blue, and red, as well as some piquant little "Sunbonnet Sues" in old-fashioned dresses with matching sunbonnets. These were the work of the Brownies' mothers.

The Brownies' projects consisted of rag dolls with long, golden hair, and various animal toys, blue and called "Winnie, the Pooh" and others. The pretty table centre depicted a magic pool beside which "Peterwinkle" was being enrolled as a Brownie, surrounded by other Brownies, each busily engaged in their various projects, knitting, signal drill, darning, dish-washing, knot-tying, and ball playing.

These dolls were for Christmas gifts to the Grenfell Mission in Labrador which is under the supervision of Mrs. Punchard. Miss Florence Ayling was the competent convener of these projects.

Much credit is due the gracious conveners Mrs. A. Lewis and Mrs. F. J. Ross, and to all who helped for a splendid spring tea, so successfully convened.

Women's Activities

W.M.S. MEETING

The May meeting of Redmersville, Centre and Victoria W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. Roy Giles on Wednesday, May 2nd with the president, Mrs. Frank Townsend presiding. Mrs. J. P. Henderson, who attended a Mission Band Conference in Belleville, the previous week told of many interesting questions that were discussed.

Interesting Story

As this was Baby Band meeting, Mrs. Winston Palmer, the Baby Band leader, had charge of the first part of the program. She read for the children a story, "How the Artist Forgot Four Colors". A beautiful church was being built and they engaged the finest artist in the world to paint a wonderful picture for the stained glass window over the choir.

At last the picture was finished and the committee were to see it next morning. The artist slept, and as he slept, he heard a sound and found a strange painting on his picture. The stranger said, "You had five colors on your palette, why use only one color on the children's faces? I have made some yellow some brown, some red, some black".

Suddenly the artist awakened: he had been dreaming. He rushed to the studio and made yellow faces with slanting eyes, brown, red and black faces, before the committee arrived. God's family will always mean all five colors on the children's faces.

For the study, "What shall we Teach our Children About God?", Mrs. Palmer was assisted by readings by Mrs. Henderson, Mrs. Ronald Giles and Mrs. Donald Spencer. "All we can do is to begin to teach the child, His first lessons are from us and later he learns from others. May we lay the foundation well in his belief, he will always stand firm".

Mrs. Donald Spencer, leader of Group 1, had as her topic, "How We Can Work for Peace—Through Helping to Feed the Hungry". Questions were distributed among the members and these were discussed and answered by readings.

Two-thirds of the world's population are undernourished. Disease and poverty create political and social unrest. If more money were used in helping to feed the hungry, better world brotherhood relations would be established, and it would be a constructive step towards peace. This was a thought-provoking program.

After the meeting closed delicious refreshments were served by Group 1.

The next meeting is to be at Mrs. R. L. Redner's the first Wednesday in June.

WESLEY W.A.

Bayside—The April meeting of Wesley W.A. was held at the home of Mrs. G. Frost with 13 members and two visitors.

The 46th Psalm was read by Mrs. Mooney.

Mr. H. Gooding and Mr. J. Stewart reported of the installation of glass for the church windows had been completed.

Rev. A. C. McCallum announced the dedicatory service in connection with the installing of the new windows was held on May 6.

Mrs. Mooney was appointed delegate for the W.A. convention. Rummage sale is to be held this week.

Mrs. Saylor moved a vote of thanks to Mrs. Frost and Evelyn for their fine hospitality.

A contest put on by Mrs. C. Wilson was won by Mrs. J. Stewart.

Collection was $1.90 and the flower fund, 76 cents.

A social half hour was spent.

MARSH HILL WMS

Marsh Hill—The May meeting of Marsh Hill WMS was held at the home of Mrs. Bruce Mills. The president, Mrs. Bartindale, opened the meeting. Twelve members answered the roll call. Several articles of clothing were received for the bale and also several items for the layette. An invitation to attend Foxboro WMS meeting Thursday was also read.

The members reported having sent six cards and had made five calls. Due to the absence of the leader, the president took charge of the program: Mrs. Parks gave a reading, "Give and Take." All read in unison "A Litany of Dedication." Mrs. Allyn Finkle read "Domestic Science at Shimaka," by Miss Violet Saunders and "Hunt Life in Japan." "How Are We Working for Peace Through Food Aid" was presented by Mrs. Mills, Mrs. F. Finkle, and Mrs. Bleecker. The theme of the worship service was "Christ's Legacy of Peace."

After the meeting closed delicious refreshments were served by Group 1.

CHRIST CHURCH PARISH GUILD

The May business meeting of the Parish Guild was held in the church hall on Tuesday. The president, Mrs. E. Hickey, welcomed the members, and asked Mrs. Drury to take the scripture reading.

The secretary, Miss Fitzgerald, read the report of the previous meeting, also letters received.

The financial report was read by Mrs. M. Button, who also suggested that the Parish Guild help at the church bazaar to be held later in the season.

In remembrance of Mrs. Hammett, who was a good friend, and for many years a member of the Guild the members stood for a few moments of silence.

Mrs. A. Lewis sang, and the guest speaker, Miss Sulman, gave two amusing readings which were greatly enjoyed.

Canon Creegan, after a short address to the members, closed the meeting.

A refreshing tea and social hour followed.

CRAWLING CROP

Cantaur, Sask. — (CP) — If an abundance of reptiles means a good crop, Robert Nerada is all set. A warm sun enticed hundreds of garter snakes into the open at his farm and so far he's killed 342. The snakes had a colony in an old cellar.

For Baby

Perfect shoe fit in childhood is the best guarantee that junior will have healthy feet when he grows up.

Foot experts say a laced oxford that gives snug support around the heel is best for all-around wear. It also must fit comfortably across the ball of the foot and permit three-quarters of an inch toe room.

Be sure to have the shoes fitted to the larger of the child's two feet.

Shoes should be equipped with genuine leather soles permitting perspiration to pass off while maintaining healthful temperatures inside the shoe.

Excessive wearing of sneakers and flimsy shoes is frowned on. Experts point out that such foot gear is meant only for specialized sports, played on soft ground. For walking, playing and running on hard surfaces, youngsters need the support provided by leather shoes.

Lilac, pale blue and green are among the delicate tones footwear is taking on, this spring. As for styles, many are delicate shell pumps whereas others are sandals with airy anklets.

White accents on brilliant or dark shoes also provide plenty of foot interest this spring. White inserts of open work through dressmaker spectators which follow the classic theme of blue or brown.

Proper Shoes Advised For Good Health

By KAY REX
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

May 11.—(CP)—Choose comfortable shoes if you want to be healthy, happy and wise—as well as sexy on the eyes.

There's more than rhyme in that statement. You don't have to have a shoe expert tell you that tight shoes cramp not only your feet but your entire posture. And they put a kink in your temper as well.

Health department officials say that shoes too tight or in an unsuitable style may cause fatigue and nervous tension. For footease they suggest a daily footbath in alternate hot and cold plunges; dry well and dust with good foot-powder.

Manufacturers claim nowadays the little woman has no excuse for undergoing all the torture simply to keep up with current shoe styles. At the moment good shoes are produced in more than 150 sizes, making possible a degree of comfortable accuracy that's grandma never dreamed of.

Nowadays shoes can be both comfortable and fashionable. Flexible leather soles insuring comfort and shape retention are available in any desired thinness and many types of finish.

Some shoe experts stress lightness in the 1951 shoe. They say the fit expressed in both look and feel, through the use of new fabrics and supple, unlined leather. Openness in design has also begun to favor.

Phosphorescent satin and jersey shoes, rhinestone trim on black pumps appear the fashion favorite in Toronto where a window shopper the other day spied a pair of nylon stockings with heels trimmed in brilliants.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Q. — What's to do? Doesn't mention marriage?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am married, but I am deeply in love with another man, who is also married. He is 20 years older than I am. He knows I have had a lot of trouble, losing my father and being beaten by my stepmother and that I am married to a man who is a war veteran and sick most of the time. I am worried to death with his nervous condition, and to top it off, he hardly ever gives me any money although he works and makes good pay, and also has a government pension, but he just keeps it all.

I really love this other man and we are together every day, but he still has never mentioned love to me.

I am sure he can't be in love with his wife, but I wonder what is wrong. I would divorce my husband for him any time. I am 29 years old.—M.P.

Dear M.P.:

I realize that it is a very hard thing to be married to a man who is nervously ill and who is also mean about money. At the same time, you are making a very serious mistake to have anything to do with any other man while you are married to this one. I believe what you are doing is still more unwise in view of the fact that this man has apparently given you no reason whatever to believe that he has any feeling for you. For all you know, he may simply be in search of a little extra-marital adventure, and might get you into serious trouble at any time. You say you want for what is wrong that he has never mentioned marriage to you. My own feeling is that the reason he hasn't done so is because he hasn't thought of it.

If you are a sensible woman, you will stop seeing this man entirely, and try to work out your present marriage by getting advice from someone in your city who is competent to give it. If you do not know any such person, write me a stamped addressed envelope, and I will be glad to give you the names and addresses of someone who should be able to help you.

Have a lovely June wedding!

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am planning on getting married in June and having a church wedding. My father and mother are dead and I have one brother, but cannot locate him.

I have been living with a family for about ten years, and would like to know if the man could give me away. I am 22 years old and the couple I live with are middle-aged.—E. R. G.

G.R.G.:

Only it will be quite all right, and very appropriate under the circumstances, if the man of the family with which you have been living gives you away at your wedding.

I hope you will have a lovely wedding day and a very happy marriage.

BEAUTY

Eyes, sparkling and eloquent.

Whether a girl be pretty or plain, her eyes are her most interesting feature, the one that is longest remembered, the one that gets in the slickest work with attack is made on masculine heart strings. The poets have raved about them. "Those lovely lamps, windows of the soul," Du Bartas called them. "Soul-deep eyes of shiest night," wrote Joaquin Miller. "Love looketh from the eye, and kindled love by looking," raved Dupper.

There is another nice thing about them. They do not change with the years. You can have young young and lovely and romance-winning as long as you live. The hair goes white and the skin wrinkles, but the eyes remain as is. Animation is the best of eye beautifiers. If there's fun in your heart and your brain clicks on all cylinders, your eyes will tell the world!

Little is required as to their care—they have their own oiling and washing systems—but they are often abused. We bring a lot of afflictions upon ourselves, which seems pretty silly. Be kind to your eyes and they'll be kind to you. If you work them too hard, they are bound to rebel. They are on the job every waking moment; that is why you should not stay up half the night to finish that mystery story. Also you should be particularly mindful about the lighting effects in your home. Have a strong light behind each easy chair, on your desk, and at the sides of mirrors. Lights must be properly placed, so your book or work will be well illuminated, with no glare in your eyes. You should not read on a moving train because that calls for constant re-adjustment of vision, which is a strain.

Night and morning bathe your eyes—first with warm water, then with cold. This practice will bring a quick exercise of the blood streams. It will help to keep the surrounding flesh in good, normal condition, will have a favorable effect upon the eyelashes. Those little fungus get food, drink and lodgings from the circulation, and cold water is a help.

Your druggist will supply you with an eye lotion. Use it when the eyes are tired, or if the lids seem irritated. If there is ever any sign of inflammation in infection, his yourself to a specialist. Don't rub your eyes when wearing gloves. That's one way of picking up bacteria.

Fashion Flashes

DOTTED HERE and there at smart gatherings is the dress of wool lace—simply fashioned, but most effective. Very delicate white wool lace, in a popcorn stitch, is used for a simple sheath ankle-length—with scoop neck and short sleeves, and finished with a narrow belt of velvet and pearl discs. With it a matching lace stole with tiny ball-fringed ends.

DAISIES DO TELL, and most effectively, too, in the latest crop of hats. A typical success is a smug, round cap made of shiny, rustic straw, edged with huge white pique daisies, yellow-centered and strewn with tiny rhinestones.

NOT IN YEARS have coat designs and fabrics been so imaginative and original. To cite one model: a full-length coat fashioned of double layers of nylon marquisette. Five huge red carnations are placed between the layers for a most unusual dimensional effect. Three flowers are clustered at one shoulder, one at one hip, the other towards the hem on the opposite side. The coat is opaque and has a tiny pointed petal collar.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Their practical plan to 'segregate' tea-drinkers from others—two parties

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

We are planning to celebrate our 25th wedding anniversary in June. Our plan is to go to a distant city to renew our vows on the day itself, and to have a reception on the Sunday following. I have several questions relating to the reception.

1. I belong to several groups, Church choir; Order of the Eastern Star (I am also president of the Officers' Club of my chapter); Ladies' Auxiliary of Liederkranz (a social group). It will be necessary to segregate the ones who only take 'tea,' and the ones who like drinks at a celebration. What would you think of our having two distinct parties, one a tea, say from 3:30 to 5:30; the other an evening party from 8 o'clock to 10?

2. Would it be proper to have these at different places; my home and a hall? Or would both be given at a friend's house which is larger than mine and therefore could accommodate a larger group?

3. Shall I ask my two sisters to pour? Shall I ask choir friends to pour? Shall I ask some of my Eastern Star Sisters to pour? And shall I ask my co-workers to assist?

4. At my wedding twenty-five years ago I had only one attendant, and she will be with us at the reception, to receive with us. Shall I also ask my mother and my mother-in-law to receive with us?

5. Have you any other suggestions for our parties?

1. A perfect plan . . . two parties, the afternoon tea-party, and the evening party for those who "don't care for tea"!

2. My suggestion is that you have but one party, which is a more informal kind of party, at your house. Then the evening party in a hall (less desirable, of course, than a private house) or (better) in the house of the best friend who has generously offered you this wonderful hospitality. This would mean that you would have about two hours to rest and refresh between the parties.

3. I suggest you ask your two sisters to assist, not to pour. There are many ways in which members of the family can be on hand to help and co-operate with the hosts . . . In the making of introductions, in seeing that congenial groups are formed, that all guests are made happy and comfortable, that guests are directed to the refreshments, and that refreshment-supplies are on hand for the pourers at the table. Ask choir friends, some Eastern Star members, some co-workers, to pour . . . the best plan is to assign two to each half hour of the tea-party. Some of these too, instead of being asked to pour, might be asked to stand near the entrance to direct guests to the room to leave their wraps.

4. An excellent idea, too . . . to ask your mother and your husband's mother to receive with you and your husband and attendant. Your attendant, as hostess of your wedding, and your husband's mother, as the woman guest of honor at your wedding, undoubtedly stood in the receiving-line. . . . and so now too! (Except, in this receiving-line, you and your husband should stand first in line.)

5. Two wedding anniversary cakes, please . . . one, the gala feature of the tea-party, and the other, the gala feature of the evening party. At each party, you, the "bride", and the husband, the "groom"—cut the first piece of the cake (his right hand over your right hand); the cake knife festively tied with a big white ribbon bow. This first slice of cake you share with each other, as at the original reception. . . . and I hope the guests merrily sing "The Bride Cuts the Cake!" (to the tune of "The Farmer in the Dell"). And even at the tea-party provide a cold drinkable (ginger-ale, a cola drink, grapejuice, or whatever you prefer) for the toasts that should be proposed "To the Bride and Groom" at all wedding anniversaries. Every good wish to you!

ACTRESS BACK HOME

Los Angeles, May 11 (AP) — Actress Mary Astor is back home after taking an overdose of sleeping pills last Monday night. Joan Blair Caspary 33-year-old former dancer who also took a sleeping potion overdose Tuesday night, is recovering in hospital. Thomas G. Wheelock, Miss Astor's husband, was out with Miss Caspary when Miss Astor took the pills. He said the suicide attempts were a "fantastic coincidence."

Now... a new SURF... gets washes TWICE-AS-SWEET as ANY other leading washday suds!

SCIENTIFIC TESTS PROVE IT!
SURF suds and rinses 50% faster than "invisible" rinse soaps and suds leaves.
SURF is 7 times as effective against germs.

YOU CAN TELL BY THE SMELL
Just sniff the fresh-air-sweetness of Surf-clean clothes! Now new Surf gets clothes smellier than ever—because it gets them cleaner than ever! It takes out hidden dirt, grease and germs that all other washday suds leave in your clothes. Surf-clean clothes have that wonderful fresh-air-sweetness—even when dried indoors!

New Surf gets clothes so much cleaner you can smell the difference! It's twice as effective as other suds in taking out odours—takes out every trace!

Surf—the new Surf at your grocer's now—is even better than it used to be. And so much better than other washday suds! Tests show it gets clothes not only whiter and brighter—but twice as sweet!

You see, Surf contains a wonderful detergent that gets out more of the deep-down dirt, grease and germs. It's twice as effective in getting out odour—removes every trace. Gets clothes so clean you don't even need to rinse! (If you prefer to rinse, try the work-saving tip at right.)

New Surf is safer than ever, too. Easier on your hands. Use it for everything from grimy workclothes to sheerest, finest washables. It's a wonder for all! And best of all, new Surf gives you whiter, brighter, sweeter washes—yes, twice as sweet-smelling, even when dried indoors.

TRY THIS LATEST WASHDAY TRICK
IT'S SO EASY-IT'S SO QUICK!

ADD SURF to the rinse water. Although Surf-clean clothes, even without rinsing, are the cleanest ever, this helps keep them sweeter longer.

RINSE ONCE. One light Surf-clean is more effective than several clear-water rinses! Saves time, work, water—is easier on your clothes. Leaves them soft, easy to iron.

SWEET. Surf-washed, Surf-rinsed, Surf-clean clothes are made fresher, sweeter by fresh-air-sweet, even if dried indoors! Truly astonishing! There never was anything like it!

SURF gives you the sweetest wash

Evidence Leads To Adjournment Of Hearing

London, Ont., May 11. (CP)—Evidence of two psychiatrists in court Thursday led to the adjournment of the preliminary hearing of Mrs. Elizabeth Lawrence, on a charge of murder in the death of her 42-year-old husband, George.

Dr. W. A. Tillmann and B. McNeil said they had been called Mrs. Lawrence is mentally ill. Both said she is in a depressed state with ideas of persecution typical of paranoia.

Preliminary hearing had been scheduled for today but at the outset defence counsel W. R. Poole said he was moving to have Mrs. Lawrence committed to a mental hospital on the basis that she is unfit to stand trial.

Mr. Poole said his client is unable to instruct him in preparation of the case for her defence.

Magistrate Donald Menzies remanded the woman for eight days and instructed that a transcript of the medical testimony be forwarded to the Attorney General's Department.

Court officials said if the department agrees with the psychiatric findings, Mrs. Lawrence will be committed to a mental institution for treatment.

Hearing on Export Natural Gas Is Adjourned

Edmonton May 11 — (CP) — Hearing of an application by Canadian Delhi Oil Ltd. for a permit to export natural gas from Alberta to Montreal over an all-Canadian route was adjourned yesterday to Sept. 4.

The adjournment date is the same as that of four other applicants for the export permits. They are West Coast Transmission Co., Western Pipe Lines, Northwest Natural Gas Co., and Prairie Pipe Lines Ltd.

Chairman I. N. McKinnon of the Petroleum and Natural Gas Conservation Board yesterday asked Delhi officials to submit additional information by early August in order to give the board sufficient time to study the material.

MARMORA

Old Buildings Of Deloro Plant Being Demolished

Marmora — Work is being rushed on the removal of some of the old buildings constituting the general plant of the Deloro Smelting and Refining Company Limited and the erection of a new area there.

Last fall a considerable section of the silver plant buildings were torn down and a new modern structure erected to accommodate new roasters.

The old bag house which stood north of the silver plant has now been demolished thus further changing the old contour of the plant. With this old building out of the way, the ground has been cleared for the laying of a new cement floor upon which a shipment of ore, which is expected may be placed for the period preceding treatment.

A new modern building will be erected around it. In a section of the building erected last year, a new crushing system has been installed and is now in operation. The ore cars coming in are placed in a high trestle, the ore being dumped into a chute leading on to a conveyer belt which carries it to a system of crushers and ball mills which is completely modern and automatic in operation.

This should result in a much greater quantity of ore being handled with more efficiency than in the past as the remainder of the new building is completed, new equipment will be installed for further modernization of the plant.

MADOC

H. & S. Association Elects Officers

Madoc—The annual meeting of the Home and School Association of Madoc was held in the public school on Tuesday evening. Mrs. Rupert, retiring president, in speaking to the meeting, stressed the value of the Home and School in understanding and aiding the school and interpreting its needs to the public.

The reports of the standing committees were heard and it was apparent that the organization had had an active and profitable year.

Mrs. K. Connor gave the report of the nominating committee. There being no further nominations, the slate of officers was accepted. The new officers were called to the front and after taking the oath were duly installed in office. Mrs. Rupert presented the gavel to Mrs. Pitts, who then took charge of the meeting.

Guest Speaker

After a few remarks, when she asked for the continued co-operation of all members, Mrs. Pitts called upon Mrs. Rupert to introduce the guest speaker, Mrs. M. E. Wilson of Ottawa. Mrs. Wilson was a technical photographer with the Department of Mines, Ottawa, and has had as a hobby the taking of pictures which she herself develops, colors, and makes into slides.

As it was planned to have this meeting a patriotic one, Mrs. Wilson was asked to show a set of pictures of the visit of the King and Queen to Ottawa.

During intermission, public school girls moved through the audience selling home-made candy.

Mrs. J. McGowan thanked Mrs. Wilson for coming to Madoc to show these beautiful pictures. Miss McCurdy was the accompanist for the evening.

Mrs. Wilson, before his retirement as a geologist with the Department of Mines, had spent considerable time in Madoc when he was making a geological survey of the district.

Officers Elected

The Home and School officers for 1951-52 are:

President, Mrs. Pitts; 1st vice president, Mrs. John Bristol; 2nd vice president, Mrs. K. Kincaid; recording secretary, Mrs. R. Dafoe; corresponding secretary, Mrs. E. Armstrong; treasurer, Mrs. Arbin; executive members: Mrs. B. McCoy, Mr. J. Baker, Mrs. B. Johnston, Mr. D. Stewart and Mrs. J. Hatch.

WOOLER

Wooler — Seventeen members and eight visitors attended the May meeting of Afternoon Auxiliary of the Women's Missionary Society at the home of Mrs. S. L. Terrill on Tuesday afternoon.

The president, Mrs. E. McMaster presided and conducted the worship service and business with Rev. W. G. Fletcher offering prayer.

Mrs. L. E. Doriand rendered a vocal solo and Mrs. R. Redcliffe gave a paper on Christian Stewardship.

Colored Slides

Mr. Fletcher showed colored slides on "Korea Today" and "A Chance of a Lifetime" a temperance film.

Mrs. P. Gooding read a letter of appreciation to Mrs. S. L. Terrill and she was presented with the "White Witch Doctor". Mrs. Terrill graciously expressed her thanks.

The meeting was closed by Mr. Fletcher and dainty refreshments were served by Mrs. Cecil Gainforth and the hostess.

W. M. S. Evening Auxiliary

The May meeting of the Evening Auxiliary of the Woman's Missionary Society was held at the home of Mrs. Douglas R. Fox on Tuesday evening.

The Worship Service was taken by Mrs. Everett Ellis with Mrs. H. Ewing singing "Take Time to be Holy" and Mrs. W. G. Fletcher leading in prayer.

After the meeting closed and while refreshments were being prepared Mrs. Fletcher led in a few games.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON OF THE WEEK

Making Religion Easy

By ROY L. SM[illegible]

Solomon has been [illegible] wisest men that ever [illegible] but that distinction was one he [illegible] earned. Upon his death the kingdom was bankrupt, and the people grumbling. What a sad heritage he undertook to carry on with his father's extravagance! Ten northern tribes revolted and the kingdom was divided. Jeconiah, not theology, did it. Caused Israel to sin.

In organizing their new government the leaders of the northern tribes turned to a renegade named Jeroboam, who had spent much of his time as a refugee in Egypt. His was quick to sense the fact that the religious faith of the people was their strongest tie to the ancient throne of David, and he undertook to sever that tie.

With an eye to the future they be molded two calves and gilded them, setting one up in the northern end of Dan and the other in the south. Then he said to the people, "It is taking too much of you to journey year to year all the way down to Jerusalem to worship. Here are your gods, worship them where it will be easy and convenient." And forever after he was known as the king "who caused Israel to sin." Made Religion Easy

Jeroboam made his fatal mistake when he tried to make religion easy, when he tried to take the spirit of sacrifice out of it, when he attempted to create a faith which required no self-discipline.

It is highly significant that, less than a hundred years later the little kingdom was destroyed, the people were carried off into captivity, and within the space of half a century had completely disappeared as a race even of exiles. They took with them their exile no prophets, no scriptures, no priesthood, no convictions. There were no gods to save them.

Another hundred years, or a little more, and the southern kingdom was carried into exile. But it took with it a priesthood, a body of scripture, prophets, and convictions, and eventually it survived and returned to set up the Second Commonwealth. But it was the nation's religious faith which saved it.

Strict Discipline Needed

Citizens of this direful century are face to face with the identical temptation which confronted the Hebrews of Jeroboam's time. They are being exhorted to live like pagans, to abandon their spiritual ideals, and to conform to the loose standards of the times.

The stern and strict religious demands of our fathers are held in low esteem. The very name "puritan" has become a symbol of contempt, as if the dissipated and the dissolute had made our nation great.

Just at the moment a desperate effort is being made to remove all moral odium from drunkenness, and to have it contained as something virile and entertaining, and a female bar fly was a glamorous person.

The Uniform Sunday School lesson for May 13: "The Northern Kingdom (Years of Penance)." I Kings 12:16-33; 13:31—17:24; II Kings 17: 1-18; Amos 6:1-7.

The luncheon club will applaud the orator who says we must get back to God, without a thought of the personal responsibility of the individual for leading a sober, an upright and a reverent life.

Cannot Repeal Effects

Every law regulating the sale of intoxicants can be repealed, but the chemical character of alcohol, and its inevitable and constant effect upon the human nervous system can never be repealed.

No drunken nation has ever yet been able to compete successfully with a sober people.

There is no "if" in the atomic age for a mind befuddled with alcohol.

FOUND IN LINE-UP

Peterborough, May 11. (CP)—David Mott, 14, missing 13 days from his home at Coldsprings, three miles southeast of here was found Thursday in a theatre line-up.

The boy said his father, Lloyd King, told him a week ago Saturday not to leave the house. But the youngster wandered off and played. When it came time for him to return in the evening he was afraid of what his father might do to him and wandered into Peterborough.

He spent most of his nights in one of the barns in the exhibition grounds. Other nights he just wandered about the streets.

FLIES HEAVIEST LOAD

Los Angeles May 11. (AP)—A Douglas C-124 Globemaster II has flown with the heaviest load ever carried by a mass-produced transport plane, the United States Air Force announced today. The load, lifted 210,000 pounds of aloft, flew 1,000 miles, unloaded, and then returned to base without refuelling. The load was 35,000 pounds over the designed to take off gross weight.

HOSLIN

Six Schools Represented At Music Festival

Hoslin—The North Hastings School Area Music Festival sponsored by the South Hastings Educational Association was held in the Plainfield hall on Tuesday afternoon.

Parents and friends of the pupils in the six schools participated in the program, were present and enjoyed the musical program prepared by the music supervisor, Mrs. Edith Moody.

The Rev. A. Campbell was chairman for the following program: The first school heard was S. S. No. 36 their teacher Mrs. Bates, they sang "The Robin Song"; "Roly, Poly Polar Bear"; "Vesper Hymn"; "Fairest Lord Jesus"; "Song of Thankfulness"; "Jesus Bids Us Shine"; "There's a Friend for Little Children."

The next school participating was S.S. No. 16 with teacher, Miss Ella Ketcheson, their selection included "My Secret"; "Flower of China"; "Spring Breezes"; "Bells of Beauty"; "Going to the Fair."

Roslin School

3rd school S. S. No. 19 Roslin with the teacher, Miss Pollock, were heard in: "The Mill"; "The Wonderful Log"; "Grandmother's Dance"; "The Fairies" and "Parade of Evening."

Next came S.S. No. 13 with teacher, Mrs. Ketcheson, they sang "The Fairy Piper"; "The Harvest Song"; "The Violet"; "The Violet"; "The Squirrel"; "The Fox" and "Now the Day is Closing."

The fifth school S.S. No. 17, Plainfield with teacher, Miss McDonald presented "Ole Hours"; "Silver Book" Theme Song"; "Apple Ward"; "A Message to the Fish" and "The Slumber Boat."

The last school was S.S. No 22 with teacher, Mrs. Boldrick who rendered "Now is the Month of Maying"; "O Canada Dear Land O Mine" and "Rule Britania."

Mr. Temple and Miss Arkills, of Belleville acted as adjudicators. Mr. and Mrs. Arkills gave their report and also favored with a vocal solo, accompanied by Mr. Temple at the piano.

Votes of thanks were given the music teacher and the teachers of the six schools for their work in preparing the program.

BUSH BEAVERS

Oakville, Ont. — (CP)— Four beaver planted in a stream near here have done a lot of work. Now there are 13 beaver, two beaver dams with ponds covering 15 acres, better farm wells, new flocks of wild ducks and other wild life, not to mention visitors every weekend.

STIRLING

St. Andrew's Church Ladies' Aid Entertains Local Aids

Stirling — The ladies of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church entertained the members of Ladies' Aids from Frankford, Bannockburn and Burnbrae last Thursday afternoon.

The church auditorium was made most attractive with potted plants and spring flowers. Mrs. R. Foster, the president, opened the meeting and welcomed the guests. Mrs. V. Matthews played piano music.

Mrs. Don Fargey read the scripture lesson from Psalm 23. Mrs. R. Hermiston led the meeting in prayer. Mrs. Don Meiklejohn sang a lovely solo "Bless This House." Mrs. Barton Haggerty, of West Huntingdon sang a solo. Mrs. Ken Harper Rolling spoke briefly introducing the guest speaker, Mrs. (Rev.) Ann Lockie.

In her opening remarks, Mrs. McAvoy paid tribute to the splendid appreciation of the program thus far. Her subject, "Fear and the Cure of Fear" had a lesson for each person present. "If we face our duties with God's help we become brave to face the future. We need have no fear. There will always be a way out." Mrs. Lockie went. We are too busy. We must have time to be alone. God speaks to us in direct proportion to our courage. We shall not faint. We shall have graces that flowerth on like a river.

Bible is the Director

Our direction is the Bible. We are all over-anxious about our bodily food, but not about food and fellowship with prayer.

Miss Gena Spry gave a reading entitled "The Ladies Aid."

After the address a vote was brought to a close Mrs. E. Fosby invited the guests to the church parlors where afternoon tea was served. Mrs. Earl Fox and her committee are to be complimented on their efforts in making the parlors such a happy place.

Mrs. Milton Gilbert, Burnbrae, thanked the Stirling ladies on behalf of the visitors.

A solo by Mr. Home McAvoy made a fitting climax to a worthwhile meeting.

St. John's W.A.

The regular meeting of St. John's W.A. was held in the parish hall with 15 members present.

A letter was acknowledging the sale which was sent to All Saints' Indian Residential School, Prince Albert, was read, also a report of the regular Diocesan Board meeting at St. Hilda's and a letter from the M.S.C.C. concerning the church calendars were also read by the secretary.

Mrs. E. Cooke read the scripture lesson and Mrs. T. Tanner gave the treasurer's report. Mrs. J. B. Belshaw read a report of the Junior W.A. Festival which was held at St. George's Cathedral, Kingston in March. Mrs. E. Cooke reported for E. C. D. Fund. Mrs. E. Kent, Diocesan Dorcas secretary-treasurer made an appeal for quilts, layettes, hospital supplies and Christmas gifts. Mrs. C. Vance gave the synopsis of the study book.

The program prepared by Mrs. E. Cooke, and Mrs. McMurray, consisted of an interesting reading by Mrs. W. Wright on the life of the authors of two well-known hymns. Mrs. Cooke read a short poem, " A Cent Talks" in which it is found that one cent is welcome at a W.A. meeting but practically no place else. Mrs. S. McMurray read "Figure of Happiness."

Mrs. H. Cooke served a vote of thanks to those who took part in the program and to those who provided refreshments. A social half hour was enjoyed.

CROFTON

Crofton—Archdeacon and Mrs. Smith and daughter, Harriett, of Belleville, were Saturday dinner and evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Munro and Keith.

Mr. and Mrs. Arnel Stavenow, of Kingston spent last week with their daughter, Mrs. W. Salisbury, Mr. Salisbury and Janet.

The Ladies Aid met at the home of Mrs. Clare McFaul on Thursday afternoon. There was a good attendance and plans were made to clean the church on Tuesday.

There was no church on Sunday afternoon owing to the illness of the minister, Rev. Bowers. Mr. Squire, but next Sunday church will be in the evening.

Sunday School was organized on Sunday morning with most of last year's officers being returned for the coming season.

Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Munro and Keith attended the wedding of her sister, Miss Grace Vangeesen, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Vangeesen at Glenora, on Sunday, May 6th.

Mr. and Mrs. William Lake and Larry, of Belleville, spent the weekend at their summer home here.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Salbury and Janet and Mr. and Mrs. Arnel Stavenow of Arnprior, were tea hour guests of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Boese at Trenton, Sunday.

Mrs. Victor Sergard and Jerrold and Mrs. Milton Gilbert and Susan, returned on Monday from a visit with friends, relatives at Detroit and Windsor.

Hollywood Looks For Movie Starlets

This has long been one of Hollywood's most popular combinations—the beautiful young girls with graceful forms and starve in their eyes. Legs and pretty faces have always sold well, but there were two main periods of Hollywood history when such products reached peaks.

The first came when a group of film press agents started naming the Wampas Baby Stars in 1922. The Wampas (Western Associated Motion Picture Advertisers) continued this practice for a decade until it broke up, largely because of studio politics.

Dozens of the Wampas Baby Stars first won recognition by being chosen for the honor and became big stars. Among them: Clara Bow, Joan Crawford, Joan Blondell, Alice Lesles, Janet Gaynor, Loretta Young, Marion Nixon, Patsy Ruth Miller.

The next great period of youthful sex appeal in Hollywood came during the war years 1941-45. This grew out of the need for entertainment films and for GI pin-up pictures. Among the stars developed during those years were Betty Grable, Rita Hayworth and Jane Russell.

More Serious Era

The Industry seemed to retreat from cheesecake during the post-war years. Pin-ups were considered "undignified" by some spokesmen, and producers were intent on films attacking the world's problems. Also, the Hollywood depression cut down contract lists, eliminating most of the young girls whose legs might bring them stardom.

The cheesecake output has increased recently, and there are signs of a full-scale revival. The reasons for the new upsurge:

1. Need for pin-up girls for a new army.

2. The return to entertainment pictures in an effort to cure an ailing box office.

3. The demands by theatre men for new personalities.

These three elements have brought renewed activity to the movie mills. Talent scouts are scouting for fresh teen-age talent. Press agents are pressing for new stunts to publicize the newcomers. Photographers are busily photographing young lovelies on the sands of Santa Monica.

MADOC

Young Couple Feted by Gifts

Madoc — On Friday evening over 100 neighbors and friends from Madoc, Marmora, O'Hara's settlement and vicinity, paid a surprise visit to Mr. and Mrs. Don Wannamaker, formerly Miss Eula Johnston, at their home in the O'Hara neighborhood.

A program of music was followed by a short time being spent in games.

Ross Pigden in reading an address voiced the good wishes extended to them by their friends and neighbors and welcomed the bride to their community. Messrs. Glen Brown and Grant Cable presented the bride and groom with a buffet, magazine rack and ironing board.

The bride and groom graciously thanked their friends for the gifts. The bride also received an electric tea kettle and several miscellaneous gifts from relatives who came from a distance.

Bountious refreshments were served by the ladies.

Mr. and Mrs. Allan Franks and family spent Sunday with relatives in Ottawa.

Mrs. Irene Crawford spent the weekend in Montreal.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert McGhee are spending a week with their daughter, Mrs. Ross Murseon and Mr. Murseon, at Pickering.

NOMINATED CANDIDATE

Galt, May 11. (CP)—Former Mayor J. Mel Moffat Thursday was nominated Liberal candidate in the June 25 federal by-election for Waterloo South.

The by-election was called to fill the seat vacated by the death of Progressive Conservative Kitchener.

Mr. Moffat's opponents are W. L. Woods, of Preston, and former Mayor Jack Courtney of Kitchener.

German Princess Weds Archduke Otto von Hapsburg

Nancy, France, May 11—(CP)—Archduke Otto von Hapsburg, heir to the defunct Austro-Hungarian throne gave his lost kingdom an empress by marriage today to blue-eyed German princess in a lavish display of 18th-century pageantry.

Scions of Europe's thronless royalty thronged there for the double rites uniting the 36-year-old Otto and 25-year-old Princess Regina of Saxony-Meiningen, whom he met while touring refugee camps in Bavaria.

A civil ceremony in the city hall was followed by impressive Roman Catholic rites an hour later in the Church of the Popes-Vosges, where many of his ancestors are buried.

Forbidden by Austrian law to visit the country where his father, the Emperor Karl, was the last Hapsburg ruler, Otto came here for his wedding because it is the ancient capital of the once-independent Duchy of Lorraine. Otto still claims the title of Duke of Lorraine, along with about 24 others.

In the wedding procession to the city hall from the Grand Hotel the tall, full-figured bride was escorted by the Grand Duke of Saxony. Otto and his mother, Empress Zita, followed, surrounded by four Hungarian gentlemen of honor.

The bride's "something old" was an 18th-century bridal veil woven with the heraldry of the house of Hapsburg and Saxony. Archduke Otto and Princess Regina were wildly acclaimed last night when they stood up in their box at the Grand Theatre. Through the night crowds paraded along flood-lit streets and orchestras played old Austrian military marches.

The church ceremony was a splendid one. At the altar the couple knelt on cushions sprinkled with dirt so it could be said the wedding took place on Austrian soil.

Five Forest Fires Burning In Northern Ont.

Toronto, May 10—(CP)— Five forest fires burned in northern Ontario today but three of them were in the most advanced stages.

A blaze 48 miles north of Blind River was still not completely under control after covering 700 acres of mixed timber and "old burn." Another fire 72 miles north of the northern town had burned 600 acres but was being held. Both were believed caused by persons engaged in logging operations.

Rangers mopped up after a fire on the Garden River Indian Reservation just east of Sault Ste. Marie and one in Bridgeland township, near the Sault.

The fifth, also under control, was in McLennan township in the Sudbury area.

Gen. Eisenhower Has Not Asked Britain for Men

Paris, May 11 — (Reuters) — Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Atlantic Pact Commander, has made no specific request to Britain for an increased contribution to the Atlantic Pact army, a spokesman at his headquarters said today.

The purpose of Eisenhower's visit to Italy, Belgium, The Netherlands and Norway, the spokesman said, had been to persuade them to increase their armed forces.

But no specific request had been made to Britain, since War Minister Emmanuel Shinwell pledged four divisions before the end of 1951.

Shinwell, reviewing British troops at Sennelags, West Germany, April 27, had promised Eisenhower more men if he wanted them.

"They had been reports that Eisenhower asked Britain for additional troops but had been turned down.

INDIANS OBTAIN VETERAN

Philadelphia, May 10—(AP) — Philadelphia Athletics today traded veteran outfielder Sam Chapman to Cleveland Indians for outfielder Allie Clark and reserve infielder Lou Klein.

General manager Art Ehlers of the A's said it was a straight player transaction with no cash involved.

Wellington, N.Z., (CP)—Television demonstrations were given in several centres recently by the state-owned radio service. However, the government will not introduce a permanent television service until thorough inquiries have determined whether the expense is justifiable at present.

Mrs. O. Bertrand Visits W.M.S.

A litany of dedication was led by Mrs. Roy Badgley followed by a prayer of dedication in unison.

Guest Organist

Mrs. O. Bertrand, of Corbyville was a guest at this meeting to organize a Baby Band and was introduced by the president.

Mrs. Bertrand based her address on Proverbs 22—6th verse, "Train up a child in the way he should go and when he is old he will not depart from it." Some one said in speaking of their children, "These are my jewels". In her remarks she said children are so trustful. An elderly one asked, "Am I so humble as to be led by a little child.". "We can trust God and have peace, with this peace the shadow will fall behind. Jesus has light for the orphans of poverty and sorrow. He has eternal light for everyone."

Mrs. John English, who had previously been chosen as Baby Band leader was introduced at this time to Mrs. Bertrand. Information concerning this work was discussed.

The group leader, Miss Bailey, gave a timely reading on "How Can we Work for Peace."

"Everyone desires peace, we are all in the front line in war and should work for world and lasting peace. One way to help bring peace is to help those who are starving as we all brothers so ought to help those less fortunate than ourselves". An example of appreciation in need were the people of Saskatchewan a few years ago, how they thanked the people of Ontario for their generous gifts of fruit, vegetables, clothing.

At the close of meeting delicious refreshments were served.

The hostess, by her thoughtful planning, did much to make this a grand success.

The guest table was centred with a large cake iced in white with "Melrose Baby Band" in pink lettering, and tall pink and blue tapers in crystal holders. Pink and blue serviettes also added to the color and spirit of the occasion.

Refreshments consisted of ham and salmon sandwiches, pickles, light and dark cakes and dainty cookies. Words of appreciation were expressed to the hostess for her kind hospitality. This proved an enjoyable afternoon for all present. So Melrose Baby Band starts off with a lively interest.

Rev. and Mrs. W. L. Scott were also present. Mrs. Scott extended an invitation to Melrose W.M.S. and the ladies of the congregation to attend the June meeting of the W.M.S. which is to be held at the parsonage on June 6th.

Million Dollar Suit Brought Against Govt. By Indians Will be Heard on June 18

Chewakon, Ont., May 11 (CP) — The Six Nations Indians $1,000,000 suit against the Canadian government will be heard June 18 by the Exchequer Court of Canada, it was learned at a meeting of the Indian council here Thursday.

The case, to come before Mr. Justice J. C. A. Cameron, is the culmination of a 100-year attempt by the Indians to get settlement of their "Grand River navigation company claim." It also follows after 18 years of negotiations with the federal government following the granting of a flat by the Earl of Athlone, Canada's Governor-General from 1940-46.

Nothwith Nor f theTAOI MF

News of the pending hearing reached the council in a letter from the Indians' solicitor, Angus Lemieux of Ottawa. Last November the council agreed to approximately $450,000 as payment in full of the claim.

Mr. Lemieux's letter indicated the Indians' offer was too high for the federal government to consider and it would be useful to allow the claim to be aired in the courts.

The claim includes restitution of Indian trust funds which were invested by the government in Upper Canada without the Indians consent in the now defunct Grand River Navigation Company. It also demands payment for lands permanently flooded by the Grand River because of the building of the Dunnville dam more than 100 years ago. In addition it includes payment for Indian lands granted by the government in 1832 to the navigation company, plus interest at five percent across 106 to 119 years.

Some members of the Indian council lighted they believe the government has broken faith with the Indians in deciding against the offer for settlement. They said the Indian affairs branch of the citizenship department was the first to suggest an out-of-court settlement.

New Plant Will Help Ease Sulphur Scarcity

Montreal, May 11 — (CP) — A new plant will be built at Copper Cliff, Ont., near Sudbury, to help relieve Canada's shortage of sulphur, the scarce material needed in the making of newsprint, explosives, and other products.

The plant will be built by Canadian Industries, Ltd., and will use by-product gases from the operations of International Nickel Co. of Canada, Ltd., at Copper Cliff, from what is known as the nickel company's flash-smelting process.

President Hall will be in the form of liquid sulphur dioxide, rather than as elemental sulphur, the form in which it is mined in Louisiana and Texas, the present chief sources of supply.

It is expected that the new plant, which probably won't be in production for more than a year, will produce some 90,000 tons of liquid sulphur dioxide a year.

Gamble Pays Off for B.C. Whaling Fleet

Coal Harbor, B.C., May 11—The expanding British Columbia whaling industry, accompanied by taking chances, has made another gamble pay off.

Early in April, one full month before the usual start of the season, two killer boats sailed from this Vancouver Island port for the whaling grounds off the southwestern tip of the island.

Although official figures are not in, it is believed more than 30 whales have been taken by the two ships in the first month's operation.

Today the Tahsis chief went to join the other two, and the normal season, which runs to September, is fully under way.

Manager of the shore station here is once an R.C.A.F. base-said the full staff of 90 men will soon arrive. The first whale caught 75 men when two new Norwegian killer boats arrive here to go into action.

Manned by Vancouver sailors, the Polar V A and Lobe VII were towed through the Panama Canal and are expected here in August. B.C. packers bought out Pacific West Africa, and the other at Rio de Janeiro.

Marks Expansion

The acquisition of the Norwegian ships marked an important expansion in the industry. When the present group entered whaling, they took over an operation ruled unprofitable by most business men.

Financial and technical hurdles were cleared, and the 1949 season ended with a total catch of 250 whales. Last season saw the total boosted to 312.

A five-ship fleet indicates a substantial rise in production. Demand for the oil and meat is strong in Scandinavian countries, and the United States is a ready market for the meat.

Years ago whaling was big business on the B.C. coast and scores of harpoon-equipped boats chased the mammals.

Dealt a hard blow by the rise of the petroleum industry and the plummeting demand for whale bone as a fashion aid, whaling now is in the middle of a comeback.

Modern hunting methods, operating techniques and fast, deadly ships have changed all but the color of the industry.

MAY HAVE JAPANESE EFFECT

Montreal, May 11. (CP)—Montreal wholesale produce dealers indicated today by Canada Cheese producers to ship 20 million pounds to the United Kingdom at 32 cents per pound, sea board, may have a decidedly adverse effect on the cheese and butter markets in Canada.

Domestic cheese prices are expected to rise about six cents a pound above last year's levels and cause a reduction on consumption in Canada. Trade circles here, on the other hand, feel that the higher price for cheese will tend to divert an already reduced milk flow to cheese production at the expense of butter.

Free Vacation At Swank Hotel Is Admitted

Washington, May 11— (AP) — Donald Dawson, White House aide, acknowledged yesterday that he and two other members of President Truman's staff took free vacations at a $30-a-day hotel in Miami Beach, Fla., after the hotel borrowed $1,500,000 from the government.

Appearing as a witness in the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Senate inquiry, Dawson acknowledged he had "social" contacts with members of what Senators call as "influential clique" operating around the R.F.C. the government's big money-lending agency, but that he had "no influence" with the R.F.C.

He contended he did not know the hotel had borrowed money from the R.F.C. when he accepted free lodgings for himself, Mrs. Dawson and their daughter in December 1949.

Pats' Commander Flying Home To See Daughter

With the Canadians in Korea, May 11 (CP) —Smitten by a personal tragedy, Lt.-Col. J. R. Stone left the front today and flew to Canada in what may be a race against death.

Col. Stone, commander of the 2nd Battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, in Korea, learned by cable last night that his two-year-old daughter, Moira, has undergone an operation for the removal of an eye afflicted by cancer, and that the other is affected by a tumor.

The Stones have one other child, a three-year-old daughter, Shelley, and are expecting a baby in July.

The cable to Col. Stone was the first intimation he had had of Moira's illness. It also ordered him home on compassionate leave and instructed him to leave the front immediately.

Maj.-Gen. Blackshaw Bryan, commander of the U.S. 24th division in Korea, assigned his personal aircraft to fly Col. Stone to an airstrip where he could connect with a courier plane for Tokyo. He also directed his staff to arrange the highest priorities for Col. Stone's Korea-Tokyo flight.

The Canadian military staff in Tokyo is arranging Col. Stone's flight to Vancouver as soon as possible.

Maj. Pat Tighe of Victoria took over command of the Patricias on Col. Stone's departure, with Maj. George Flint as his second-in-command. He was the same combination that took over recently when Col. Stone was ill with smallpox.

3.7 P.C. of Export Trade to Benefit From Duty Cuts

London, May 11 — (Reuters)— About £ 70,000,000 ($195,500,000) worth of exports — 3.7 per cent of total British export trade—will benefit from cuts in duty negotiated at the recent International Tariff Conference at Torquay.

A report on the conference, presented today to the House of Commons, shows that cuts in Britain's own tariffs will affect about £8,-000,000 worth of imports a year—mainly from Europe.

Britain concluded nine bilateral agreements at Torquay, the most important of which were with West Germany, Austria and Turkey.

Britain and the United States failed to reach an agreement.

The report says that the negotiations between Canada and the U. S. for their large-scale tariff agreement announced Tuesday might reduced some important margins of imperial preference in the system of lower tariffs among British Commonwealth countries). Australia, New Zealand and Southern Rhodesia also made small reductions in some preferences. The South Africa, India, Pakistan and Ceylon made none.

R. C. Parents Would 'Welcome Prosecution'

Maillardville, B.C., May 11— (CP)— Roman Catholic parents said last night at a meeting that they would "welcome "prosecution" for taking their children from school for religious instruction.

They added that they will take their children out of public schools wherever they deem it necessary.

Public school authorities have warned parents of the 650 children that they may be prosecuted if periodic withdrawal of the practice continues.

Roman Catholic officials recently closed their two parochial schools in the district, claiming the provincial government has refused to allocate enough funds for them to carry on. The children were then placed in public schools.

Parents drafted a letter to the Coquitlam district school board saying they would welcome prosecution because it would bring the school question into court.

They denied the board's accusation that the removal of children from school interferes with education training.

"We feel religious instruction is just as important," said one parent.

MADE NO COMMENT

Ottawa, May 11—(CP)—A bag of candy-coated popcorn and a bag of "Cheezies," both manufactured in Tweed, Ont., were presented Thursday to Finance Minister Abbott.

Frank Follwell (L—Hastings South) sent the bags across the floor of the Commons to Mr. Abbott and repeated a request that a 15-per-cent excise tax on candy-coated popcorn be repealed.

Mr. Follwell said he also was sending to the offices of members samples of the popcorn and the cheezies. Mr. Abbott accepted the gifts but made no comment.

Singapore and Malaya Govts. Expected to Follow British Ban on Rubber to Red China

Singapore, May 11 — (AP) The governments of Singapore and Malaya today were expected to duplicate shortly Britain's ban on rubber shipments to communist China.

Economic officials in Singapore would not comment, but indicated a high-level decision will be made soon.

Britain's move, announced in London yesterday, knocked the bottom out of the Malayan rubber market. In a widely - fluctuating market today, rubber sold as low as 1.43 Straits dollars a pound, far under the United States ceiling price of 66 cents a pound ($1.71 Straits).

It was the lowest price since last Sept. 30. Rubber had gone as high as $2.33 (Straits) on Feb. 9.

Tin and rubber are the mainstay of the Singapore market. Traders feel that the U. S. now can buy all the Malayan rubber she wants at almost any price she names. They regarded as certain that the Singapore and Malayan governments would follow Britain's embargo against communist China, which would mean loss of a big buyer.

Britain's action also stirred up fresh anti - American feeling among rubber producers and traders, who attribute the ban to U. S. pressure.

Even before Britain's embargo action, rubber traders had been shaken by the inability of the Singapore market to withstand price - depressing manoeuvres from the U. S.

Overseas support had been lacking in the market for several days, and U. S. buyers got large quantities of rubber at prices even lower than those set by the General Services Administration.

The British ban does not mean that communist China will get no more rubber.

Indonesia is a major producer who might supply Peiping, and the Chinese have been trying to get rubber and other strategic goods from her. But no trade pact has been made because Peiping apparently is unable to supply Indonesia with consumer articles in return.

ANNOUNCEMENT

We have recently installed a new Northern Electric Hammond Organ in our Chapel.

We are of the opinion this organ needs no description, since the majority of persons have heard its beautiful tones and variable effects both over the radio and in various functions.

We feel justly proud of this fine instrument, since it was manufactured in our own city and is the product of Northern Electric.

Our organist—Mrs. Grace Calvert — has had extensive experience in the use of the Hammond and will be at the console for all Chapel Services.

ARGUMENT STARTS AT "PEACE CONFERENCE"

Thousands of sadhus (holy men) from all corners of the globe recently convened in Delhi, India, for a spiritual parliament to pray for peace in the world. The gathering which lasted for one week was the first of its kind in India. Even among this holy men, it seems, there is disagreement on the meaning of peace and the methods for attaining it. Here a clash of old and new ideas is shown during the meeting. At left a sadhu is lecturing on orthodox ideas and at right a visiting holy man is giving his discourse on the modern way to peace. Each of the holy men has his own select audience. — Central Press Canadian.

LIBERAL MEMBER

Mr. Pouliot said Col. Ralston had insisted so much on the "weak points in the allied army in France" that the information was given to the "German command."

The result was that the Germans "rallied all their forces for a supreme attack in northern France, an attack—the Battle of the Bulge—which cost countless lives of American and Canadian soldiers."

Mr. Pouliot did not serve in either war and bolted from the Liberals when the government decided to impose limited conscription following Col. Ralston's resignation. He said he was making his statements to underline the danger of discussing defence matters in public.

He spoke after George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, had suggested that a Commons committee be established to study defence policies. The suggestion was made in the third day of a debate on the government's $1,500,000,000 defence program for 1951-52. The debate continues today.

The discussion was marked by a number of noisy, heated exchanges. One of them came after Maj.-Gen. G. R. Pearkes, V.C. (PC-Nanaimo) said Defence Minister Claxton had asked Mr. Pouliot to provide "some comic relief" following Mr. Drew's speech. Mr. Pearkes withdrew the statement after denials by Mr. Claxton and Mr. Pouliot.

Another Flare Up

Another flare up came after Gen. Pearkes accused Mr. Pouliot of making a "vicious attack" on a great Canadian. Mr. Pouliot said he had not made any attack. He had referred to statements of Col. Ralston and drawn his own conclusions.

Mr. Claxton said "Col. Ralston needs no praise from me or anyone else. Nothing that can be said can detract from his record."

Capt. Rodney Adamson (PC-York West) said if there was any man who had saved Canadian lives it was Col. Ralston. It was his insistence on reinforcements for the army overseas which finally stopped unnecessary casualties.

M. J. Coldwell, CCF leader, said he had the highest regard for Col. Ralston. John Blackmore (SC-Lethbridge) said Col. Ralston was largely responsible for Canada's military success in the Second World War.

In the general debate, Mr. Claxton said the government had decided that a defence committee should not be established. It would not work under Canada's system of government where the administration had to take the responsibility for decisions on defence.

Mr. Claxton disclosed that Canada's drive to build a fighter air force will gain momentum by the end of this year with the formation of one new fighter squadron monthly.

Rapid Acceleration

Production of two new types of aircraft will be hitting a pace [illegible] to end that will permit [illegible] acceleration of fighter strength. A squadron uses about 25 planes, and about 28 of the 40 jet fighters and numerous RCAF squadrons now planned will be fighters.

Purchase of bombers ranks second in priority, right behind fighters, in the current expansion plans. In the peacetime past, the regular air force has skipped bombers but has had a couple of reserve medium bomber squadrons.

Mrs. Drew said the lack of British - American agreement on standardization of arms should be a cause for concern. The standardization of equipment could mean the difference between victory and defeat in a crisis.

He chided the defence department for the "ghastly failure" to find in the last five years an area large enough to provide for the training of a brigade. Many of the existing camps in Canada could be expanded.

Mr. Drew accused Mr. Claxton of the "most dangerous kind of eyewash" in saying that the bureaus of statistics and labor department now provide enough information to allow for allocation of manpower for the armed forces.

TWELVE KILLED

Arosemena said his government will include representatives of all political groups except the outlawed communists. He said it will co-operate fully with the United States, which controls the Panama Canal zone territory through the middle of the republic.

Arias touched off the wave of violence Monday night with a decree outlawing the 1946 constitution, reinstating the 1941 charter and dissolving the National Assembly. He said he acted against an oppositionist-communist plot which "threatened the country.

Annulled Decree

In rioting Tuesday and Wednesday three persons were killed and 110 wounded, officials said.

Arias Wednesday night annulled his decree and Remon said he would support him in office. But the police chief switched his stand yesterday afternoon after Chief Justice Erasmo de La Guardia told a cheering crowd that the Arias impeachment was constitutional.

Arias and 1,000 followers entrenched themselves in the palace. Others barricaded streets leading to the building. Then the president rejected Remon's order to quit the palace.

Arias' supporters opened fire on a police guard. The city's streets were deserted as both sides battled with machine-guns, rifles, pistols and grenades.

His wife, two cabinet ministers and other aides were jailed with him.

In all 1,024 persons were reported under arrest.

Mr. and Mrs. James Juby and Margaret McKee, Peterborough, were weekend guests of Mr. and Mrs. G. Hough. Mr. and Mrs. S. Hamilton were Sunday guests at the same home.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Mills, Nancy and Thomas, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Lee Thompson, Picton.

Mr. Chas Reed and Mr. B. McLean, Picton, were weekend guests of Mrs. Martha Read.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Mallett and Elaine, Mr. and Mrs. David Cole and Garry, were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ken Needham.

The young people held their monthly meeting in the WA hall on Monday evening with pictures being the entertainment. These are interesting as well as educational and were enjoyed by all.

Canada Camera and Messrs. Robbie and Belasp are busy these days transplanting tomato plants. The weather has been unfavorable, making much extra work.

The many friends of Mr. Madam were sorry to hear of his untimely death. He was cheesemaker here the past two years and was respected by all.

BEDDER START PRACTICE!

Johnny Dunn, colored catching star of Philadelphia colored clubs, and pitching hot-shot Satchelfoot Paige arrived in Belleville Wednesday, and after a few hours "in the bay" took part in his first practice with the Belleville Redmen in Bridge Park.

Last night, with the eagle eye of President Jack Carson taking in the various scenes, the Redmen, some fairly old hold overs through a strenuous workout. From this corner, the workout was up to par with the arrival in the day of either Dunn or Paige, and the latter, although some tough opposition is being organized for other COBL squads.

* * *

Dunn lost no time in taking over the Redmen hurling squad. Out there under the catcher's instructions were flingers Bob Dunton, Billy Strahan, Johnny Mowat, late of Guelph and Galt, Cuthbert, Ivan Ron McGregor, Chuck Barriage, Sammy Muldoon, late of Kingston, and an unidentified lefthander who caught the eye of the railbirds.

* * *

In other action were Vern Gayne, Dick Fitzpatrick, Moose Bush, Hank Reeves, Red Carson, Dave Lockyer, Art Wright, and a dozen others. President Carson, in fact of a coach is taking over the squad and is not quoting the Dunn line as to how he is going to handle his charges. He pointed them towards batting, pitching, fielding and baseball practice, checker-by-a few galloping exercises as the boys could call it a full evening.

* * *

Pat Wilson, at present playing hockey with the St. Mike's Maroons, will be on hand next week, if satisfactory negotiations are concluded.

* * *

Dunn's prospect got action at the plate, but little time in the outfield as his hitting action showed up an inconsistent line at whether he had the keys throwing the hooks, fast balls and other assortments of delivery in rapid fire sequence, while not causing them to expose their arms to early - season mishaps.

The likeable Dunn, he's a friendly cuss, will catch on with the fans here. He is pleasant, a born baseball player, a natter-at outdoor who, with this, is a field general, and he made a distinct impression on the Redmen management. He is peppy, full of action and believes in team co-operation, concentration on play while the game is going on, and strict obedience to coaching orders.

"Treat me right", he intimated to this reporter, "is the way to win ball games. Let those hitters give me a couple runs in the first innings, and baby, that game is one in the bag."

He liked young Billy Strahan, a local kid that with coaching by the youngster will be a dandy pitcher. Bob Barton's fast ball caught his eye while Johnny Mowat's "slider" that broke sharply a few feet outside the plate was the a batter-fooler".

* * *

Dunn was born in Worcester, Massachusetts, and was a star ballplayer at 18 years of age. He left his school at Woodbury to join the United States Infantry and spent "one yeah, six months and 20 days" in the South Pacific. Returning he went to college and played for his school, later joining the New York Black Yankees, a colored baseballing squad. In 1940 he barnstormed with Jackie Robinson, Brooklyn Dodgers star and last year toured out with the Philadelphia-Washington Pilots, a colored squad that disbanded after arriving in Brockville. Several of the colored stars were gobbled up by the eastern COBL teams with Dean coming to Picton where he finished the season.

* * *

Johnny Mowat, owned by the Pittsburgh Pirates clubs, is a slim 22-year-old righthander who saw service with the Guelph and Galt junior squads and with the Galt Terriers in the Intermediate League. Johnny is also a hockey player and in his junior days was "IA" and "B" squads. Out of the hospital a here few weeks, he is picking up weight and when he regains normalcy should tip the scales at 181.

* * *

His mound stance and delivery at his first practice bespeaks experience and Coach Carson Dean thinks the youngster has all the earmarks of a topnotch pitcher. His "slider" as mentioned before had a lot of the boys baffled.

* * *

Another newcomer to baseball circles here is Ron McGregor, Kingston, who cavorted with the Loons and other senior Kingston squads as well as junior. Ron, who works in the Murray Davis-controlled "mob dispensary" caused tears to flow in the Kingston branch when he was transferred here some months ago. But the McGregor has picked up weight, two bales, a lot of pep and a new slant on life since he left Kingston. Must be the change of environment, plus the proximity to Dick Fitzpatrick's sunny disposition. No charge, Richard.

* * *

Orve Picton says the baseball pot is sizzling so our "Special" reporter informs us. Seems as thought the lads thinking have an intermediate squad with "polenty" of money behind it — but no teams with which to play. On the other side of the picture there are strong rumors afoot that the COBL entry might fold up. In fact the executive of the club held a meeting on Wednesday night, and another special meeting yesterday afternoon. While this is being written, that meeting is in progress, and news of it will appear in the other week if warned in time. Picton favorite seems to be the matter. Keith MacDonald, "is reported will be out of the game for at least six weeks with a chipped elbow sustained during hockey.

Durocher Leading Giants Back From National Loop Graveyard; In Seventh Place

By JACK HAND
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

With Al Dark hitting .370, Leo Durocher is leading his New York Giants back from the National League graveyard.

Winners of nine of their last 11 starts (8-3 against western clubs), the Giants have almost wiped out the memory of their horrible start when they lost 11 games in a row. They now are only four games out of first place.

Dark took matters into his own hands while the western clubs invaded the Polo Grounds. Twice he had four hits. He hammered two grand-slam homers. He drove in 14 runs in the last nine games. And all the while his buddy, Eddie Stanky, continued to get on base every game with a hit or walk. Stanky at .318 is the only other Giant batting at the .300 class.

Dark had a hand in all the Giants' runs in yesterday's 3-2 victory over the flu-ridden St. Louis Cardinals. He singled in the first inning and rode home on Hank Thompson's homer. In the fifth he doubled and scored the run that proved decisive on Ray Noble's single.

Cards Below Par

The three-straight sweep from St. Louis lost some of its glamor because the Cards were far below par. Only three regulars have in the line-up. Six players and a batboy were confined to the flu.

Rookie Roger Bowman and veteran Dave Koslo stymied up to hold the Cards to seven hits with the decision going to Bowman.

Cincinnati tightened the race by knocking off the league-leading Boston Braves 4-1 on Ewell Blackwell's seven-hit pitching. Blackwell missed a shutout in the eighth, when Grady Hatton let a pop fly fall for a two-base error. Blacky also pitched in with a double and triple in the 11-hit attack on loser Johnny Sain and Chet Nichols.

Dodgers Move up

Brooklyn moved within one game of the leaders by bumping Chicago 6-1. Don Newcombe coasted home with a seven-hitter. The big blow was Carl Furillo and McLish was Gil Hodges' ninth homer in the fifth inning.

Pittsburgh shut out the Phillies 2-0 on Murry Dickson's four-hitter. All the scoring came in the sixth inning off Subba Church, Ralf Kiner knocked in the one run with his third homer.

The Phils also lost catcher Del Wilber, who was knocked out in a collision with Wally Westlake. Wilber suffered a sprain and will be out under his right eye and across his nose. Several stitches were required to close the gash under the eye.

All four games in the American League were postponed on account of weather.

Valleyfield Takes Two-Point Lead In Final Series

By VIC MORRIS, JR.
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, May 11—(CP)—Hector (Toe) Blake's Valleyfield Braves hammered out a 7-3 victory over Toronto St. Michael's here last night in a turbulent Alexander Cup playoff game before 8,717 fans. The win gave Valleyfield a two-point lead in the series.

A previously-mild series turned into a rough-house battle in the first and third periods with players, spectators and police mixing in a melee that delayed the game for more than a half hour.

Referees Stan Pratt and Hap Shouldice called 27 penalties, including a total of seven misconduct and one match misconduct. Toronto was given 14 of the basement.

The victory was the second for Blake's Braves in the best-of-seven series which was changed from a best-of-seven affair to a point series. Last night's game decreed a four-point game, giving Valleyfield a total of seven points on the basis of two points for their previous victory and one for a tied game. The remaining eight points first will be the winner of the series.

The Braves have five points made up of two triumphs and a tie. Toronto has three and St. Toronto also will be a four-point contest.

Pitched Battle Staged

Big Pat Wilson and Bisillon were responsible for the first-period battle. Wilson "objected to the Valleyfield player's head during a rush on the Toronto net. Bisillon retaliated with a shove. Then Jack Irvine joined the shoving and seconds later both teams had their full complement on the ice and a pitched battle was staged in the midst of discarded sticks and gloves.

When order was restored 15 minutes later, the penalty box was jammed with eight players sitting out minor and major penalties. Bisillon and Wilson drew majors and minors for their part in the affair.

Schmidt fired Valleyfield's sixth goal at 6:12 of the third period. Then another melee broke out when Phil Menich and a fan traded punches. The spectator grabbed Menich's stick. Toronto players rushed to his aid and then the fight moved over to the penalty box where Menich's opponent was finally wrestled witheach other.

Bisillon drew a match misconduct for his part and Wilson was sent off with a minor. The referees dispensed their second coal while the Ontario champions were short two players, Bisillon scoring.

Throughout the contest, the Braves had a decided edge in play, outshooting St. Mike's 39-21.

St. Louis Browns May be Moved To Milwaukee

(By The Canadian Press)

The owners of St. Louis Browns denied knowledge Thursday of a reported plan to move the club to Milwaukee but admitted poor attendance might force the club out of the league.

Bill and Charley Dewitt, the brothers who won 58 per cent of the club's stock, were reported to have plan to move the club to Milwaukee, outlined in a post-dispatch story, "seems to be one that could be worked out."

Milwaukee, one of the American League's original members, has been clamoring for major-league baseball for several years. A new ball park with a planned seating capacity of 70,000 is under construction in that city.

At Chicago, Will Harridge, American League president, said Thursday his office had no word of possible transfer of St. Louis Browns to Milwaukee, Wis.

"We have heard nothing on the subject from Bill or Charley Dewitt (controlling Brown's owners)," Harridge said.

At Saugus, Mass., Bill Ezinicki, Boston Bruins right winger, will make his formal bow as a golf professional here today at the Idle Hour Golf Course.

Ezinicki will share the teaching assignments with Jim Gaffney, its permanent pro, for a month and then will take over at the Colonial Country Club in nearby Lynnfield.

As a pro-to-be Colonial Ezinicki will succeed Captain Milt Schmidt, the Bruins team-mate and recent winner of the National Hockey League's most valuable player Hart trophy.

AGED MAN RISKS FLAMING DEATH TO SAVE FOUR-YEAR-OLD BOY

1: A 3-room house and all its contents were completely destroyed by fire a few weeks ago near Lethbridge, but not before one man had — thanks to the courage of an elderly man, Mrs. Hoggard, returning from a visit to the neighbors, found her four-year-old son from the windows of the house. Terrified at the thought of her two children trapped inside, she rushed in and saved the baby. But flames and smoke prevented her from returning for the older child.

2. Then John Borland arrived on the scene. "I'm an old man," he said, "but I'm going in to get that boy!" Then, with no thought for his personal safety, he defeated the flaming house . . . and, crawling on his hands and knees, braved the scorching heat and choking, hot smoke. After moments that seemed like hours to the gallant old gentleman, he found the little boy.

3. Among the many services rendered by the Canadian Humane Association is the annual presentation of the Dow Award. This year Mrs. Hoggard when Borland appeared with the scroll and a cheque for $100 in recognition of his courage. Mrs. Borland's heroism almost as a matter of routine to her husband. Then, it was found, he was to receive him into the company of those who have won THE DOW AWARD.

THE Dow AWARD

THE DOW AWARD is a citation presented for acts of outstanding heroism and humanity, as a tribute to the memory of Allan Dow, founder of the Canadian Humane Association. The Dow Award Committee, a group of citizens of high standing in the community, considers all evidence from newspapers and reports made by a number of persons before any award is made.

Member of Four British Empire Games Teams Dies

Calgary, May 11— (CP) George Sutherland, recognized for over 30 years as Canada's greatest all-round track and field athlete, died in hospital last night after a brief illness. He was 56.

A member of four British Empire Games teams, Sutherland also carried Canada's colors to the Olympic Games on two occasions.

He first came into prominence in 1926 when he missed selection on the Canadian Olympic team but throughout the 1930s he reached his peak and started a track and field dominion in Alberta that was to last for nearly 20 years.

In 1933 he set the Canadian decathlon record, scoring a total of 6,901.35 points under the Olympic system of scoring.

Starting as a sprinter, Sutherland worked fanatically almost every event staged in Canadian track and field programs, specializing in weight events in recent years.

He competed regularly in Scottish games in Calgary and other western Canadian cities and probably held more trophies in such competitions than any other athlete in all Canadian history. He competed throughout the 1950 season and at the July 1 games in Edmonton scored winning points in a track and field meet in which both his son and daughter were also winners.

Montreal Royals In First Place In Int. League

(By The Associated Press)

Maybe the Brooklyn Dodgers have another Jackie Newcombe in Joe Black of their Montreal farm in the International League.

Black, a six-foot, two-inch 218-pounder making his bow in organized ball, has won his first two for the Royals.

The 27-year-old righthander pitched Montreal into first place last night with a six-hit job on Buffalo 3-1. Hobie Landrith's homer in the third ruined his shutout chances.

Pitching—Lopat, New York 5-0.

College Boys Tough to Sign Say Major Scouts

Cincinnati, May 11 — (AP) — Major - league baseball scouts say it's tough work to sign American college players to contracts these days.

They blame the war in Korea. "The kids are afraid that if they grab the offers of the scouts, the army will grab them," said Hank Gowdy, Cleveland Indians scout, when he was here the other day.

"It's a tough job to sign a youngster who is enrolled in college officer's training corps and beyond the army's reach," said another scout, Bob Kline, who beats the bushes for the St. Louis Cards.

"That narrows the scouting down to high school and sandlot baseball, and I've taken in seven scholastic tournaments already this spring and have yet to see a kid who is ready for professional baseball."

Gowdy, now 62, and a veteran of two wars and 19 years of catching in the National League, said one fault of the current crop of young ball players is that they do not stick to one position.

"It's hard enough to master one position, anyway, trying to be a Jack of all trades," he declared.

"Why you are a fellow who I think is a pretty good judge of ball-players. You tell me there is a young shortstop over in a certain town that you think is a good prospect.

"I go over to take a look at him and find he is pitching. Too often coaches these days take the strongest-armed kid and use him as a pitcher. This, many times, retards the development of a youth who has a chance of becoming a good player."

Too often, he said, the record is made by a boy who is big for his age and simply overpowers the other kids.

FIGHTS LAST NIGHT

(By The Associated Press)

Brooklyn: Paddy Demarco, 197½, Brooklyn, stopped Jimmy Richmond, 140, Baltimore (3.)

YESTERDAY'S STARS

(By The Associated Press)

Batting, Al Dark, Giants — Boosted batting average to .370 with double and single, scoring two runs in New York's 3-2 edge over St. Louis.

Pitching, Murray Dickson, Pirates—Shut out Phillies with four hits in 2-0 fourth victory.

SEEDING UNDER WAY

Toronto, May 11. (CP)—Farmers are making headway in Ontario.

Weather conditions which bogged down work on the fields have improved and seeding operations now are under way.

The Agriculture Department said in its weekly crop report on Thursday that farmers in most counties are working in the fields, though some land still is under water. Pastureland also has improved with warmer weather.

LEAFS NOT OVERWORKED

Lindsay, May 11 CP)—Coach Joe Primeau said Thursday night Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League won the Stanley Cup this season because they didn't overwork their players.

Addressing a banquet for Lindsay's Ontario Minor Hockey Association Midget B champions, Primeau said:

"Detroit Red Wings failed in the Stanley Cup playoffs because they used their top men an average of 35 minutes per game. We took advantage of detailed records in handling the Leafs and no players were used over 30 minutes a game."

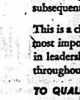
High School Graduates!

become Commissioned Officers in the Canadian Army Active Force



Young men recently graduated from High School with a minimum educational standard of Junior Matriculation, may become officers in the Canadian Army Active Force.

If accepted you begin training at Camp Borden as an officer cadet to qualify as a Second Lieutenant in the Active Force. You will receive Second Lieutenant's pay while in training. This training will consist of three courses totalling a period of twenty-eight weeks. When you are granted a commission you will then serve for periods of 3, 4 or 5 years as you choose, under the Short Service Commission Plan. At the end of this service you may apply for a permanent commission.

The first group will start training 21st May 1951 and subsequent groups will enter each fortnight.

This is a chance to serve Canada at a time when defence stands as a most important national concern. The training and experience in leadership will be invaluable assets to any young man throughout his whole life.

TO QUALIFY YOU MUST BE:

- Single
- Physically Fit
- Between 18 and 25 years of age
- A Junior Matriculation Graduate
- A Canadian or other British Subject

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Sneer not at learning a routine in bridge. Refer not to book rules as if they were only for those who lack imagination. If you do, you will only show your ignorance.

Routine is a basic preparation for teamwork. It is a standard background readied for action. It is a predetermined foundation of what may be expected as correct.

A routine does not stifle initiative. It shows you what may be too cautious. It warns you what may be too rash. It tells you the chances you may take. But it does not hog-tie your mind.

When you know a routine in bridge, you know when it is safe to lie. You also know how much of a lie is safe. You also know when your partner is lying; and what to do about it.

Suppose partner denies having a specific set of values. If he later makes a bid that shows these values you know he is lying. That is, you know he lacks some quality or quantity for the bid.

Rule says an opening bid of one shows five tricks, four high cards, two sure tricks. Rule says a takeout double shows the same values as does an opening bid of one.

Suppose, then, partner passes up a chance to start with a bid that opens. And on the next round he doubles for takeout. Does he not say he is lying a little about his values?

You are dealer with this hand:

♥A Q J 5
♣K 8 3

Lacking two sure tricks you should not open the bidding. So you pass. Your first opponent opens with a spade, your partner passes, the next opponent passes. Suppose you now double for takeout.

You are not telling the absolute truth that a takeout double would promise. Your partner knows it. Why? Because you denied that much already. Some lies are wise.

AT THE BELLE

"Samson and Delilah," The World's Greatest Love Story

The veteran British actor, who first showed his early-day sartorial class in Cecil B. DeMille's "Cleopatra" and "The Crusades," continues his record in Paramount's Technicolor spectacle, "Samson and Delilah," which opens Saturday at the Belle Theatre from 1.00 p.m.

Cast in the role of Ahtur, a Philistine army captain, Wilcoxon wears his garb with all the distinction which in the past has made him a model for actors working on B.C. roles.

Wilcoxon first donned sandals and togas when he was imported by Producer DeMille in the early 1930's from England to play the role of Marc Antony in "Cleopatra." Since that time he has been forced to wear civies in such pictures as "Mrs. Miniver" and "The Man Who Wouldn't Die," but it is well-known that Wilcoxon feels most at home in loose-fitting tunic and manized wedgies.

SLIGHT CHANGE

Fredericton — (CP) — New Brunswick game laws have been changed to permit hunters next fall to take two deer of either sex. Previously a hunter has been allowed to shoot two bucks, or a buck and a doe, but not two does.

O. K. SO FAR

Toronto — (CP) — Only one fire has been reported in Ontario bushland so far this season, a small blaze that was quickly extinguished near Tweed in eastern Ontario. In April last year the Ontario Lands and Forests Department fire-fighters handled 11 fires.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

For Saturday, May 12

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—By combining your resources and giving your effort full energetic purpose you gain more along well. Be more than ordinarily keen handling money, giving it out.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—Accents on upward trend, especially for business, money matters. Attend to urgent routine first, then go after the unusual, out-of-ordinary. Better rays after 4 p.m.

May 21 to June 21—(Gemini)—Remember all is not gold that glitters, nor is one setback the final answer. Your natural push, that desire to go on to success can put you in right position to gain. Be consistent.

June 22 to July 22—(Cancer)—Dull outlook in places today. However Cancer's tenacity and versatile nature should stand you well. Good period to build for better, more encouraging days. Don't force opinions.

July 24 to August 22 —(Leo)—Keep eyes and ears alerted all this week, this uncertain period. Your specific ability and talents are very adaptable to this day, use them rightly for progress. Hold steady always.

August 23 to September 22 —(Virgo)—Even though things may be hard to solve, don't be too conservative. In financial matters, spend wisely. Domestic and personal affairs can fare better always with a sound sense of humor.

September 24 to October 23 —(Libra)—Better not venture if you have the confidence to let your better talents guide. Uniform action, giving full credit where it belongs, and taking yours when due, will pay.

October 24 to November 22 —(Scorpio)— Little lustre or advantage for you for clever-minded ones. Don't hurry decisions and efforts will click better. Procrastination can handicap, don't invite it. Be consistent.

November 23 to December 22 —(Sagittarius)—You have fortunate star vibrations now with Jupiter in benefic aspect. But other aspects not so auspicious advise greater caution than usual to attain full benefit from Jupiter's.

December 23 to January 21 —(Capricorn)— Not all favorable except for sound money matters. Day asks steady, unworried action for better returns. Don't try to make it a whirlwind, sans advancement enough.

January 22 to February 20—(Aquarius)— Advantages not all obvious, dig for them, and at same time be alert for new pitfalls. Tendency may be to discourage easily—Don't! Finances favored if handled smartly.

February 21 to March 20 —(Pisces)— A day to challenge, test your true capability. Enjoy the challenge, do little (reasonable) showing off of your talents, your knack for doing tasks well in a pinch. Good luck!

YOU BORN TODAY: Impressive individuality, should and usually do seek high development and astonish others with learning and all-round ability. This, of course, if you live true to God's commandments and the fine characteristics He bestowed upon you. Learn not to grieve at ingratitude of others. Remember instead that God is always your friend and He won't desert you. Any worthy work for which you are trained, or have special liking you can handle successfully.

Birthdate: Dante S. Rossetti, English poet, painter; Henry Cabot Lodge, U.S. statesman.

COON CAUGHT IN LINDSAY

Lindsay, May 11—(CP)—A raccoon was caught in the main street Thursday. Resident scratched their head.

The raccoon was found perched atop a metal hydro pole, which holds the town's only traffic light. Two youths tried to climb the pole. They failed. Police were called. They contacted the Hydro company. Hydro workmen put a ladder up against the pole.

The raccoon toppled to the ground and the youths stuffed it into a box.

But that bothers residents is this: How did the raccoon scale

Bethel United Church Extends Welcome To New Residents

On Monday evening last a large number of Bethel folk gathered at the church to give the hand of welcome to Mr. and Mrs. Earl Parr and Mr. and Mrs. John Mulheron and their respective families who have recently taken up residence in this district.

The pastor, Rev. H. G. Vaclavik, was chairman for the occasion, and he also presented slides which he had taken on the circuit last year. These were interesting and greatly enjoyed.

Community singing was in charge of Mrs. Harold Elliott, and Mrs. William Heath.

Vocal solos given by Mrs. Walter Warren, Miss Peggy Rodgers and Miss Donalda Heath, Misses Shirley Cooney and Marlene Hadley contributed a vocal duet and readings were given by Mrs. Edgar McKeown.

Mrs. Thomas Laycock and Miss Joyce Reid.

Mr. Walter Warren, president of Stirling Cheese Manufacturing Company, extended a welcome in the new cheesemaker, Mr. Harold Parr, Mrs. Parr and baby.

Mr. Harry Heath, Supt. of Bethel Sunday School and Mr. H. C. Tucker, on behalf of Bethel United Church, gave a welcome to Mr. and Mrs. John Mulheron and Margaret, and to the Parr family.

Brief replies were made after which refreshments were served in the adjoining church hall, during which time everyone had the opportunity to get acquainted with the newcomers.

125 Orangemen From C. Hastings At Springbrook

West Huntingdon — Orangism was put on the map at Springbrook on Thursday evening when over one hundred and twenty-five Orangemen from centre Hastings, also a large delegation from Havelock, assembled in the Orange Hall at Springbrook. Many distinguished members of the order were also present including Bro. Fred Bateman newly-elected R.W. Grand Master of Ontario East, Deputy Grand Master Bro. R. Sanderson of Havelock, Bro. H. Graham of Kingston, (Grand Organizer) Bro. Ernest Coulter, County Master, centre Hastings, Bro. Archie Sinclair, Co. Chaplin and a large number of past county masters.

The W.M., Bro. Murray Bateman, of Springbrook lodge presided over the gathering in a very efficient manner. Bro. H. Graham, was degree captain for the Royal Arch Degree. He was assisted by Rev. Bro. Vanderburgh, Bro. Archie Sinclair of Tweed, Bro. R. Sanderson of Havelock, Bro. Jas. Diamond and Bro. Percy Alger of Belleville and County Master Bro. Ernest Coulter and County Marshal Bro. W. Neal. Five members of Springbrook lodge enjoyed the degree which was most impressive.

Bro. Fred Bateman was given hearty welcome to his lodge for having attained the office of grand master for which he made a suitable reply.

Short addresses were also given by H. R. Graham, R. Sanderson, Rev's. Beare and Vanderburgh. At the close refreshments were served in the dining room of the lodge.

A special meeting was held in the Orange Lodge here on Friday evening when County Master Mr. Ernest Coulter made his official visit. Mr. H. Graham, Grand Organizer, of Eastern Ontario, also gave an annual visit and brought a most helpful address.

Visiting members were present from Mongonaro Lodge and Halloway Lodge, and at the close refreshments were served.

Plan to Improve Town Streets Made by Council

Picton—A program to improve streets throughout the town was placed at a special meeting of town council, Wednesday night. As a result of the installation of sewerage mains, only a few of the streets are now paved and the dust nuisance has been a cause for much complaint.

Since many householders have not yet made their house connections with sewerage laterals, it is impossible to proceed with much paving. It was pointed out by Mayor H. J. McFarland. It was decided that as soon as these connections are made on Queen Street, that it will be paved. On other streets, it is planned to scarify, reshape and a primer coat, including application of chips and asphalt. It was decided to buy necessary gravel instead of operating the town's rock crusher. Any work done this year will be with a view to an extensive paving program next year, the Mayor stated.

He Came to Kill

By Adeline McElfresh

She said, "why didn't [illegible]me of you, just a little, although you were with Mart Preston last night," she sighed. "It means you down."

Loreena agreed that "it" did.

"Of course," Sondra said "it's much worse for me. I have to suspect my own husband."

"Have 'to?" Leeana echoed shocked.

"Yes," shortly. "Jasper pretends to be so terribly afraid it's me—but I'm not that is. He don't want me to go into a room when Peter's there. He thinks Peter came here to kill him. Because I married him— Jasper, I mean. But he didn't," Leeana. Peter needs money. Killing Jap would not get it for him. Killing Aunt Maggie would. Under terms of the old will, the one in effect since she died before her lawyer could come, the boys and Aunt Agatha share and share alike after certain bequests, of course. Peter couldn't wait."

"Why does Peter need money?" Leeana was very aware of the jeweled lavaliere, lying cool against her flesh. Peter surely wasn't too hard up or he couldn't have redeemed it, she thought. He was planning to use it as a club over Miss Maggie, to get more money? Hardly. More probable was a shrewd scheme some how involving Sondra. She said, "Miss Maggie spoke of checks—"

"Checks." Sondra's laugh was harsh. "Alienation of affections. Heart-balm. Attorney Alleyne here. Peter had bled the old girl for plenty. No wonder he threw it as a gauntlet back in his face. But I don't think he killed her. That would take guts."

For the first time Leeana noticed the lines about Sondra's eyes. They gave her a haggard look.

"I know," she said, watching Leeana. "You're seeing what Thorne Hill has done to me. They told me that on Broadway, too, when I went back. No sparkle. No 'youth.'" She flung back her head, defiant. "That's what brought be back here, Leeana. I thought if Jasper loved me enough we'd go away. Just us."

"And he wouldn't?" Leeana hated herself for asking, but the trapped look in Sondra's eyes wrenched it from her.

"He wouldn't," Sondra said slowly. "Not yet. That's what he said. 'Not yet.'"

"And then Miss Maggie was killed, ."

Sondra turned away. "Yes," she said huskily. "Now Jasper says we are going—soon. As soon as he's sure of Peter. You see why I'm afraid of him."

Leeana whispered. "Yes," but Sondra had already gone.

The lavaliere —where could she hide it? Certainly not in her room, for if the murderer might search and find it. Leeana was thinking of Peter now as a man, who had killed his aunt; he was desperate, he would kill again if he been desperate enough to confide in her.

But why hadn't he told the sheriff? Or Mart Preston? Or even Sondra, who so obligingly had provided him with an alibi for the time of his aunt's death?

Leeana carefully, Leeana folded the lavaliere into her handkerchief. She looped thread into a skein and knotted it securely, leaving a yard length which she attached to the window sill by way of a picture nail and the heel of her shoe. Then she raised the window and lowered the precious package to mid-air safety outside. Not even Peter Thorne's sharp eyes could have done better, she congratulated herself as she pulled the window down and locked it.

"A nice job my dear."

Leeana whirled. "Jasper!"

Courage. Jasper knew!

Sly, cruel, he'd don't know what you're talking about, Jasper. Cross my heart. Now—will you go?"

"No," sullenly. "You've been talking to Sondra. I don't know she hates me, I know she has reason to. But don't believe that I did not kill Aunt Maggie!"

"That," Leeana said cripsly "is what Peter says."

Instantly she could have bitten out her tongue. Jasper Thorne's pale face flushed, already stormy darkened. Caution came into his eyes, blanketing the angry suspicion that had been there, making him a more dangerous enemy than he had been before.

"Peter, eh? Hit off the beam," she went on quickly, "What with all that's been going on around here, he thinks everybody is ready to pounce on him, I tried to tell him it's foolish, to let the sheriff find the guilty one, but—"

She broke off, shrugging. "You know Peter—"

"Yes," Jasper admitted "I know Peter."

He sounded, Leeana thought, as though he wished he didn't. She said, "Peter, really, doesn't have too much of the old Thorne stability. When he runs out of cunning—"

"Exactly!" Jasper interrupted. "Peter never was the one to take things on even keel. He always wanted his path pitched upward, everything easy. Especially in the future. Only Peter wants his future right now, Me—I can wait. Forget you saw me, Leeana. If you want the lavaliere, well"—he grinned horribly—"if you're earned it, I'd say," he left.

Sure of only one thing—that it had not been Sondra's sharp-clawed fingers at her throat— Leeana retrieved the Thorne family heirloom from its hiding place in the vent and went to bed. Let Sheriff Purdy worry about the confounded thing, she wasn't going to be the one to murderer crack her head because of it!

Was it possible Sondra had? Could Peter have stolen the jewel on some previous visit, then written Miss Maggie that Sondra had sold it in New York?

Had that been the real secret of the letter no one—certainly not Peter Thorne!—would tell? Wearily, Leeana went into the living room, deserted now but littered, nevertheless, with the same strange sense of antagonism, dread and fear that seemed to pervade the entire house.

The house held a secret, too—the knowledge of murder. The knowledge at which Peter Thorne had hinted.

She stretched out on the divan conscious only of how tired she was. She yawned and rubbed her eyes, but they would not stop burning. She hated the lavaliere, hated the cool feel of it, pinned there beneath her sweater, hated the hatred it had caused, . And the fear. Why had Peter brought it home?

Beyond all doubt the lavaliere was in some way, connected with Miss Maggie's death.

And Peter had told the truth. Somehow, now, she was sure of that, too. Peter had come to Thorne Hill to kill Miss Maggie.

He had gone to her room—to find her already dead.

But what else had he found? Who else?

Suddenly terrified, Leeana sat upright. Peter did know!

Darkness, pierced by fingers of light as the log crackled and burned merrily in the fireplace, became damnable, in each shadow was a dark, lurking form. Riding each flickering flame was a red devil goading the murderer to kill again. Leeana choked back a cry and almost ran to the door and into the lighted hall beyond.

Miss Agatha was coming down the stairs, her hand wrestling lightly on the banister. She smiled, and Leeana saw with surprise that she was wearing make-up again. Too much. And her hair was caught up in its familiar frizzy curls.

"Good evening niece," she said warmly, "You slept through dinner, so we—Why, Leeana what's wrong?"

Leeana made herself glance at her watch—it was after 9— and take a deep breath before she answered. No need to tell a nervous old woman you were more nervous than she.

She said "nothing at all, Miss Aggie, Have you seen Peter?"

Miss Agatha seemed more like Miss Maggie than ever as she snorted disdainfully and tossed her head.

"Peter is the popular one tonight! Too many people want him."

"Who?" Leeana asked sharply. "Why—Jasper, and later that Mart Preston Sondra says you're stuck on." She giggled girlishly. "When was that, Miss Aggie?"

"Right after dinner." The old lady repeated "why?" suspiciously.

"You haven't seen Peter since?"

Miss Aggie said "no" and let her mouth open, Leeana ran past her up the stairs before she could ask why again.

Propped up on a pillow in the middle of the bed was a hurriedly scrawled cryptic note:

"Let them look for me tonight. Tomorrow you'll know the truth. It was signed "Peter."

FATHER OF EIGHT GETS TEACHER'S DEGREE

Beginning a teaching career when most persons are thinking of taking things easy, Fred Bailey of Kingston, Ont., has just graduated from Ontario College of Education in Toronto at the age of 39. He has eight children, the last arriving the day before he heard he had passed his final examinations. He supported his family all through his five years of school by means of D.V.A. credits and by working at nights and holidays. Shown here with five children, he says the effort was worth while even though he did get discouraged "once in a while." Central Press Canadian.

Claremont, Ont., May 12—(CP)—A bank manager and his wife were held at gunpoint for 2½ hours early today while three masked and armed bandits tried and failed to crack the vault of the Bank of Commerce branch in this community 15 miles northwest of Oshawa.

The oxygen supply of an acetylene torch being used on the bank vault died out before the bandits were able to reach thousands of dollars in cash and securities. The exact amount was not announced.

W. L. Irwin, the bank manager, said he was awakened when the bandits put a ladder to a sunroom window of his apartment over the bank. He and his wife went to investigate and were met at gunpoint in their living room.

Masked, Wore Gloves

Irwin said the men were masked and wore gloves.

From 2.45 a.m. to 5.15 a.m., one of the three held the couple with his gun while the other two worked on the vault. They opened a downstairs door of the bank to bring in their acetylene torch and equipment.

Telephone and burglar-alarm wires were cut to prevent warning being given.

Sgt. Gordon Campbell and Constable Gordon Keast of the provincial police detachment at Whitby are investigating, together with two men from the O.P.P. Criminal Investigation Branch, in Toronto.

Sabres Damage One Red Jet In Dogfight

U. S. Fifth Air Force Headquarters, Korea, May 12—(AP)—One Russian-made MIG-15 jet was damaged today in an air battle 30 miles southeast of Sinuiju.

Twelve F-86 Sabre jets and 16 MIGs engaged in scattered dogfights that lasted five minutes before the reds raced to Manchuria.

All American planes returned safely to their own base. Later this afternoon an unarmed photo plane was fired on by three red jets in the Sinuiju area.

The pilot, Lieut. Edwin Stolts, said "there were four MIGs in the flight, but only three made firing passes. I headed for home and two of them followed me for about 30 miles, but didn't fire again."

COMMUNISTS OCCUPY TOWN

Rangoon, Burma, May 12 (Reuters) —A strong communist force has stormed and occupied the town of Laungkon, a government stronghold 20 miles south of Taxo on the area bordering Thailand, it was reported today. Tribal troops were being rushed to the area. The town was reported to have fallen in the early hours of Thursday.

Body of Ewing Boy Found Floating in Bay

A heart-breaking search by a Canifton district police patrol yesterday two months was ended Friday evening with finding of the body of 11-year-old Chester Ewing, drowned in the Moira River last March 9th.

The body of the young boy was found floating in the Bay of Quinte at Massassaga Point, five miles southeast of Belleville. Everett Jeffrey, Massassaga pilot, made the found when body floating against his boathouse as he returned with his catch from home to launch a boat.

Ewing was drowned in the Moira River on St. Patrick's Day when a cable car in which he and Raymond Holgate, 23, were riding sagged into the river. Holgate lifted Ewing out of the partially submerged car and attempted to carry him ashore and both were swept downstream in the current.

Half a mile down the river Holgate was picked ashore by rescuers but he died later in hospital. Efforts to save the Ewing boy were then resumed to his death in the fast moving current.

Canada Starts Work on New Guided Missile and New Anti-Tank Weapon

Montreal, May 12 (CP) — The engineering Institute of Canada last night wound up its three-day annual convention with election of officers and presentation of awards.

Before final sessions were concluded, however, delegates heard Dr. O. M. Solandt, chairman of the defence research board, tell them that Canada has started work on a new guided missile and a new anti-tank weapon expected to be more accurate than the United States Army's bazooka.

The guided-missile development, going on under the Canadian defence research development establishment, will be a "very complex device in which all aspects, such as structure, aerodynamics and electronics are extremely closely interrelated," Dr. Solandt gave few details of the projects, other than the bare announcement that defence research already had started.

He said defence research has already produced a new anti-tank shot for 17-pounder and 76-M.M. guns and a "greatly-improved and simplified flame thrower." Work is proceeding on the design for a howitzer for mountain warfare.

Dr. Solandt, however, that Canada is weak in trained mechanical-design engineers and has not been much in the position to hire for designs.

In elections, Irs P. Macnab of Halifax was installed as the new president, succeeding James A. Vance of Montreal. Dr. H. J. Macnab is general manager of the Halifax public service commission.

In another address, Sir William Stanier, British consulting engineer, warned that Canada will not be able to make the most of her industrial opportunities unless more attention is paid to the practical training of the engineer.

After explaining British methods of training engineers, Sir William, noting Canada's lack of "true engineering craftsmen," said:

"Britain can benefit Canada by assisting her in the training of such men. We shall welcome your young men to Britain and assist them in every way to study our improved and simplified flame

Two Soldiers Shot by Police Chief in Georgia

Warner-Robins, Ga., May 12 — (AP)—A Georgia police chief fatally shot two soldier-prisoners last night and then "gave" himself to the centre of civil-military inquiry into the killings.

Thomas Bridges, chief of police at Hawkinsville, shot the two privates in the presence of his six-year-old son.

The soldiers—whose names were withheld pending notification of kin—were picked up yesterday on A.W.L. charges.

Bragg said he was attacked by his prisoners and shot them in self-defence. A coroner's jury agreed.

But Sheriff C. E. Chapman said the soldiers were unarmed and handcuffed together at the time of the shooting. The case was being investigated by military and civil authorities.

COMMONS TOLD FULL PROTECTION NOT POSSIBLE

Federal Planning Well Advanced

Ottawa, May 12 (CP)—Canadians were told yesterday that it will not be possible to provide complete protection in the event of an atomic war.

Hoshie Minister Martin said in the Commons that it will be impossible, even using all Canada's manpower and resources, to provide "anything like complete protection for the civilian population through civil defence. Moreover, what can be done must fall far short of what people might like to see, he said.

Mr. Martin, who recently announced responsibility for civil defence, made his statements during the fourth day of a debate on the government's $1,879,000,000 defence program for 1951-52. Civil defence expenditures will account for $4,200,000 of the total.

Federal planning, said Mr. Martin, is well advanced. Some hundreds of key instructors have been trained. He stressed the importance of local planning and said arrangements have been worked out with the provinces and the United States for spheres of responsibility.

Members of Princess Pats Killed at Post While Still Firing on Onrushing Reds

The following account of Canadian action in Korea was delayed by censorship regulations which prevented the release of unit identifications during a critical period.

By BILL BOSS

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

With The Canadians In Korea, May 12. (CP)—Six-foot four-inch Pte. Kenneth Barwise of Vancouver joked:

"There sure were a lot of strangers in hell that morning."

There sure were.

Chinese and North Korean bodies counted on the ground April 25—the first full day of the battle of the Princess Patricias Canadian Light Infantry under Capt. Wally Mills of Winnipeg, halted the Chinese spring offensive in their small sector. Mills and his infantry fire down on their own positions—numbered more than 100. Fifty lay in the field of fire of a Vickers machine-gun manned by Ptes. Maurice Carr, of Niagara Falls, Ont., and Bruce MacDonald of Peterborough, Ont., who were killed in the battle, still firing at onrushing hordes.

Six were killed by Barwise, a hefty, punch-line soldier who wear size 14 boots, with a variety of weapons including two taken from killed Chinese.

Ten died under the sights of two Bren gunners sweeping the left-in a six trench near Carr and MacDonald—knowing their ITS. army carbines until they ran out of ammunition.

Eleven Killed

Eleven were killed by fire from a platoon under Lieut. Jim Wanlandy of Kerrisdale, Vancouver, and from a section led by Sgt

TWO MICE RAINBOW TROUT CAUGHT

A four-pound rainbow trout caught near Grafton seems to be a case of what fishing tribe begged that for.

The rainbow was one of a nine pound limit caught by Mrs. Ross Patterson and Bob Cooke of Stirling, and measured 23 1-2 inches in length.

While Abernethy caught the three fish, Patterson landed the second with a three-pounder that measured 21 inches in length.

Heavy Demand For Flowers, Plants on Market

With Mother's Day in the offing there was a big demand for plants and flowers on the Saturday morning market. All manner of potted plants were offered, but there was a definite demand for tulips, roses and hyacinths which ranged from 75 cents for the tulips and up to $2.50 for the roses.

Transplanting stocks were also offered in quantity with onions, cabbages, lettuce and tomatoes selling at 35 cents per flat. Pansies were offered at from 25 cents per flat to 75 cents for baskets.

Rhubarb sold at a dime per bunch or three for a quarter, while asparagus was two bunches for 25 cents. Strawberry canes sold at $7 a hundred and strawberry plants $1.50 per hundred.

Eggs sold at 60 cents per dozen for first with medium being quoted at 57 cents. Broilers and roasters of chickens sold at 60 cents per...pound, with the occasional vendor quoting 65 cents.

Potatoes were 40 cents per peck or $1.50 per bag. St. Lawrence trout sold at 75 cents per pound; mudcats at 35 cents or three pounds for $1 and whitefish at 50 cents per pound.

Young pigs were quoted at from $13 to $14 each.

Bold Wolves Maul Dog As Owner Looks On

After all, if an ordinary wolf wants lamb chops for lunch can have his hide valued at $75, plus government rental, why should he associate with the common run from Hastings.

In fact there is a pair of the wolfish brethren running loose in the second Quinte Point area who have been raising a spot of bob because of their yen for fresh meats on the hoof.

And they do not intend to stand for any "stalking-in" on their territory by gun-toting hunters nor wolf-hungry hounds.

To prove this one of the mild-aught marauders taught a hound dog belonging to farmer Harry Cowan, a lesson the other day. The dog had disturbed the wolves at an evening meal and the battle was on. The dog was badly mauled while Cowan and his son looked on afraid to shoot for fear of hitting the dog.

The wolves disappeared. Now an organized hunt is planned and the township has upped the bounty to $75 per pelt.

Nice work, if you can shoot and get it.

CHESTER WILLIAM EWING
Cannifton

The finding of the body of Chester William Ewing near Marmora, May 12, in the bush, committed a search which was continued since the youth was drowned at Cannifton on March 17th.

He was born in Hamilton 41 years ago, being the son of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Ewing, and had resided in Cannifton for eight months and came to Cannifton with his parents from Hamilton.

His parents are members of the United Church and Chester attended the Cannifton school where he was well regarded by his playmates.

Surviving are his parents, his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Snider of Wellington, and two brothers, John W., Robert J. and Bernard M., all at home.

SHELLEY JAMES ANDERSON

Resident of Prince Edward county and this district for many years, Shelley James Anderson, of this community, Shelley James Anderson, died at his home, 221 Albert Street, on Thursday after an illness which had extended for two years.

The late Mr. Anderson was born in Amelliasburg township, 78 years ago, a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Anderson and Sarah Giles. For some years he was engaged in the lumber township and on leaving the farm engaged in various enterprises. At one time he built a beautiful summer hotel at Massassa Point and operated it for some years. He moved to coming to Belleville nine years ago to live retired. He was a member of the home near the Point Anne Lane for many years.

Mr. Anderson was a member of Bridge St. United Church and surviving are his wife, the former Bessie Gross, two daughters, Mrs. Oliver (Eura) Owen of Belleville and Mrs. Sandy (Ila) Mitchell, Detroit, Mich., and one brother, Mr. Frank Anderson of Toronto. He was the last of his family.

Resting at the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, the funeral arrangements is made elsewhere in this edition.

MRS. MARY PORRITT
(Tweed)

Tweed—Funeral services for Mrs. Mary E. Porritt, who died Saturday in her 83rd year, were held Wednesday from her late residence to St. Andrew Church. Rev. F. F. Downing officiated, assisted by Rev. A. H. Hunter. Interment was in St. James' Cemetery.

The bearers were W. H. Elliott, F. M. Grady, W. Beatty, S. A. McCarey, S. R. Dafoe, and H. F. Varty.

LATE GEORGE A. B. GAY

The bearers were H. McLeod, A. Sharpe, F. Bedell, A. Embury, A. Hubbell and D. Trow.

French Election Slated for July

Paris, May 12—(AP)—A general election in France next month was assured when the French National Assembly voted early today to end its own life on July 4. The vote was 361 to 229.

June 17 is expected to be the date for the general election, the first since Oct. 13, 1946.

This year's balloting normally would not come in the fall. Premier Henri Queuille predicted, however, that if the voting were held soon the nation virtually would be without a responsible government until the end of the year.

The action of the assembly was on the last of a series of votes of confidence which Queuille had demanded in support of his coalition of middle-of-the-road parties. In the last three weeks, he has asked and received eight other such votes as part of his campaign to change the electoral law in order to end the communist strength and to push up the election date.

POLICE BLOTTER

For driving roughly 300 feet on the centre boulevard of the divided highway on East Dundas Street and plowing up a bit of sod as well as breaking off young trees, Maitland Sagriff, 18, of Napanee, has been charged with careless driving.

Early this morning police found the car with damaged undercarriage and had it towed to a garage. Sagriff was later apprehended and charged with careless driving.

Provincial police reported a collision between two vehicles at Glen Miller. Drivers involved in the mishap were Allan Gibson of Glen Miller and Delbert Hall of Frankford. No injuries were reported.

Marmora May be Scene of Iron Ore Industry Mines Minister Says

Marmora, May 12—On the basis of recent explorations, Ontario Mines Minister Dunnell Friday night predicted that an important iron ore industry may be centred in this area in the near future.

Mr. Gemmell, speaking to the local chamber of commerce, did not disclose the results of explorations by the Steelmethen Steel Co. Other explorations had been doing drilling. Their finds, he said, had been encouraging.

"It is my firm belief," he said, "that the day may soon come when the hopes of Premier Frost will be fulfilled, and that a large concentrator of low-grade iron ore will be erected to treat the ores of several mines in Hastings County."

Not New Discovery

Presence of iron ore deposits in this area has been known for many years. They were passed over, said Mr. Gemmell, because richer deposits were available elsewhere. Now, with some of those deposits worked out, new interest has been taken in the iron resources here.

Although one of Ontario's first gold mills was built here, Mr. Gemmell said, the district's mining future lies in the development of iron, base metal and industrial metals deposits. Industrial metals present in the area include talc, graphite, mica, feldspar, corundum, apatite, fluorspar, marble and soapstone syenite.

A number of interesting new developments already are in the making in Eastern Ontario, he said. One company is working a large body of vermiculite, a mica-like material important for its insulating properties. Previously all Canadian requirements came from South Africa and the United States.

Big Silica Deposits

Two companies, the mines minister said, have deposits of silica sand running into millions of tons and intend to produce a grade suitable for glass-making. Most glass industries have imported their silica sand from the United States.

Nephaline syenite, used in the manufacture of glass and ceramic products, and graphite, for storage batteries and lubricants, are being investigated for production possibilities.

Eastern Ontario, Mr. Gemmell said, is the province's best potential prospect for deposits of the more common industrial minerals such as feldspar mica, fluorspar and talc.

The Department of Mines, he said, has played a part in the development of the mineral resources in this section of the province. It has undertaken a program of detailed geological mapping.

Mines recently, with co-operation from federal authorities, an aero-magnetic survey was undertaken. It was related to exploration for iron ore. This survey, which is used to locate iron ore, is air the presence of the magnetite iron ores beneath the surface, has been continued by private capital.

Race Sheet Had Annual Profit Of $30,000 Crime Probe Told

Toronto, May 12—(CP)—The financial set-up of the Daily Turf and Sporting News, described as a better's guide sheet, will be investigated by Ontario's legislative crime probers.

The seven-man crime committee decided yesterday, before adjourning to May 21, to ask a Toronto accounting firm to explain the finances of the paper. Earlier, the committee heard that the sheet had an average net profit of about $30,000 annually.

The information came from Inspector W. G. Tomlinson, head of the anti-gambling squad of the Ontario Provincial Police. Documents seized at the newspaper firm's office by police were read into the record by the inspector. Included was a report by Tomlinson pondence reported to show the qualifications of an organization which distributes racing information from Chicago. Inspector Tomlinson said that Sher and Sher of Toronto, described earlier as the boss of the ring from which hands out racing information, made a yearly net profit of about $15,000 from the Sporting News.

The inspector said that Roher's contract with the Illinois Sport News Company gave Sher authority for payment of half the net profits in lieu of a salary. Sher, operating statements of the Toronto paper showed the company made a net profit in 1950 of $18,954. After turning over an equal amount to the Chicago firm.

Inspector Tomlinson read considerable data dealing with the company's application for permit to export currency to the United States.

Senator Davies Stresses Value Of Advertising

Welshpool, Wales, May 12—(Reuters)—A Welsh-born Canadian newspaper publisher, Senator W. Rupert Davies, stressed the value of newspaper advertising when he spoke today at publicity in a speech here Friday.

Senator Davies, who is this year's High Sheriff of Montgomeryshire, was guest speaker at a trade fair here. He was born at Welshpool and has a house in Montgomeryshire where he usually spends some time each year.

"I am a firm believer in the value of newspaper advertising because I know the results it brings," he said. "Advertising is the invitation to people to come in and buy and it is also a guide to them as to how to spend their money wisely.

"No one knows better than I do the restrictions under which the newspapers of Britain and Canada today. These restrictions are particularly hard on weekly newspapers.

"I quite realize that because of these restrictions space in these newspapers is limited. I realize too that regular customers, particularly those that are what we call national advertisers, have to be taken care of."

Vancouver Police Force Given Clean Bill Moral Health

Vancouver, May 12 —(CP)— With a clean bill of moral health from the police commission, Police Chief Walter Mulligan and his force today stepped up their campaign to get the "higher-up" into the bookmaking racket.

At the same time, the Sun said in a front-page story that big-time bookmakers in the United States plan to link Vancouver into a new system of race news communication to "foil the dreaded Kefauver committee."

"Basis of the new system is the flashing of news from U.S. tracks to points in Canada, where it would be carried legally over telegraph lines and then fed back into the U.S. by wire or telephone," the Sun said.

"The U.S. bookmakers are planning the communication system because they fear passage of U.S. law prohibiting interstate transmission or racing information, Kefauver committee's "million-dollar industry."

Last night, the Vancouver Police Commission gave Chief Mulligan and his force a unanimous vote of confidence.

The chief asked for the vote after dislosure that Vancouver has a "professional" bookmaking racket, operators "making book" on Canada and U.S. tracks.

Asks Higher-Up

Stewart McMorran, assistant city prosecutor, was asked to appear before the commission after he reported earlier to city council that bribes of police officials was "a possibility" when "such large sums of money were involved in bookmaking."

Mr. McMorran, who is seeking evidence in prosecutions of wider power in connection with Police Chief Mulligan's commission yesterday that he had not intended to ask any doubt on the honesty of any member of the force.

He had simply told aldermen "just what would evolve from large-scale bookmaking."

Chief Mulligan said last week a drive had been started to nab the top men in the bookmaking racket here.

This week, a special three-man civic committee was named to hear complaints against bookies.

Licences of premises figuring in bookmaking offences will be cancelled after the first conviction. Previously, the law called for the 18th annual convention of the Charles Fleetwood Sisa chapter of the telephone pioneers of America.

2,000 DELEGATES

Montreal, May 12 — (CP) More than 2,000 delegates and guests from all parts of Ontario and Quebec will meet here May 25 and 26 for 18th annual convention of the Charles Fleetwood Sisa chapter of the telephone pioneers of America.

USE SPECIAL PATROLS

Toronto, May 12 — (CP) Special patrols have to be sent out every time an organization puts on a parade, Chief Constable Chisholm said yesterday.

Otherwise, he said, regular junkets, such as the one he planned to it a $7,500 diamond, a $17,500 emerald - cut diamond and a wedding band set with 25 diamonds, worth $400. Total loss, she said: $25,400.

Britain, U.S. Come to Terms On Japs, Formosa

Washington, May 12 — (AP)— The United States and British appear to have ironed out for the time being most of their differences over communistic China, the Japanese peace treaty and Formosa.

Responsible officials here said yesterday's statement by foreign secretary Herbert Morrison helped bring the two western powers closer together on these thorny issues than they have been since the Korean fighting started.

Combined with other recent developments, the policy expressed by Morrison and other government spokesmen were accepted by American diplomats as meaning:

1. Britain is ready to go along with American idea of tightening economic pressure against the Chinese communists and their Soviet-bloc countries. Britain last Thursday announced an embargo on further shipments of rubber to China this year. Oil shipments have been banned since July. Agreement is expected on a U.N. embargo on sales of arms.

2. Britain last week-ended to agreement on Japanese treaty terms have now been worked out. Britain and British officials said minor differences remain over a provisional or full conference and relations to limit Japanese shipbuilding. Communist China will not be consulted in the final negotiations as Britain proposed last month.

3. Britain is willing now to postpone indefinitely the question of Formosa's status, should a communist China. Morrison told the House of Commons that there is no decision on Korean conflict must end, and the Formosan people themselves and the U.N. be consulted.

Two Vital Words Take Spotlight In Wreck Trial

Prince George, B.C., May 12—(CP)—Evidence including inclusion of two vital words in a train order yesterday took the spotlight in the manslaughter trial of Alfred John Atherton.

The 39-year-old Canadian National Railways telegrapher was charged following the Canoe River, B.C., wreck last Nov. 21 in which 21 person perished when two trains collided.

A. E. Tisdale, Kamloops, B.C. despatcher, who sent the original train order to Atherton, told how he had been paying closer attention when Atherton repeated the order to him as he would have noticed omission of words "at Cedarside."

Defence counsel John Diefenbaker said dispatchers must write down each train order as they receive it, read it back to the operators and must underline each word of it as operators read it back to them.

The Crown claims Atherton, in passing the order to the conductor of the westbound troop train, failed to include the words that would have sent the train onto a siding at Cedarside to await passing of the eastbound passenger train.

IN MEMORIAM

MARSH — In memory of a loving father, Frederick George Marsh, who passed away May 13th, 1950.

Death leaves a heartache nothing can heal,
Sadly missed by son W. J. Marsh, dear son and grandaughter Mary Dawkins.

MARSH — In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather, Frederick George Marsh, who passed away May 13th, 1950.

Home was sweet, God knows we tried,
We miss you more than words can say,
Your memory is our treasure,
Your love we'll always hold dear.
—Cannift, Lillian and John. M12

MARSH — In memory of our father, Frederick George Marsh, who passed away May 13th, 1950.

One by one they go before us,
They are fading like the dew,
But we know they're waiting o'er us
They the good, the fair, the true.

Stories of Famous Hymns

by HORACE B. POWELL

How Gentle God's Commands

How gentle God's commands!
How kind His precepts are!
Come, cast your burden on the Lord,
And trust His constant care.

Beneath His watchful eye
His saints securely dwell:
That hand that bears all nature up
Shall guard His children well.

Why should this anxious load
Press down your weary mind?
Haste to your heavenly Father's throne,
And sweet refreshment find.

His goodness stands approved,
Unchanged from day to day:
I'll drop my burden at His feet,
And bear a song away.

Philip Doddridge, beloved eighteenth century English clergyman and poet, was not content merely to preach to his parishioners on Sunday mornings. He used to follow his sermons with congregational singing, using hymns which he wrote each week along with his spiritual messages and which were inspired by the same texts as his addresses.

That is how, one weekend, he happened to write the hymn-poem reproduced above. It was based on the Bible text in I Peter, 5:7 — "Casting all your cares upon Him; for He careth for you."

The scriptural verse is paraphrased in the first stanza of the hymn:

"How gentle God's commands!
How kind His precepts are!
Come, cast your burdens on the Lord,
And trust His constant care."

In its closing lines, the pastor-poet declared his own trust in God's providence as he sang:

"His goodness stands approved,
Unchanged from day to day:
I'll drop my burden at His feet,

Doddridge, one of the most prominent leaders of his day in the Independent Church in England, was born June 26, 1702 and was the youngest of 20 children. He began his ministerial career when he was only 19 and, eight years later, he was not only pastor of an important church in Northampton, but also the rector of a school for preachers with more than 200 young students on its rolls.

He died when he was but 49 years old during a visit in Portugal. His early death was a shock to his friends, but Doddridge himself must have met the heavenly call with happy calm for, years before, he had expressed a longing for eternity in a note to his wife. He wrote on this occasion:

"It is pleasant to read; pleasant to compose; pleasant to converse with friends at home; pleasant to visit those at a distance; the poor, the sick, pleasant to go out and preach the Gospel to poor souls that are hungry for it; and, were dying without it; pleasant on week-days to think how near another Sabbath is; but O, how much more pleasant to think how near eternity is and how short the journey through this wilderness, and that it is but a step from earth to Heaven!"

Several years after his death, his 370 hymns were published and circulated for the first time. One of the best known and best loved is the list was his song:

"O happy day, that fixed my choice
On Thee, my Saviour and my God!
Well may this glowing heart rejoice,
And tell its raptures all abroad.
Happy day, happy day,
When Jesus washed my sins away!

He taught me how to watch and pray,
And live rejoicing every day;
Happy day, happy day,
When Jesus washed my sins away.

Europe as I See It

By Raymond R. Canon

(Article 19)
ITALY

St. Gallen, Switzerland — (Special to the Ontario Intelligencer — When I was quite young, I spent part of my summer vacation in Toronto. Almost every day a man with dark hair and a bushy moustache would pass the house. He pushed a cart filled with bananas and as he went along he would sing quite loudly; something that I could not understand. I was told that he was an Italian. At that time I did not know whether that was good or bad. I learned then that Italy was a sunny land in Europe filled with people who sang all the time, and ate spaghetti.

Many of them came to America where they lived by selling fruit. After that anybody who sold fruit was an Italian. It did not matter whether his name was Jones or Johnson. Later I learned more about what Italy actually was, but this early impression always remained with me. I have finally arrived at the source of all those fruit vendors, but I cannot say that it is sunny, since it has rained nearly all the time. However the people sing quite a bit, and they do sell a lot of fruit!

After having lived in the German part of Switzerland, it is quite a change to mix with these people. Whereas the Swiss are rather serious-minded and practical, the Italians always go about with a gayness, and have almost a total disregard for anything as long as they are happy. They do not take time in buying, selling, eating, and even crossing the street. They stand on the corners, laugh and talk, or stop in one of the many cafes for a drink, all of which is not too different in itself from the other countries, only the Italians do it more.

They are very proud of their majestic churches, palaces, homes of famous poets, and art galleries. These they keep polished and ready for show, since they attract a great number of tourists and visitors each year. In this respect they are like the Swiss who are famous for keeping things tidy. Many times I have seen Swiss housewife who came to Italy to see the famous art galleries, and the first one she entered she looked around a while, then turned and said to a near-by attendant, "I should like to buy something." "Certainly," replied the attendant, "Which picture do you prefer you?" "It doesn't concern pictures," said the Swiss, "What I want to know is how did you polish this floor so well?"

Lots of Spaghetti

I think we always associate spaghetti with Italy, and justly so, for they consume immense quantities of it. They have put their imagination to work in creating new dishes based on spaghetti, and it is surprising how many different varieties one finds. It is eaten in all shapes and sizes, mixed with sauce or meat. Often it replaces the soup course. There is also an art to eating spaghetti that I should like to acquire. All they seem to do is to put their fork in, twist it two or three times, and lift a generous amount to their mouth. That looked easy, but so far I get anything but generous helpings. Needless to say, an Italian just has to watch a person eat to tell whether he is foreign or not.

If you hate to get into a cold bed at night and lie there shivering for a long while, I have found the solution to your problem. It is not a hot-water bottle. That is too slow, and anyway it is only warms part of the bed at a time. What I do is "build a fire" and it really does the job. It consists of a rack about a foot square and a yard long. In that rack I built a platform, on which is put a small grill filled with hot coals and ashes.

The whole apparatus is put in the bed; the rack being placed over it, and it is left there for some time. The bed cannot catch fire, since the covers are held up by the rack and the coals cannot fall out. When I first discovered it was rather skeptical of the whole thing. However, one evening when I came back, I found the thing in my bed. My scepticism vanished when I got into bed, for the covers were warm from head to foot, and it was only a matter of minutes until I was asleep.

It is not difficult to notice that the Italians are not as gifted in business matters as the Swiss. In Switzerland, a person, after seeing something, feels that he has got his money's worth, and probably less. When you turn to go, the clerk usually rushes to open the door for you, at the same time saying, "Adieu, Auf Wiedersehen, Besten Dank!" Here they treat you with indifference, do not go to too much trouble, and then you open your own door.

Short-Changing

In connection with this, there is one practice prevalent here that is rather annoying. They have the curious habit of short-changing foreigners. They rely on a lack of knowledge of the language and of the money on the part of the foreigner to help them along. Such things as buying newspapers, books, or cards are examples. They probably feel that the most tourists in Italy must be well off and will not mind paying a bit more. The latest incident was at the post-office where the clerk shortchanged me 50 lire when I bought a 20 lire stamp.

I pointed this out to him, and got my 50 lire. When this practice occurs, even among civil servants, I feel it is going a bit too far. My best advice to foreigners intending to travel here would be to learn some Italian, memorize the numerals, and to be able to recognize the money at sight. In this way you will be able to enjoy the many points of interest, without having to worry about paying extra for it.

Miss McKenzie Addresses W. M. S.

Madoc—W.M.S. members and many visitors were privileged to hear Miss Vida McKenzie, Dominion Travelling Secretary of the Woman's Missionary Society of the United Church of Canada, speaking held in Trinity United Church parlors, on Wednesday afternoon. The sectional president, Mrs. N. Broad, was in charge. The opening exercises included the Bible reading by Mrs. Archie Adams, and an appropriate solo by the president. Following the close of the meeting the Women's Club in Trinity United, served afternoon tea.

Miss McKenzie's topic was "Adventure in Faith" and she gave a worthwhile message on work of the societies throughout the Dominion.

Dales 35 Acres Of Greenhouses

(Brantford Expositor-Herald)

The name "Dale of Brampton" is familiar to most people in Ontario as synonymous with flowers, especially roses, but not many people know that the Dale Estate, Ltd., comprises the largest greenhouse, or units of greenhouses in the world. That fact was emphasized a few days ago when 25 members of the Cleveland Westside Growers' Hothouse Co-operative Association visited the Dale establishment, to see what they could learn from this remarkable organization.

According to a report in The Cleveland Plain Dealer, there are 1,500,000 square feet of greenhouses, not all in one vast structure, but in 133 units spread over 35 acres. If they were placed end to end they would extend nine miles. But if a visitor wanted to traverse all the aisles to see the entire display he would have to tramp 32 miles. To keep the greenhouses at the proper temperature in Winter, there are 90 miles of steam pipes. An additional five miles of water pipes and two and a half miles of fertilized pipes have been laid to service the growing beds. Heat is generated by a 7,000-horsepower oil-fired boiler.

Open some of the doors, and you will be greeted with the sounds of 1,000,000 flowers. Dale produces 12,000,000 blooms per annum, 7,000,000 of which are roses. It takes 400 people to operate the plant. 100 of whom are research workers seeking a new or better flowers for Dale produces nothing but the best.

The unique Canadian business was established by Harry Dale 80 years ago. His greenhouse was a mere 40 feet.

TUITION FEES RAISED

Kitchener, May 11 — (CP) — Student tuition fees at Waterloo College will be increased by approximately 12 per cent in all courses.

Dr. H. T. Lohmann, college president, said today the rising cost in providing a higher education for young men and women in this and surrounding communities has compelled the board of governors to boost fees.

MOTHER'S DAY

It may seem strange that 1,950 years and a few months after Christ died that the Christian world should have to set aside one day each year honoring mothers. But it seems a fact. For 364 days each year, mothers are just the people who make the beds, prepare the meals, wash the suits and pants, clean the house and do a host of other things. They have recognized as queens only one day of the year, and that is bad.

On that one day, they are appreciated only because many men are pressured into it. They see advertisements by the dozens for Mother's Day, and commonly of them still regard Down Deep, under all the bluff, they appreciate that their mothers have done for them, but they are just a little embarrassed to say so.

One could go on at great lengths about mothers. But what can be said that will increase the feeling any man or woman can feel towards a mother? Nothing.

LOW PAY FOR POLICE FORCES

Members of the Ontario legislature committee on crime were given information this week that most people have been aware of for some time. That is that Ontario municipal police salaries are not considered high. They are, in fact, much lower than salaries paid by many municipalities, and the inevitable result is that men leave the force for greener pastures within after they have received little initial training with it.

The wide spread between the salaries paid by the provincial force and those paid by one of Ontario's leading municipalities was pointed out this week. The city of Windsor, in hiring twenty-five new constables for its force, offered a yearly salary of $3,000. This contrasts sharply with the $2,140, plus cost-of-living bonus, that the provincial force offers rookies. Commissioner William Stringer admitted to the committee that better wages would keep better men on his force."

Resignations by men on the provincial force were partly halted a few months ago by salary increases, but partly halted a few months ago by salary increases, but by the time the new paydegrees had started to come, many good men had already left. It was felt at that time, however, that the movement had been arrested to a large degree.

The offer in Windsor may change things again, however, and it is up to the province to try to stop any new movements. The solution, of course, is to raise the salaries of the men on the force, and bring them into a pay bracket that will be on a level with municipal protection agencies.

In many communities, the provincial police provide the only protection. In others, they are valuable assets to municipal forces. Regardless of their status in the different areas of the province, they should be paid in proportion to their fine efforts.

A CHANGE AND PERHAPS A REST

Old army diehards will have ample cause for snorting if they read how men in Britain's reserve forces are being treated. The oldtimers, weaned on bully beef and rock biscuits, accustomed to sleeping with their feet in six inches of water and their heads on a boulder, will cry at the soft treatment now in vogue.

The reservists are called up for fifteen days of refresher training in Britain are supplied with spring beds, mattresses, sheets, pillowslips and wool blankets. Indeed, a far cry from a campaign hat and a poncho-type doodad, a far cry from a chamnal rain to virtual parts. Furthermore, there is no guard duty, and peeling potatoes is a thing of the past. Crew haircuts are out, and the reservists will be allowed to grow their hair the rest of the service.

No longer is the recruit shoved into a line for a meal, a medical or a uniform. Instead, he is formally welcomed by his commanding officer, offered a spot of tea, and taken on a sightseeing tour. The tour over, he is brought back to his billet, reassured that his officers wish to make him happy in the service, and the fifteen-day course is launched.

There will undoubtedly be Bronx cheers and derogatory remarks from the sidelines as veteran members of the forces look on. They will feel that it is almost impossible to turn out men in the best British fighting tradition by coddling them, and it is hardly likely that they will change their cheerful feelings.

But they might just as well talk to the wind and realize that things have been altered considerably since they first laced on army boots. In brief, the old order changeth.

MISSED

Time was, into the house he'd stride
In muddy shoes at set of sun;
Hat hat and sweater toss aside
And say: "Once more the weeding's done."
I grumbled but he didn't see
The extra work he made for me

The rugs with garden soil he'd track,
My indolence oft he used to try.
The prettiest towel on the rack
He'd seize upon his hands to dry.

What bothered me were things unseen,
And hanging up his coat and hat.

The garden lacks the care it needed,
His feet will track the rugs
no more;
The chair on which his things
he threw
Stands empty now beside the door.
And I sit wishing, all in vain,
Those same tasks were mine again.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

25 YEARS AGO

May 12th., 1931.

The Rev. Robert Hall, ministor of John Street Methodist Church, will leave on Monday for Edmonton, Alberta, where he will spend a month's vacation.

The sum of $214.00 was obtained by the Y.O.N. on a recent tag day.

Mrs. Beckie Morden, the genial physical director at the local Y.M.C.A., spent two days this week in Toronto where she attended the annual convention of the Physical Directors' Association.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack White of Lindsay, formerly of this city, are here to spend the weekend with friends.

Mr. C. M. Reid addressed the members of the Y's Men's Club at their last meeting. He gave an interesting talk on Finland.

Mr. John Elliott was the speaker at the regular luncheon meeting of the Rotary Club this week and gave an interesting and informative address on his recent trip from Halifax to South America.

30 YEARS AGO

Messrs. W. Carnew and E. J. Butler, barristers, are attending court in Bancroft today.

Mr. R. J. Deroche, who has been secretary of the local Y.M.C.A. for the past four years, has resigned and will enter the life insurance business.

Boat races will be held here on May 24th., and many entries are expected.

Mr. Carl Whytock of Madoc has been appointed a fire ranger and has left for Oba, New Ontario.

Mr. R. A. Backus will leave shortly to spend two months in Scotland and other points in Western Canada.

40 YEARS AGO

May 13th., 1911.

Today is the 36th anniversary of the Battle of Batoche in which "A" Company of the Midlanders, which company was composed entirely of members of our own regiment, led by Adjutant Panton, Lieut. Halliwell and Lieut. Kenny, cleared the rifle pits at Batoche and virtually ended the rebellion. Backed by "C" Company the Grenadiers of Toronto and the 90th of Winnipeg, the Belleville boys faced a galling fire and with rifle and bayonet, sword and revolver, they cleared the whole valley of the rebels, suffering severely in the advance and the charge. Lieut. Charles S. Clapp, Sergeant-Major Arch. Smith, Andrew and Corporal L. Soles today have many reminiscences of the part the stirring scenes in which our Bay of Quinte boys bore themselves bravely and for which they won the Queen's Medal, worthily won.

50 YEARS AGO

Mr. W. McKenna spent yesterday in town.

The Rev. T. J. Thompson, minister of Grace Street Presbyterian Church, will leave tomorrow for the West and will be absent one month.

Mr. J. E. McCargarum, Fisheries Inspector, went to Madoc today on business in connection with his office.

Mr. D. H. Waters, druggist, is spending a few days in Buffalo, New York.

Mr. Fred Rous left today for Toronto where he has accepted a position.

Mr. T. E. Ketchesen of the Gazette office of Ladder and Ketchesen, is in Montreal on business.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

By a curious coincidence, the home I live in is built on a ravine that, forty years ago, was far out in the country, beyond the northern limits of the city, with which I was very familiar as a boy searching for birds and wild flowers.

A brook ran down this ravine; and it was a veritable jungle, at this season of year, for the migrating birds, with the result that everywhere the creek, building camp fires for lunch, and rejoicing in the wilderness.

But the city grew and engulfed the fields and ravines. The ravine was filled in, and the creek that ran down it was diverted into the drains. Within five years ago this house was built, and now the city reaches miles beyond.

Yet, to this day, though there remains no vestige of the old ravine, all being flat expanses of concrete and brick alive with the traffic and movement of humanity, the migrating birds come in full force, as they did forty years ago, following the ancient route across the miles of city, and through my garden as if the ravine and the brook were still here.

Not the odd bird, but dozens and dozens, all the spring migrants here as a boy, and in about the same numbers. Imagine a wood thrush plunging up under your feet in a backyard in the heart of a city! Or a golden-winged warbler and the fox sparrows, then the white throats. A whip-poor-will squats on the flat scantling of the grapevine. The warblers come in bobbing flocks, perhaps six or seven species all in one morning.

These birds follow some mysterious paths unknown to human intelligence. Or, come to think of it, do they perhaps explore my house and my city expect my hospitality, and the brook and ravine to return?

Mmm-hummm!

BE PREPARED

With warm weather here again, the bodybuilder's life becomes strenuous. Window cutting grass is never so hard as shovelling snow, even if we forget do it more frequently. Ice-scrapers, heavy overcoats and big fuel bills are the toil next winter.

We may, however, relax too much. For that we're not using the snow-shovel, the broken handle do were about to fix may still be broken when the first flurries fall next winter. That crazy window-pain no longer bothers us now that the weather is warm; let's forget it. When we don't feel an immediate need, it's a great temptation to let things go for a while.

Many people are like this all the year around with their religion. They listen to the call only to church regularly again next month. They know that they haven't been leading Christian lives, and they mean to make some changes very soon. But, inevitably, there is plenty of time.

But is there? We can be fairly sure of one thing, however, that we won't need the snow-shovel for a few months. But we very safely allow our religion to get into disrepair. Remember God's words to Jonah when he was settling down for a long, easy future: "Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee."

OUR TOWN

By JACK SCOTT

INNOCENTS ABROAD

The man from Cook's tells me that more Canadians will be travelling abroad this summer in pursuit of pleasure, than at any time since the dear, dead days before the war.

Almost all of these happy voyagers will be visiting the United States, many for the first time and it has occurred to me, in a middling flash, that I might be able to provide some advice for such babes in the woods.

What I'd be at most pleased to smile about my qualifications, I have travel myself, is sufficiently humble to be safely at home, and on the road I am almost constantly in a complete tangle-foot of difficulties with baggage, passports, hotel reservations and the like, but I can claim to know as much as there is to know about being on travel.

Here, then, is my advice to you:

* * *

First Class or Cabin Class on the Boat—Travel cabin class. First class consists almost entirely of fossils over the age of 100 years, and the glittering pong manufacturers whose one aim in life is to dine at the captain's table. The darkness descends every first class passenger under the age of 100 years into the cabin class precincts where all the fun takes place. There is no fun in first class, only cabin class. It was in cabin class (on the Queen Elizabeth) that Joe United produced sent a bouquet of tulips to the most beautiful girl aboard, and Joe's self-help immediately from between two enormous champagne bottles, took the flowers, added a bulb in her hands and ate it.

* * *

How to Tip—The oldest and best rule is still the ten per cent rule. Ten per cent to the steward, ten per cent to the deck steward, ten per cent to the cabin steward, ten per cent to the bartender, ten per cent to the waiter, ten per cent to the bellhop, ten per cent to the chief steward, ten per cent to the captain, ten per cent to the purser, ten per cent to the chief engineer, ten per cent to the chief cook, ten per cent to the chief bottle washer, ten per cent to the chief deck hand, ten per cent to the chief cabin boy, ten per cent to the chief bellhop, ten per cent to the chief waiter, ten per cent to the chief steward

Sandstorm Enlivens Trip to Algerian Desert

By Lavonia Stockelbach

Editor's Note: The author is making a tour of France, Italy, Algiers and later Britain and Ireland. She has kindly consented to write of her impressions of which the article appearing today in the fourth. Many readers will recall Mrs. Stockelbach's special series, "Hastings to Erin," which appeared in the Ontario Intelligencer last spring.

Biskra, Algeria — (Special to the Ontario Intelligencer) — I had always wanted to see an oasis in the desert and finally found myself, there in the Algerian Sahara at Biskra in the last week of April. My idea of an oasis was a little spring of water with a few palm trees around and a well with his camel near by. But I had not then known of the enterprise of the French, who in the 1830's, had been forced to put an end to pirate attacks on Mediterranean ports and had succeeded in conquering the North African lands from which for centuries they had been an unceasing stream of invaders.

In a little more than a hundred years, and notwithstanding the years of European wars, France has planted; has sunk artesian wells where the Arabs had hollowed but a trickle of water; has irrigated deserts and now the north the productive land that it was away back in the time of the Romans. Outside the amazing to see miles of fields of grains, of orchards, of vines. It was interesting to learn a little of their methods in restoring the fertility of soil.

Large Fertile Area

And it was astonishing to find that an oasis could be several miles in length with thousands of date palms and other trees along the narrow streams that had sunk deep in the desert sand and mind or man to be brought to the surface and so gradually forced by nature to trickle unceasingly underground.

Near Touggourt in 1856, a French engineer, by name of Jus, built the first artesian well, which they called "The Fountain of Peace," for it was only two years after that battle that had been fought for possession of this section of the country. Since the artesian wells are dotted all over the land, but around this town alone are 364 date palms, and in the shadow of which are cultivated cereals and vegetables. It was to Touggourt I meant to go, to see this cultivation, to see more of the rich flowers of the desert and the not so very wild birds, and to amuse myself by comparing the labors down here with those away up in northern Denmark.

On my way down, and especially around Constantine, it was a joy to see so many storks nesting for those I had previously seen only in Holland, several pairs to nests on one house and to my special delight to see them nesting in the trees, stalk and described in the 104th Psalm, only here they were fir trees but not of the poplar family.

Choice of Transportation

So here I was in the oasis of Biskra resting, like the Romans, 135 miles. There is no passable road for a car, but there is a choice of a train or auto rail bus which takes about four hours, a camel or a mule.

A good camel ambles along at about five miles an hour and can go from to twenty-five miles a day. A mule's endurance is remarkable, eight ten hours a day carrying a weight of 200 —much more sometimes—than 200 pounds, while a camel only carries about twice as much.

So the train ticket to Touggourt was bought and as it was first class I hoped it would not be a crowded compartment! I should find for myself and one other for the interpreter was to be left with the baggage in Biskra to await my return.

Fails to Make Journey

But to Touggourt I did not go. Neither did the train, nor a camel, nor a mule, nor any living creature. In the morning we had driven a few miles over what is optimistically called by the French a passable road, with desert on each side. We went as far as a scorned hangar with details of the steering propeller. I have ever seen on a blade of esparto grass. He needed at least a little more inches of room for the colorful and complicated debris. Back while under neath, his little black paws crept up the grass holding on to it expertly with hooks and to two fingers. A vivid creature!

The mule was frightening and while I was holding up the caterpillar to watch his mode of walking, I felt a touch on my shoulder on me faster than I had yet seen on a camel, a fine long-legged, well nurtured camel with a very fine, well-coutumed Arab on his back. He had apparently gone a few paces out of his way to see what I was doing, for he looked down on me and I, a little startled, looked up at him. Neither of us had a word to say and he kept on his way at full camel-speed.

Meets With Sandstorm

I was a little distance from the road and had wondered why the chauffeur had come to search for flowers. He had entered into the silly spirit of the occasion with courtesy and had also begun to be interested in bird-life, and once to my great surprise, when the car around very close to the edge of a cliff a fine large hoy in some rock pigeons through my binoculars as they played games with the wind, as only pigeons and ledges. But here there were only small colored larks, not interest only to me and to themselves.

When I reached the car he asked Madame if she would like to return to the hotel. She would. For somehow the polite request sounded like a command. The night before, I had paced up and down the long balcony outside my hotel room, enjoying the full moon, though it did seem as if the Dipper was in the wrong place. However, the North Star was reassuring. But there was in the air a feeling of what it means to be in a thunderstorm. Although it was cool, it was oppressive. And now the storm was on its way — but it was a sand storm.

We made the few miles in as few minutes and I found my room, dark, cool and barricaded, but not against anything as I expected at this fine desert sand. Outside the hotel I looked exactly as if it were a howling Canadian snow blizzard. The heavy drapes swayed at the door-window and soon everything was covered with desert dust for a sandstorm has no respect for an oasis. The only sensible thing to do was to bow down with a damp towel over the head.

Solicitous Chauffeur

About three the chauffeur sent up to inquire after my head and general breathing apparatus, as far as I could make out, and in careful French of the Arab. I politely assured after the night. It was in shelter as were the camels and other creatures.

After the storm, which was really delicious and courageous-giving and without any pack of sand, there was another interview with the chauffeur. Would Madame prefer to go next morning? Certainly not in that storm, replied the lady. Touggourt was definitely off. I supposed there would be sand in Biskra. That took a little regarding as neither of us knew the word for "dining." That, we certainly learned something about a snowstorm in Canada, but he assured me there would be nothing of the kind, so it was agreed if the storm ceased, that lessened by morning I would venture myself if he would venture his car, and would be ready for sight. There was no knowing how long the storm would last.

Storm Night

It was a wicked night. The iron chains of the balcony played tag with each other and the balcony railing until it sounded like the rattling of a machine-gun, the feeling of being half smothered and the anxiety for the next day did not make for peace.

The road map looked discouraging. A thin feeling ending in dot, then a blank space with no line at all, and another dot picked up another thin line. In between I knew there were three or four dried river beds to be forded. How many feet rivers must have been here many years ago! Now there were just the skeleton remains. But next morning at eight, after strong coffee and sour rolls, the storm had wind had lessened but the wind-ing of the car would be closed for there was no need of traffic-signalling as the road, so called, was of ours.

In about an hour we came to a friend of my father where one could get coffee. The small house, standing solitary in the desert, had the usual courtyard in it, opening into a bare court. The living room in which we were served had only the table in the centre and a cupboard with cups and saucers in the corner. A bevied room along the side wall for two bedrooms, and the door came from the French government with the names of the uncle and the father, the latter of whom had died in the service of France. And remarkably like the one in our house, was a photograph of the father, for it is against the religion of Islam to make any kind of picture or statue of a human being, but there it was. I asked permission and wrote down their names and regiments. By then the coffee was ready.

Arabs Make Good Coffee

Why can these Arabs produce this perfect drink when the stuff you get in the French hotels is such a miserable concoction? After two little cups of hot coffee, thick with sugar, there was plenty of time for a chat, and time to look at the photos I always carry with me, one of which is of my house surrounded with snow. I had forgotten the big storm three years ago.

The host was one of the biggest men, not fat, but tall and just big all over. He got up to look at the photograph of a man his complete opposite, was deeply interested in my son, a good looking handsome lad (so I asked in the interpreter) and the father, in the general boy in, and I am sure very polite things were murmured. Yes, I did show the photographs were. The boy was pleased and the photographs were explained to him.

Feeling much comforted we continued our way and after about four hours (it seemed much more) arrived at Bou Saada, friendly place of happiness," where a very sick and shaken chauffeur first aid was given him. While others placed my baggage a white turbanned Arab showed me to the hotel, turned on the scalding hot water, then the cold, tying the temperature by means of his long, slender, brown and very clean finger, placed one towel on the bed, dropped another over a chair, touched his forehead and his shoulder with his left hand, bowed and with-drew.

After using up a quarter of an hour and a large amount of Paris soap, I was almost clean and went straight to bed feeling very ill, indeed, and again with that unmistakable feeling of a brewing thunderstorm. And that is just what happened. For forty-eight hours after the sandstorm and four hours of travelling there was the most disturbed, thunder-storm. Never were thunder, lightning and rain so appreciated. The church rubric ought to have something special in praise of thunderstorms, and I would need no muezzin call from a minaret to remind me of it.

PLANTING AND CARE OF EVERGREENS

The above illustration shows the most approved and satisfactory method of planting evergreens. As these grow slowly in the nursery, evergreens, on this account are more expensive than deciduous shrubs. It is, therefore, advisable to give the utmost of care to assure the best results.

In hot summer weather evergreens should be given an abundance of water and carefully guarded against red spider attack. This is a very small insect scarcely visible. It allowed to become numerous, it spins webs of dusted sulphur. The little insects, with their habit of sucking sap from the foliage, cause them to lose their characteristic color and assume a brown appearance. Red spider can be readily controlled by one of the following methods:

1. Spray the foliage with water under pressure from garden hose or power sprayer taking particular pains to secure a strong spray applied from underneath the foliage.

2. Spray with a fine spray consisting of half a pound of cheap grads ground bone glue in five gallons of water. Dissolve the glue in hot water before adding cold water.

3. Dust with sulphur liberally on a warm day, using a super fine commercial brand of dusting sulphur.

Avoid spraying an evergreen in the middle of the day, as water alone will frequently cause a result in injury if the sun's rays are hot. Repeat any of the above treatments six days after the first application to kill young spiders escaping in egg stage and remember that application should be made as often as necessary because of continual reinfestation.

of Hamilton, which also fought the Chinese to a standstill that night.

Barwise said: "They kept on coming all night in waves. They must have been crazy, or glory-happy."

Shortly after midnight the Chinese over-ran the Vickers post manned by Carr and Macdonald.

By then Levy, Holligan and Lieut. John Pearson of Winnipeg, Mills' other platoon commander, had reported their situation "not good" and Mills told the men to get down in their slit trenches while he brought down artillery fire. Three regiments of artillery concentrated their fire on his ridgetop for three hours from the attack was broken up.

The Chinese withdrew 100 yards down the slope, leaving their shredded dead behind and the Canadian casualty caused by the artillery.

Killed With Grenades

Meanwhile Barwise had killed two Chinese with grenades, and then, since he knew the way to the Vickers position, was sent for by Mills.

A platoon under Lieut. Bob Whittaker of St. John, N.B., was going back and forth counter-to retrieve the lost Vickers and the Vancouver six-footer briefed its section leaders on the new approaches.

When the attack went in Barwise relieved two dead Chinese of a carbine and a Thompson sub-machine gun, and emptying both magazines, killed an advancing Chinese with each.

While Whittaker's attack was still forming up to go in, Barwise whipped silently up to the Vickers slit trench, toppled the half-filled belt of ammunition at another group of Chinese, killing one, and then carried the weapon back to the Patricias' line.

Weapons captured by the Canadians during the battle included types produced in China, Russia, Czechoslovakia, Germany, and Canada — three Canadin Bren light machine-guns.

The Canadian stand, climax of a "they shall not pass" stand by the whole 27th Commonwealth Brigade, was credited with blocking the Chinese offensive in the sector,

C.C.F. Members Stage Filibuster Against Divorce

Ottawa, May 12 (CP)—The C.C.F. party today flatly served notice of an all-out drive to force divorce cases out of parliament and into the courts.

For the second night this week, C.C.F. members staged a filibuster in commons a filibuster against 129 divorce—new bills from Quebec and Newfoundland — usually passed perfunctorily by the Commons—and they told the House the blockade will continue.

M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader, said his party wants a "proper court" to handle divorces from the two provinces.

These do not have divorce courts, and the present procedure is for a senate committee to examine evidence and pass on whether the bills should be passed with the senate and Commons granting divorces approved by the committee.

They come before the Commons in the form of private bills to which the House devotes an hour two nights a week. Friday night, in the same hour debating a single bill without passing it, only one has gone through at a time without discussion.

The C.C.F., which has fought parliament's handling of divorce cases for many years, on previous occasions suggested that if the two provinces would not set up divorce courts the parliament should designate the exchequer court to handle the divorce actions.

GIVEN FIRST READING

London, May 12—(Reuters) — The House of Commons Friday gave final first reading to a bill to set up a British North America Bill, which would enable the federal government of Canada to legislate about old age pensions.

The bill was presented by Patrick Gordon-Walker, secretary of state for Commonwealth affairs, and amends the British North America Act of 1867.

Pensions legislation in Canada has hitherto been confined to provincial governments.

COMMONS TOLD

Only on Paper Claim

Dr. W. G. Blair (PC—Lanark) charged that Canada's preparation for defence was only on paper. country should be much further advanced than the optimistic statements that war would bring a rain of atomic bombs on this country.

Dr. Blair said the world situation, like the stage when Great Canada must do something about protection of the civilian population. "We are still something has happened. A major fire still blazing in Korea, people are still casualties, a job that would take months.

Gordon Noseworthy (CCF York South) asked what is being done about communities such as Toronto and Montreal, which might destroy a concentration of population.

Mr. Martin said his officials are conscious of that problem. They have consulted with Toronto officials and transmitted their views to the Ontario authorities.

Proposal Turned Down

At another stage of the defence debate, members voted 90 to 35 against a proposal by George Drew, Conservative opposition leader, that a special committee be established to study the estimates of defence expenditures.

Mr. Martin said a proper perspective must be maintained between doing too little and doing too much, or still worse. He said above all it must be remembered that for a community there is no hiding place. War would demand of Canadians at home the same steadfastness courage Canadians have shown on the battlefield.

Intensified Search

For days after the accident an intensified search led by the boy's father, John Ewing, and city firemen was conducted in the river and in the river vicinity. The father had still continued the search as late yesterday afternoon when his son's body was found five miles away in the bay, at the point where the river north of the city.

When Jeffrey found the body he walked to the nearest telephone and notified provincial police. Constable Harry Barker and Reg Rackham contacted Coroner Tom Thompson and Crown Attorney Gordon S. Walmsley of Picton, who authorized removal of the body to Belleville. Coroner Dr. J. Russell Scott viewed the body and said that no inquest would be necessary.

Appreciation Expressed

Provincial police expressed their appreciation to Mr. Jeffrey for his co-operation after finding the body. After notifying authorities he had supplied rubber boots for the officers and had assisted in carrying the body out for conveyance to the city.

SCORES PERFECT GAME

Gatineau, May 12 — (CP)— An avid bowler, Rene Lalonde, 34, had his left leg amputated six inches below the knee several years ago. With the help of an artificial leg Lalonde kept up the game. Today he knocked off his neglect dream: a perfect game. He rolled the 12 straight strikes for a 450 score in a five-pin tournament still under way.

New Discovery F "99"

Eczema, Leg Ulcers, Psoriasis, Boils

Zurich, Switzerland— Eminent scientists have discovered that the lack of certain fatty acids in the diet causes severe disturbances to health. If the highly unsaturated fatty acids are withdrawn from the normal diet, severe injury to the skin results. The modern type of diet and especially the use of refined fats and oils, in which unsaturated fatty acids are almost completely lacking (even butter contains only a minimum trace) have brought about a deficiency in many individuals. A Swiss chemist, Dr. W. Schmitz, succeeded after 10 years of work in preparing from pure vegetable oils an unsaturated fatty acid with a 99% purity and therefore called F "99". This new Swiss discovery, F "99", is a two-way treatment (working internally with F "99" capsules and externally with F "99" in ointment), and has proved remarkably effective in cases of unsaturated fatty acid deficiency—

Eczema—Boils—Leg Ulcers—Psoriasis and Infantile Eczema. F "99" is already widely used throughout Switzerland and is making rapid progress in cities such as Paris, Rome and Vienna. The ointment and capsules F "99" are sent to Canada by air but production is now on a large scale, sending a further distribution to be made of the F "99" preparations, and limited quantities are now obtainable from good stores. F "99" has proved in thousands of cases to be a tremendous value as the natural remedy.

The F "99" preparations come in ointment and capsules for adults, and ointment and liquid for children. An English translation of an interesting illustrated booklet, describing the remarkable effects that new treatment has had, is now been made available for free distribution by druggists. If your druggist cannot supply you, write Diva Laboratories, Dept. F, P.O. Box 156 Bathurst St., Toronto 2B, Ont.

Accused Refused Leave to Appeal His Conviction

Ottawa, May 12—(CP) — Mr Justice Patrick Kerwin of the Supreme Court of Canada Friday refused Adelard (Eddie) Latour, 50, of Sudbury leave to appeal his conviction on a charge of murdering Mrs. Cecile Labrielle.

Latour, under sentence to be hanged May 15, had been granted a reprieve to May 22 pending outcome of his application. The appeal for leave to bring the case before the supreme court was heard in chambers by Mr. Justice Kerwin.

The Sudbury man was convicted in the knife-slaying in the fall of 1949 of 23-year-old Mrs. Rita Labrielle, wife of his cousin, in the basement of their Sudbury home.

Reasons for the judge's refusal were not given.

Workers Appeal For Action To Halt Menace

Hamilton, May 11—(CP) — Burned and blistered by windwhipped flames from a nearby industrial plant, workmen building the new Dofasco coke ovens battled to control fire on the top of the menace.

Seventy have been affected this week, 30 of them in the last 24 hours.

R. S. Peers, an engineering official of the by-product coke company, said he was helpless. The coke ovens, under construction by Patrick Gordon-Walker, secretary of state for Commonwealth affairs, amends the British North America Act of 1867.

Pensions legislation in Canada has hitherto been confined to provincial governments.

Albert College Women's Guild Sponsors Attractive Spring Tea

Though the day was chilly and dampness outside, yet within the spacious rooms of the old Manor House on Bridge Street looked warm and cheerful and gracious comradarie prevailed. By ones, by twos and by threes, the ladies assembled yesterday afternoon for the spring tea and sale of work, being sponsored by the Women's Guild of Albert College.

Tucked neatly away in a corner just inside the entrance doors was the acting treasurer for the afternoon, Mrs. A. H. Hepburn, who was relieving Mrs. S. Hibbard, who had been ill, and in the further in, Mrs. W. S. Northcott, president of the Guild; Mrs. Bert Hayward and Miss Jean Tuttle received and welcomed the guests, passing them on to the dining room where Mrs. H. W. Ackerman, Mrs. W. H. Latimer, and Mrs. W. J. Ketcheson, who gave an additional welcome, after which the guests wandered about admiring the lovely furnishings, visiting the table of homebaking or collected in little groups discussing the idiosyncracies of the weather.

Attractive Tea Table

At the end of the L-shaped dining room, with its centre piece of flowering Billberry branches and graceful ferns, was the tea table, attractively arranged with its lacey, hand crocheted cloth centred with a silver bowl of violet-tinted sweetpeas of pink and delicate mauve and delicate maidenhair ferns, its pink candles in silver holders, and its silver services.

Presiding during the afternoon were: Mrs. Duncan McTavish, Mrs. Wilfred Holmes, Mrs. W. J. Morden, Mrs. H. E. Jones, while Mrs. H. Francis and Mrs. L. Belkey replenished the cups and plates and kept with the dreamlike sandwiches and dainty confections. In charge of the tea room were, Mrs. F. Moon, Mrs. F. Countryman, Mrs. D. Fyfe, Mrs. W. J. McMillan and Mrs. H. B. Fetterly.

Those who served included, Mrs. J. C. McMullin, Mrs. C. W. Houre, Miss E. Paster, Mrs. R. C. Franklin, Mrs. L. G. Hudgins, Mrs. E. M. Hubbs and Mrs. C. McDonald.

Delicious Homebaking

In an adjoining room, the table of homebaking, with the convenership of Miss Norma Clark, assisted by Mrs. Ross Bateman and Mrs. T. B. Foley, was laden with all sorts of good things, little mounds of jellied veil and pork, delicious cakes, fruit cakes, just as good as they looked; glorified lemon pies, that would melt in the mouth, delicious cakes, chocolate loaf cakes, pink-iced angel cake, white loaf cake iced with whole pecan meats, date bread, orange bread, and banana bread, and two loaves of homemade bread, bralded and sprinkled with poppy seeds, canned peaches, and pickles and relishes, besides several others, delectable and very enticing, all of which found ready sale.

A most delightful tea, commendably convened.

British Television Fans Have Good Views of Royal Couple

By MURIEL NARRAWAY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London. (CP)—Television viewers saw happy pictures of Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh on one of their first nights and since the Queen's return from Malta, where he commanded the Frigate Magpie.

Accompanied by Princess Margaret, Elizabeth and her husband attended the Lord's Taverners' ball early on Friday. In the foyer Princess Elizabeth laughing hilariously at a "cricket match" played on the floor of the ballroom.

The Lord's Taverners, an exclusive male club, has been in existence almost a year. The name derives from the Tavern at Lord's cricket ground.

With a closed membership of 300, they are proud that the 12th member is the Duke of Edinburgh. This year's president is Jack Hobbs, well-known British actor.

The cricket match, played in the ballroom of London's Grosvenor House, was probably the first ever held in a hotel. A high screen kept the spectators out of harm's way. The club team, challenging the rest of the world", played such famous British cricketers as Norman Yardley and Bill Edrich.

High Jinks

The formidable opposition did not, however, dismay the club team including such comedians as Stanley Baxter, Basil Radford and Naunton Wayne. They played a cricket match not included in the book, using large balls, balls that bounced, balls that did not bounce, octagonal ball. The Taverners won.

Amused onlookers watched Princess Elizabeth, dressed in a champagne-colored gown embroidered with sequins, and Princess Margaret in a strapless shell-pink satin gown, take a look at "cricket on a holder arm". A penny peep-show, it cost the Princesses 2s (30 cents) each.

The royal party stayed till 2 a.m. and on leaving Princess Elizabeth asked Martin Boddey, the Taverners' chairman:

"Please may I come again next year? It's so nice to go to a party with no formalities."

Proceeds of the ball go to the National Playing Fields Association of which the Duke of Edinburgh has been president for two years.

Sees Bigger Role for Canadian Women in Public Sphere

Calgary (CP) — Two prominent bachelors who guided Canadian affairs of state for a long time have been blamed for their lack of women in the country's political life.

The accused; the late Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King and the late Viscount Bennett. The accuser: Mrs. Evelyn Tufts, of Ottawa, resident correspondent in the parliamentary gallery for 15 years.

"They never had a chance to get acquainted with women and they didn't appreciate them, but we may do a lot better from now on," the still blonde grandmother said here on a recent visit.

She noted the late President Roosevelt had a woman as minister of Labor in his Cabinet. His successor had the first woman diplomat, Mrs. Ruth Owen, to Denmark.

This placing of confidence in women by President Roosevelt, she believed, was based largely to the fact that he had as his wife a most outstanding woman who set a pattern of public service few American women have equalled.

India on the March

Mrs. Tufts wondered why we sent missionaries to India. She thought it should be the other way about.

"We haven't got anywhere near the position Indian women have achieved in public life and yet we look upon them as backward and send missionaries to them. I think they should send missionaries over here to educate us," she said.

Mrs. Tufts, the wife of a retired public servant, has represented her paper, the Halifax Chronicle-Herald—in Ottawa for the last 15 years.

She recently returned from a six months' assignment in Italy, Greece and Yugoslavia. During the last few months she has in-at Fort Lewis, Wash.

At present, Mrs. Tufts is doing a series of articles on Alberta's oil industry prior to returning to Ottawa where she missed reporting the budget this year for the first time since taking the parliamentary post.

SEVERAL TOWNS IN DANGER

Hannibal, Mo., May 12 (AP) — The Mississippi River today menaced several hundred persons in northeast Missouri and west-central Illinois. Several towns and lowland farms were in danger of flooding. Engineers reported that levees have been weakened by prolonged high water and might not withstand a predicted rise or the river.

Women's Activities

ST. ANDREW'S W.M.S.

The Presbyterian W.M.S. of St. Andrew's Church met on Tuesday afternoon with a good number being present. Mrs. W. Mantle presided. Twenty-six calls for the month were reported by Mrs. Pigeon. Mrs. D. Kane read in the Scripture and the topics for the afternoon were taken over by Mrs. Shane and Mrs. Pigeon, each giving a reading; one on the work of the missionaries in the Bhil field and the other on the Jhansi field.

In the Bhil field, the message is being proclaimed through education, medical and direct evangelistic work. Many parents still do not see the need for educating children. However, slowly but surely, the attendance is steadily increasing in students. Miss Irene Stringer supervises the village schools and organizes training classes.

Another phase of the work is done by Miss Margaret Kennedy, especially with the women. These two fields in India are the responsibility of the Presbyterian Church in Canada.

TRINITY UNITED W.M.S.

The May meeting in Madoc of Trinity United W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. John Trotter, with the president, Mrs. Fred Fleming was in charge of the worship period the theme being, "Peace". Mrs. Fleming used a poem "What Then". The Bible lesson was read by Mrs. Allen Holmes, and a poem by Mrs. W. McCoy closed the worship period.

Miss Marion Love was in charge of the program and gave a reading "While I Was Away Here and There", this was followed by a poem, "Little Things", by Mrs. Grace Holmes.

The concluding chapter of the study book, "The Christian Response Japan", was given by Mrs. Delbert Carman, assisted by Mrs. E. Moore, Mrs. George Devolin, Mrs. Bert Devolin and Mrs. Holmes, was conducted a round-table conference on the history of Japan. This proved interesting and informative.

Miss Annie Holmes, the president, conducted the business period. Plans were made for the members to visit Ivanhoe W.M.S. in the near future. Mrs. D. Carmen, supply secretary, reported she had received letters of appreciation from Halifax for the gifts forwarded to the committee in charge of meeting of Newfoundlanders coming to Canada; also a reply re the layette sent out.

Women of The Mooose

On Thursday evening the Women of the Moose, Belleville Chapter, held their first meeting of the season in the Moose Hall with Sr. Regent Selina Isles, presiding.

Various questions were asked by the chaplain, Lucy Mattery, on transfers from Chapter 60 to 435 and surrounded by the recorder, Jr. grad. regent, Kay Donnovon, thanked the Chapter and told of the fine work they had done in attaining Friendship degree. Thanks was also tendered by recorder, Gladys Ritch. As the Friendship degree is all secret, the girls could tell nothing only that they had a wonderful time.

Co-worker Downes asked on behalf of the Chapter 60 to entertain the officers at the next meeting night which request was granted. It was decided to charter a bus with each co-worker paying $1.50 each way to the installation at Brockville, with co-workers, Mary People, Belleville, Luella Ball, Port Hope and Bertha McCauley, of Trenton, to contact members.

A lovely surprise had been prepared by Trenton girls who planned the refreshments, donated, served and cleaned up after. A vote of thanks to each and every one of them.

The lovely miniature silver tea spoons given to Regent Rose Bell was won by Jr. grad. regent Kay Donnovon.

Women's Institute

MOUNTAIN VIEW W.I.

Mountain View The May meeting of Mountain View Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Fred Motley with 24 members and four visitors present. The president, Mrs. E. Hall, presided.

Letters of thanks were read and delegates were chosen to attend the district annual to be held at Cherry Valley the latter part of May. Plans were made for the care of the cemetery. Mrs. J. G. Sprague resigned from the cemetery board and Mr. Stanley Barker was appointed to fill the vacancy. One dollar was received from Miss L. Redmond and $2 from Mr. Harold Cross for cemetery fund.

There was a "Grandmothers" meeting and was in charge of Mrs. Clarence Sprague as convener. Mrs. Sprague called upon each grandmother present for readings of poems and songs.

Mrs. J. D. Keeble conducted a surname contest of past and present grandmothers of the community. This proved interesting and was won by Mrs. R. Hall and Mrs. G. Neal. Mrs. W. Burkitt gave an interesting paper on "Current Events".

The meeting was closed and a social half hour was enjoyed with Mrs. Motley assisted by Mrs. Wilfrid Motley serving refreshments.

On Tuesday evening the executive members of Mountain View Women's Institute met at the home of Miss Elizabeth Jordan and Mr. J. G. Sprague and planned the meeting for the coming year.

After the business was accomplished, Miss Jordan invited the ladies to the dining room and refreshments were served.

US Odds Two to One That Wife Lives Longer

There are now about 28,000,000 married women in the United States, an increase of some 2,000,000 since 1940, states the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.

The prospects of an early marriage for the traditionally happy wives are relatively young—two-fifths are under 25 years of age and only one-sixth are over 35 years.

One of the factors influencing a girl's chances of becoming a wife is her educational attainment—the more schooling the lower are her chances of marriage. Thus, in 1947 the proportion ever married among women at ages 35-44 was almost 95 per-cent, for those who had completed less than seven years of school, compared with about 90 per cent. for the high school graduates, and with 83 per cent for women with at least one year of college.

Perhaps as many as two out of every three American women were employed at some time before they married. Many of them continued to work after marriage in order to supplement their husband's earnings until the baby came.

According to the mortality of white population in 1949, the expectation of life is 40 years for the husband and 45 years for the wife. Their joint expectation of life is 36 years. This is substantially greater than the expected joint lifetime at the turn of the century. In 1900 the average marriage at these ages would have endured only 28 years before one of the spouses died.

When a marriage is dissolved by death it is the wife who is likely to survive; currently the odds are two to one that the wife will outlive her husband.

SISTERS ALL

WE MUST HAVE OUR MAKE-UP

Ellen Fairclough, M.P., shows she hasn't got her ears to the ground when it comes to some opinions of the modern woman. Mrs. Fairclough thinks women wouldn't mind if the price of cosmetics went sky high. She assured the House that women wouldn't mind the extra tax on cosmetics at all. In fact, she went on to suggest women would be only too glad to get along without make-up altogether . . . The extent of the cosmetic counters in drug and department stores does not bear out our woman, M.P.'s opinion at all. On the subject of cosmetics, Ellen Fairclough is talking through her hat. Women would rather buy a new lipstick any day, than a T-bone steak; much as they resent paying the high price they are asked for both of these items . . . Be a woman, Ellen, even if you are an M.P.

These Painted Faces

What never stops amazing us, especially in the springtime, is the way your hands snap back into shape so quickly after all the beatings they take around the house. Mine, for instance, are smeared with paint one day, ground with raspberry prints the next, chalked all the window cleaner before enough hours have passed for the skin to realize it has what happened . . . No matter how many different machines we invent, there will always come right down to it, there is no better tool than the human hand.

The delicate lettuce plant must be set into the earth by hand, the ripe fruit on the tree must be picked with hands, the finest results even to the machine must be done by hand. Most of us certainly don't pretend to give our hands the fine care they deserve when they mean so much to us. The human hand takes more punishment than any tool, yet it snaps back again in a few days as fresh and vibrant and smooth as a sparrow's breast.

Tomato Ripe

They're always coming along with something new in foods. This year, it's imported fresh tomatoes which have been ripened by X-ray treatment. Whether the X-ray has put any more vitamins into these tomatoes or not, they are definitely an improvement in red color on the pale, anaemic variety we used to get at this time of year.

Smuggle Them?

Canadian surveys indicate that there have been tests as many television serials sold as actual pets. People must be thinking they are getting them over from the U.S. on the Q.T. for much the same reason. Incidentally if you get television in your living room, do you know that you are going to need a new floor lamp? One thing leads to another . . .

A firm has already put out a new kind of lamp for use in the room with television. Its specially diffused light does not interfere with the light on the television screen. This permits another member of the family to read in the same room, if he does not object to following the screen performance.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Rose Rival

"Two years is a long time to bear with an unfaithful husband, especially when he carries on his affair with such indifference as whether or not it's plainly apparent to his wife's broken heart to the general public as well.

How patiently the wife who writes the letter below has borne with her difficult situation, she does not definitely say. Her letter implies, however, that she has by no means kept silent about it; that neither her husband nor his brazen girl friend have been left in ignorance as to her awareness of what is going on.

Here is what she says:

"What would be the best thing for a wife to do whose husband has been going out with a divorced woman for almost two years?

"The woman knows that he is married and that we have a son. She even knows me, because on one occasion my husband introduced her to me. I didn't suspect anything then, because she acted as though he didn't mean a thing to her, that they were just acquaintances.

Does no Slip Likes

"She lives with a cousin and is perfectly free to do as she pleases, including going out with my husband any time of the day or night. Once I asked her what kind of friendship it was that my husband because many times I have seen her get into his car with his arm around his friend at night. She said everything was perfectly all right and that she had no intentions of any kind toward him and that he didn't, either. I have never been able to get drunk enough so that they would know that I was drunk, but once I caught them face to face coming out of the theatre and then she walked away, smiling gaily, but she knew I thought for sure that she would get wise and stop having anything to do with him, but she does not. She even lets him come to her house and stay there for hours.

"She denies everything and so does he, so she says she does not care for my husband, and if that is true, then all I can think is that she is doing it just out of meanness, to break up my marriage. If that is the case, so far she has succeeded. Do about it?

"I wonder just what it is that this woman wants as a result, and what she thinks is worth saving about her marriage.

For Convention's Sake?

Does she want to preserve the illusion of a couple living together in normal man-and-wife fashion for convention's sake? If so she is also attached to the idea of being supposed to eat the heartiness of risk the chance of sometime finding herself in a position where she might have to face the music about supporting herself? Maybe it's the child's welfare she thinks she is considering, telling herself that she has no right to break up her home and deprive him of a small son of a father's presence.

It may, of course, be any one of these reasons, or some more studied combination of them all, that prompts her definite judgment that she wants to "save" her marriage. And while it goes without saying that a husband and wife rriage should be "saved" if there any possibility of that the desiring of it is worthwhile, I think she should not arbitrarily rule out debating with herself the alternatives that are open to her, and making a decision to leave her husband or stay with him with her eyes fully open. She should, at least in part, so far as is humanly possible in any such circumstance, be the sort of life that would most likely be best either way, then make her choice between them.

What Type Character

What she really wants, of course, is not so much to "save" what since may remain of a marriage that has worn distinctly ingly threadbare, but by some magic to have it restored whole and fresh again. And to venture any prediction about whether or not there might be even the faintest possibility of this, one would have to know more about this husband than his wife has revealed. There are husbands who, through some fleeting human whim or sty, step out of line—and out of character—briefly, repent bitterly and spend the rest of their lives in loyal and loving companionship with their wives.

The whole question turns upon the basic type of character a man has, and that is a point which only if she is not completely certain in her own mind as to what she somehow determine to her satisfaction.

If the family doctor is available, he might be the one to whom she should turn for counsel. Failing that, a priest, rabbi or minister, known to the wife of the latter and her husband sufficiently well, it might be extremely helpful, and do a great deal to clarify the whole thing for her, if she would go to him in confidence and talk her problem over. Or she might consult a marriage counsellor and get suggestions.

One thing is very certain. That is that she will make no progress whatever toward solving the problem by continuing to exchange accusations and attempts to win her husband and the other woman to her side. Either by herself or in frank discussion with someone else, she must chart how confidently you tackle tasks. Be your amiable self.

September 24 to October 23—(Libra)—Use care and conditions all day. Concentrate on essentials but don't neglect financial matters. This does not mean to quit going, or slow up—on the contrary, double speed, keep busy trying, you will be rewarded.

October 24 to November 23—(Scorpio)— Some months in your mind as to your security, improvement. Do not take risks quickly. Faith, wise judgment will strengthen your power to achieve. Mind health needs.

November 23 to December 22—(Sagittarius)—You are in the group to which the planets group are partial today. Well planned and consistent effort, sensible management returns fine results. Protect interests, sponsored in their place.

December 23 to January 21—(Capricorn) — Some months in your mind as to your security, improvement. Do not take risks quickly. Faith, wise judgment will strengthen your power to achieve. Mind health needs.

January 22 to February 20—(Aquarius)—You are in the group to which the planets group are partial today. Well planned and consistent effort, sensible management returns fine results. Protect interests, sponsored in their place.

February 21 to March 20—(Pisces)—Cause of trouble often is anxiety —needless, too. Have the will to win without undue pressure. Hold emotions in check; the energy rightly and without impatience and wisdom high results.

YOU BORN TODAY: Stable character, can be depended upon to do a thorough job, no matter how difficult. Things usually don't seem hard for you. But don't let that cause you to relax at wrong times. No need to over-sell ideas either. You generally have good plans, are accurate, make good managers, financiers, real estate or business merchants. Are also organizers, could be efficient stage or newspaper personality. Good at being headstrong. Don't let disappointments or ingratitude deter your zest to win. Many good months ahead.

It took Southerners to discover that sweet potatoes are sweet. Long ago Creole culinary mistresses created puddings, pies, cakes and even candy out of sweet potatoes.

Sweet potatoes will give you your complete daily requirement of Vitamin A in an average portion.

Southern sweet potato pie rivals pumpkin pie at its best. The cooked sweet potatoes are mixed with egg and milk to form a custard, and then baked in a pie shell. You must be generous with spices—such as cinnamon and cloves. The amount of sugar will sometimes vary, depending on the natural sweetness of the potatoes.

Avoid overcooking which may cause the filling to become watery. To get neat even slices, let the pie cool completely before serving.

Sweet Potato Pie

9-inch unbaked pie shell
3 cups mashed sweet potatoes
1-4 cup brown sugar
1-4 cup white sugar
1-2 teaspoon salt
1-2 teaspoon cinnamon
1-4 teaspoon cloves
1-2 teaspoon ginger
3-4 cup milk
2 eggs slightly beaten
2 tablespoons melted butter or margarine
1 teaspoon rum extract
1 cup of grated cocoanut
Put pie dough into plate, fluting edges.

Mix the mashed sweet potatoes with the brown sugar, white sugar, salt, cinnamon, cloves, ginger, milk, eggs, butter and rum extract. Taste for sweetness. Add more sugar if desired.

If mixture is lumpy force through a fine sieve. Add 3-4 cup grated cocoanut, stirring well.

Preheat oven at 425 degrees. Bake 10 minutes, then reduce heat and bake 30 to 40 minutes more. Pie is done when a silver knife, inserted 1 inch from centre of pie, comes out clean.

Cocoanut may be omitted. Canned or cooked pumpkin or squash may be used in place of sweet potatoes if desired.

April 21 to May 20—(Taurus)—A fine period for financial and personal interests. Be alert in all of that's going on around you. Just rewards for the sensible, energetic and considering types.

May 21 to June 21—(Gemini)—Can be one of your best days this month. Religious, business and professional work should move mildly forward. Avoid emotional and artistic affairs also favored this afternoon and good day.

June 22 to July 23—(Cancer)—Read between the lines and don't think you are smarter than others and you can advance appreciably. Avoid self and personal disappointment, P.M. fine for home interests, family matters.

July 24 to August 23—(Leo)—Take gossip with a grain of salt; don't carry it. Be sure you are on right road before starting. After Noon hour things should sway fully to the favorable side under capable management.

August 24 to September 22—(Virgo)—Day's indications stimulating. Keep in close touch with outside operators, others' success. Progress will depend mostly on

For town wear.

By VERA WINSTON

THE cost of heavy, stiff silk is the fashion flash of the season for smart town wear this year, an attractive dress coat of navy blue silk ottoman, has a draped cuff collar fastening with one button. The sleeves are finished with turn-back cuffs. The seams down the front terminate in box pleats on the skirt front and back. The pockets are framed by a circle of stitching.

HAVE NICEST LEGS

London, May 12 (Reuters) — English girls have the nicest legs in the world, an American who should know said yesterday. Tyrone Power, after almost a year in England, said: "I have looked them closely and I say, after travelling in many countries, that English girls have the nicest legs."

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECHAM

GOOD MANNERS c s

Mother's Day —Sunday, May 13—

Notes for Hostess working in the interest of mothers everywhere—reached the international level in 1950, when delegates from 40 member countries of the United Nations accepted the invitation of the Mothers' Committee to select a National Mother. (Heretofore, selection of mothers by nations mothers will be made bi-annually.) . . . so, for the first time in history, mothers of the world are unified in a common cause — the brotherhood among the peoples of the world, leading to lasting peace.

Everyone of us should study more carefully and thoughtfully the six qualifications for the Canadian mother, set forth by the Mothers' Committee of the Golden Rule Foundation. A noble and abiding ideal of motherhood shines forth in the mature and beautiful words of these qualifications. No appeal to pandering to sentimentality in the words . . . no twaddle . . . nothing "soft". Qualifications

Here are the sound and proud qualifications:

That she be a successful mother, as evidenced by the character of her individual children.

That she reflect a strong religious and spiritual integrity;

That she embody those traits highly regarded in mothers: courage, cheerfulness, patience, affection, kindness, understanding, and a homemaking ability;

That she exemplify in her life and conduct the precepts of the Golden Rule so that she may be truly designated "A Golden Rule Mother";

That she have a sense of civic and international understanding; and have been active in community betterment or in service for public benefit;

That she be qualified to represent the Mothers of Canada in all responsibilities attached to her role as the Canadian Mother.

An ideal wife and mother—an ideal citizen of her community—an ideal citizen of the world!

BEAUTY

The classic nail treatment

Something happened so you couldn't keep your regular appointment with Mrs. Manicurist. You've been digging around the house, cleaning up odd corners, and your hands are a sight to see. There comes a ring on the telephone. Friends have blown into town. Must see you, and quick. Hurry-hurry, they're waiting! Just a cozy little dinner and a social evening afterwards.

The smug little hat will cover up the tresses that could do with a wave set; the make-up box will serve for complexion highlights. But something must be done about the nails. No doubt you have a broken nave or two, maybe a mean little hangnail has been bothering you. You'll have to spare ten minutes for this small grooming, and that will do for the time being.

Remove the polish. That is the first step. Next, file and shape the nails. You'll make faster time with the flexible metal file than with the emery boards, but you'll have to use the boards for a final smoothing. Work from sides to centre, being careful not to cut down into the flesh. That practice makes a bad matter. Ditch cuticle in the course of time.

You'll have to spare ten minutes for fingernail grooming

Now for a soapy scrubbing of your hands. Better use a stiff brush to make a good job, if you have been doing heavy work around the house. While your hands are under the water, pass a nail-white pencil under the nave. These little pencils work like magic, are easier to use than nail-white powder, and a pleasure to work stick. Put them in your pencil sharpener once in a while so there will be a sharp point.

A little cuticle cream or mineral oil is all you need to soften the cuticle so it can be lifted with the orangewood stick. Be careful do not press down at the nail bases. That deplorable habit can result in a groove in the deformed nail, as the underlying matrix, composed of new cells, is easily injured.

Should you happen to flush up hangnail, then soften it carefully with the curved, needlepoint scissors keeping the sharp ends pointing away from the nail.

You must wash your hands again to remove every particle of cream or oil. If the slightest film is left on, your polish will not adhere properly. Rinse and dry thoroughly.

Let the polish drain from the brush so you will put on a light application. So about the hazardness of getting into your togs while the veneer is drying. Then put on another light coat.

Fashion Flashes

NEVER; NEVER, have we seen such values as we have in the variety of frocks priced from twenty to twenty-five dollars. Each famous designer in this field has several novelties, such as a dress of polka dotted silk crepe in various colors, simply made, with tucked front and short sleeves. To dress it up there is a detachable jewelled matching fabric—with big pockets —that ties in a sash bow in back.

COMING IN again is green, not in all ranges, but in different shades and particularly in leniency or chartreuse greens.

AND NOW we give you the reversible coat. This model we admired was in red and white polka-dotted rayon on one side, and solid navy satin on the other. The coat has unusual interest in its pointed scarf collar and the cuffs are belled. Coat is cut on modified dynamic lines and has an optional self belt.

THE BIG favorite for late spring and Summer wear is linen for every day. Here's a handsome suit case linen pleated in pink, pink blue and grey for the six-gore skirt, and for the shawl collar, cuffs and belt of the blue jacket, piped with red or gray linen. The jacket is cut

Navy wool fallie outfit.

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

LITTLE flower-shaped, jewelled pins are used to nicely point up the collar and cuffs of this navy blue wool fallie suit. The collar comes to a point after hugging the neckline and has the snugly buttoned bodice. The three-quarter sleeves are under the arm, thence to shape the bodice.

Clever Greetings Mean Good Money To Avonmore Poets

New York (AP)—Edward Ratcliffe, a publisher who really appreciates amateur poets.

Matter of fact, he publishes them—and pays well for their efforts.

Ratcliffe is president of a Joliet, Ill., greeting card house which put out more than 50 per cent of the verseless greetings sold in the United States last year. Sales totaled more than $5 cents a line up to $10 or $15."

The first verse from a contest was delivered 13 or 14 years ago. He bought it. The news spread that there was cigaret money in verse writing and since then he's had a steady flow.

"We get between 100 and 150 unsolicited verses a day," the greeting card tycoon said. "We pick out maybe five per cent of them for use on cards. We pay anywhere from 25 cents a line up to $10 or $15."

Reinscribbler, he says, is seldom written by clergymen; although good religious verse is in demand. Instead, it's the creasing demand for cards built around the home.

Teen-agers send him quantities of "gag verses." He watches closely for trends. Verse is in for special young people's cards and is careful to use only up-to-date slang.

Reinscribbler's company publishes calendars and cards a year—between 1,200 and 1,800 different types annually. About 80 per cent of the verse is the standard "everyday occasions" like birthdays, Christmas, friendship, sympathy and such.

Christmas represents 25 per-cent of business, he said. Easy days like Easter, Mother's Day, Father's Day, Graduation Day, St. Patrick's Day, St. Valentine's Day and Hallowe'en account for the remainder.

He blushes slightly when he tells that one of the fastest selling cards in the history of his firm was one bearing a verse beginning: "Roses Are Blue, Violets Are Green, Forgetting Your Birthday." Followed with a plenty big kick. This one was dreamed up by a woman criticized for forgetting her own birthday. He has sold more than 3,500,000 reproductions.

SET FUR ON FIRE

King's Lynn, England, May 12 (Reuters) — Dennis Ashworth's pet rabbit set one of the furs of his father a quarrel, so he set the rabbit on fire and smoked her out. The court was told yesterday. A guest found the corridor full of smoke from the burning fur. He said: "If you say I done it, I must have done it," police said Dennis told them.

Woman Doctor Is America's Mother of '51

Crossmore, N.C. (AP)—America's mother of 1951 is a hardy woman doctor who reared 11 children of her own and only the Lord knows how many others from broken mountain homes.

The kindly, 77-year-old physician, Dr. Mary Martin Sloop, rode horseback as a bride into "God's Forgotten Acres" area of western North Carolina's Blue Ridge Mountains 40 years ago and found there a pressing life.

By the sale of old clothes collected from all over the United States Dr. Sloop financed a home and school in Avery county for mountain children.

Drove Off Moonshiners

As she brought the better things in life to this remote mountain region, she just as vigorously drove off the moonshiners and the bootleggers.

She was not averse to raising a stiff hornful of the "law" herself, and she fought sometimes almost single handed for better roads, schools and agricultural opportunities.

So beloved is she by the children who benefit from her Crossmore, that just her appearance in a classroom or the dining hall brings a spontaneous outburst of applause and cheering.

Mary Martin Sloop first instilled in the people of Avery county a respect for physicians as she gently led them from the bitterness of self-medication with root and herbs and superstitions, to an understanding of the value of the then modern drugs and medical technique.

Dr. Sloop was named American mother of 1951 by the National Mothers Committee of the Golden Rule Foundation, an organization devoted to the welfare of mothers and children. She was selected

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By Gen. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

COBL STAFF

Manager Stan Scrutton of the Kingston Dixons, the Limestone City Senior O.H.A. district Baseball League, says, in lending a dash of additional strength into the squad this season. Stan has gathered a Maritime harlier named Roy Oake into the pitching fold and others of the mound staff include Jack Stone, Eric Rank and Bill Richards, plus possibly a few unknowns.

Clark Carnegie will take over the catching chores while Don Gilmour will hold down the initial sack. Converting around the keystone sack will be Cliff Aitken with Jack Wilde on third. Handling the shortstop chores will be either Lorne Ferguson, of the Boston Bruins, or Bud Allen. Joe Lavendesh, Stan and Al Lenard, at Queen's fame will do the outer gardening jobs.

However, if pre-season games mean anything the Panies shellacked the Dixsers by a lop-sided 11-0 score while the Intermediate Frigidaires held them to a two-all tie.

PONIES SHELLACK BROCKVILLE

By the same token the Kingston Panies handed the current edition of the Brockville Memes a fancy 15-0 plastering the other day. The Memes boasted a number of last year's faces on the squad and a newcomer should be familiar to Belleville fandom "B" hockey fans. He is no other than Rennie Trussell who gets his mail in the down east city.

Barney Phelan used five pitchers in an effort to stem the Pony tide. Among them was our old pitchin' pal "Smokey" Smith who lasted two innings. Donahue started and handed over to McFadden before the innings was over. "Smokey" came in lasted for a pair and gave up to Kingston who finished the game. Turner, the catcher is back with the Memes this year.

"JOE" IS SET

At Kelleher, who was slated for a spot with a team in Val D'Or, Quebec, had a last-minute change of mind, and accepted a position with Canada Wire & Cable, entry, At. left the other day and is now working out with Frank O'Neill's team.

LACROSSE

Several inquiries regarding the possibility of the organization of a lacrosse team in the city, have been received by this department. Apropos of that John Pickard, associated with the T. Eaton Company Ltd. here and a former lacrosse player, has taken up the figurative cudgels for the resurrection of the game. John a former player with the Hunterville Intermediate OLA squad informs us that lacrosse interest has increased by leaps and bounds the past two years with this evidenced in the fact that the Ontario Lacrosse Association is being 151 clubs this year as against 71 of a year ago.

Pickard with Walter Bent is very interested in reviving the game here and if sufficient interest is shown they will get matters under way immediately. It has been indicated that the Peterborough OLA squad might send players here to bolster a Belleville team, but in the meantime efforts will be made to get minor interest aroused.

SOCCER

The Belleville entry in the Eastern Ontario Football League trek to Batawa this afternoon where they meet the shoemen in a regular fixture. No soccer is scheduled for the city today but both city squads see action on Tuesday in the Bay of Quinte League. The Northern Electrics take on the Picton Gunners in Picton while the ANAF's are hosts to No. 6 Repair Depot here.

Jimmy Brown, Boston Braves' coach tells this one:

"You wouldn't see it happen again in 100 years, but I saw it happen twice" as Braves Field the other day.

"Del Rice was in the Cardinal batting cage and some kid was pitching batting practice. Terry Moore was standing just to the left of the cage, hitting fungos to the infield. Moore, as far as the catcher threw to Rice, Moore hit a ball toward first base. The balls met in midair, just in front of the plate and disappeared off into foul territory.

"But it really was funny, because Rice swung anyway and had the silliest look on his face when he found out there wasn't any ball. The catcher saw the ball coming and saw Rice swing, but then there wasn't any ball at all. It was something Al Schacht might have dreamed up, only Al would not be able to pull it off once in 10,000 tries. It was one for Ripley.

TRAFFIC CONTROL LAUDED METERS SUCCESS

Vancouver (CP) Mayor Fred Hume told the Vancouver Traffic and Safety Council he agrees with their contention that the city traffic engineer is few cities can claim a comparable program of street development and advanced methods or control- ling traffic, as adopted in this city.

Vancouver — (CP) — Use of 30 minute parking meters has proven so successful in a trial period recommending their use be extended to other streets. He suggested such busy arteries as Granville and Hastings Street.

White Sox' Canny Manager, Richards, Excels in Developing Pitchers and Making Trades

BY RALPH RODEN
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

"I don't pick anybody to beat the White Sox." That's how Paul Richards, manager of the Chicago White Sox, sized up the American League race on opening day.

So far he's right.

Chicago's freshman manager is proving he can win in the majors as well as in the minors. A manager of the John McGraw school, the driving leader has his White Sox in the thick of the American League pennant race.

Hailed as a developer of pitchers, especially in the case of Detroit's Hal Newhouser, Richards also is gaining recognition as a smart bombre when it comes to trading. He's already behind last winter's trade that sent starting pitchers Ray Scarborough and Bill Wight to the Boston Red Sox for outfielder Al Zarilla and pitchers Joe Dobson and Clyde Litzenfield.

So far, Richards has come out on top in that deal.

Zarilla plugged a gap in right field and today is tied for the league lead with 18 runs batted in. Dobson fielded to impress until last night when he gained his first earning in the second no-hit no-run game of the season. Scarborough has only one victory to show and Wight has failed to crash the winner's circle.

Dobson, 34-year-old righthander, pitched the Sox into a third-place tie with Cleveland by limiting the Indians 12-1 before 17,138 fans at Comiskey Park.

Dobson's one hitter until the eighth inning when pinch - hitter Bob Avila broke the spell with a two - out double. The Indians scored in the ninth on two walks and an error on a potential double play ball.

The Sox hammered Early Wynn, Steve Gromek and George Zuverink for 14 hits, wrapping up the decision with a five-run spree in the seventh off Gromek.

Third One-hitter

Dobson's feat was the third one-hitter of the season. Con Marrero of Washington performed the trick against Philadelphia last month and Sal Maglie of the New York Giants did it against Pittsburgh last week. Cliff Chambers of Pittsburgh pitched a no-hit no-run victory over Boston last Sunday.

Dizzy Trout turned in his first victory of the season as Detroit Tigers humbled the Browns on the Briggs lights at St. Louis. Trout scattered four St. Louis hits, fanned seven and walked three. Vic Wertz led the Tiger attack, driving in four runs.

Chicago Cubs treated Chambers like a semi-pro pitcher as they pounded the Pirates 10-4 in the only game played in the National League.

Chambers, making his first start since his no-hitter, yielded three runs on four hits in two innings. The Cubs continued their assault against four relief pitchers, piling up 14 hits. Andy Pafko paced the Chicago drive, banging out his seventh and eighth home runs. Pafko also has driven in runs batted in to 22, tops in the majors.

Night games between Philadelphia and New York, St. Louis and Chicago, Cincinnati and Boston were postponed because of rain and cold. Boston, New York and Washington at Philadelphia in the American League were idle.

MAYOR CANNOT GO

Paris, May 11 (CP)—The Mayor of Paris (Ontario variety) won't be on hand for celebrations in Paris (French variety) when the city celebrates its 2,000th anniversary this summer.

France has invited mayors of 23 towns and cities throughout the world with the same name to attend the anniversary, Mayor Arthur Griffiths says he won't be able to make it.

Casey, Aguirre Sign Contracts With Bombers

Winnipeg, May 12 (CP)—Winnipeg Blue Bombers' Football Club Friday announced the signing of halfback Tom Casey and end Joe Aguirre to contracts for the 1951 seasons. Both were members of last year's Bombers.

Casey formerly played for Hamilton in eastern Canada and New York Yankees proffessional club before joining Bombers last year. Aguirre, a former Los Angeles player, will act as assistant coach to George Trafton as well as handle an end position.

The signing of the pair gives Bombers five of their seven imports. They already have signed centre John Brown and tacklers Buddy Tinsley and Jim Gravill. It is expected the club soon will line-up quarterback Jack Jacobs, who has been here for some time.

Cartier Makes Savage Comeback To Whip Hairston

(By The Canadian Press)

Walter Cartier, down for nine in each of the first two rounds, made a savage comeback Friday night to whip Eugene (Silent) Hairston on a split 10-round decision. Cartier had the deaf mute New York Negro down for eight at the final bell, but needed three rounds on four penalties against Hairston to win the fight.

Hairston weighed 161, Cartier 160.

The low blows cost Hairston the decision in a violent brawl witnessed by 4,593 paying $13,281 at Madison Square Garden. Referee Mark Conn said Hairston hit low twice in each of the rounds he lost on fouls—the third, fourth and eighth.

Conn was the only official to vote for Hairston, 5-4-1. Judge Harold Barnes saw it for Cartier 6-4-1 and Judge Bill Healy had Cartier on top 8-4. The Associated Press card agreed with Barnes.

Heavyweight champion Ezzard Charles and challenger Joe Maxim, lightheavy champion Friday night succeeded in perfect physical condition for their title bout at Chicago Stadium May 30.

At Milan, Italy, Russia Friday withdrew from European amateur boxing championships which begin here Monday.

The Italian organizing committee said no reason was given.

At Paris, Russia advanced to the finals of the European basketball tournament Friday night by easily beating Bulgaria 72-54. The unbeaten Russians will play Czechoslovakia for the championship today.

At Inglewood, Calif., Citation ran out of the money Friday in the third start of his comeback comeback as Special Touch won the $15,000 Premiere Handicap at Hollywood Park.

The Calumet Farm ace ran fifth in the field of 10, out of the money for the first time in his illustrious career. Citation was beaten about two lengths by the winner.

Willie Shoemaker brought in Special Touch, a filly, for the $11,450 net purse.

It was Citation's third defeat since he resumed racing at Bay Meadows last month.

At London, American - bred Turco II, owned by New Yorker William Woodward, maintained his position Friday night as 10 to 1 joint favorite in a bookmakers' callover on the Epsom Derby scheduled for May 30.

But the Aga Khan's Praise Du Jour, which was beaten in a race at Chester Thursday, drifted from joint favorite to third choice at 100 to 7.

The new joint favorite with Turco II is Chinese owned Ki Ming, the big three year old colt that won the 2,000 guineas classic at Newmarket May 2. Ki Ming is owned by London restaurateur Billy Ley On.

At White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Jim Ferrier of San Francisco rallied away in a three-stroke lead at the half-way point of the 72-hole Greenbrier Open Friday by finishing with three straight birdies.

He slowed down compared to Thursday's 64 but again best par by three strokes with a 67, the lowest score posted on the second 18. This gave him a 36-hole total of 131.

It put him three up on Sam Snead, his closest pursuer, Snead also had a 67 for the second straight day over his home course.

Ben Hogan, defending title-holder, moved into third place by shooting a 69 in back of a starting 68, for 137.

At Oslo, Norway, Adly Shafft, veteran Egyptian tennis player, defeated Johan Haanes, 6-1, 6-4, 7-5, to give his team a 3-2 victory Friday over Norway in the first round of the European zone Davis Cup competition. Egypt will meet Belgium in the second round.

Hugo, headskeered Wladyslaw Zbyszko, the Ponderous Pole, who has been giving grunt-and-groan "Goliath" must have thought he was in front of the slow-motion cameras in Memorial Arena last night.

The huge hunk of muscle and bone, with no foliage except on his chin, pendulumed his way through thirty minutes, reason included, in a main bout with Yukon Eric, who took just as long to get ready for action inside the ring or otherwise, and came out the short end of the score.

The two mastodons of the ring slow-motioned their way through two falls and much boo-hooing and about as interesting, with the Pole getting the disqualification gate from Referee Bunny Dunlop in the first fall, and failing victim to the pile-driver body slams of the Yuke in the second. The main feature of the falls was their brevity.

Resorted to Everything

The Pole resorted to everything in the curricula of the College of Applied Pushiatory. In fact he slugged the Yuke over his handsome noggin once, with one of his own lumberjack boots. And when you remember that one of these, with a couple of paddles, would take you across the bay, you can get an idea of what might have happened had it landed.

Falling that, the giant from the Polish steppes tried to bite off his victim like a wrestling Grizzly at times, picked up the Yuke's gaily colored lumberjack shirt, wrapped it neatly but not effectively around the bewhiskered chin of the pride of Alaska and started to wring it like a freshly-washed sock.

Bunny Objected

Bunny, the Dunlop, being a student of the rules as laid down by whoever invented them, took umbrage at this, and inserted himself into the picture. He grabbed a handful of the Polish chin foliage, and pulled on it like a Cambridge oarsman.

This incensed Wady no end, so he promptly forgot about the tender feet of the Alaskan forest and vented his spleen on the official scene. He kicked, gouged and slapped Bunny, and physically kneaded him like a chunk of dough. Bunny finally bumbled twenty dogs on the official jurisdiction, and declared himself victor, the venerable Bunny pulled his titian locks down on his face, emitted a roar like a wounded lion, and swarming like a flock of David promptly slingshotted a disqualification decision on the villain.

Just to show his independence, Wady refused to go to the dressing room. Instead he perched his 300 pounds atop a step-post and squatted there in a pachydermic pose of meditation. (Spell that "ih," Mr. Compositor.)

Battle Outside Ring

In the second fall, Wady had acquired by some means a large-sized chunk of lumber, into which he secreted in his trunks. He used it to good effect on the Yukonian optics, until Referee Derrick finally tired of the uninvited face-lift and resorted to his fists. He pounded the towering structure of the Pole and finally smashed him out of the ring. He bashed him back on three occasions then followed him to the first row of customers. Bunny, not to be outdone joined the party and a free fall threesome was enjoyed in the front pew customers' laps, so to speak.

However all such things must end and Eric finally yanked the Pole back into the ring, heaved him about once, twice, smashed him to the canvas, murmured "Good night, sweetheart" and fell on the prostrate Pole for the fall and match.

Best Bout of Evening

The best bout of the evening was the fall between Earl "Moose" McCready and Lee "The Leer" Henning. It was speed and showmanship from the opening whistle with the villainous Lee extracting all the tricks from his wicked bag. The crowd was on edge throughout as the tide turned alternately to one from the other. It was fast furious milling that caught the fancy of the 1,100 customers.

Nate Brown's villainy was too much for Turi Lasley in the opener, and he defeated the clever youngster after 20 minutes of fast action.

Eddie Powers Making Good As Referee

Vancouver, May 12 — (CP) — Pacific coast hockey league fans were impressed this season by the performance of a 24-year-old rookie who transplanted a name famous in Canadian sport to the west coast last year.

Now the fans are equally impressed by his refereeing in the intercity lacrosse league on the coast.

The name is Eddie Powers.

Eddie Powers, Sr., who died Jan. 17, 1945, was one of Canada's best hockey and lacrosse coaches. He was more than that. He was a man of high sportsmanship as a sturdy meant far more than just winning.

It was in that environment that Eddie Powers, Jr., grew up.

The youth has had his share of big-time hockey when the war came along. He played with the R.C.A.F. as a pilot in the Mediterranean flew 53 operations on shipping strikes.

After the war he discharged as a flight-lieutenant and went back to sport. He quarterbacked the Jalmy Bombers in 1946 as a league title two years running.

Powers has had his fill of big shows and had to give up both rugby and hockey.

That put him in the lacrosse field. He was with Hamilton Tigers when they won the Minto Cup Bowls title in 1946 and coached them to the Mann Cup finals the following year.

Last year Eddie came to Vancouver to coach the Intermediate Terriers club in the inter-city lacrosse league.

He also nobly officiated in the Toronto Commercial League and the Ontario Hockey Association before he came to the west coast to referee in the Pacific Coast Hockey League.

Even in New Westminster, where coach Babe Pratt threw a temper tantrum in the opening game, and he defeated the clever youngster after 20 minutes of fast action.

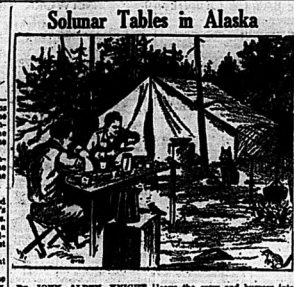
Solmar Tables in Alaska



By JOHN ALDEN KNIGHT
(Noted Sportsman, Author and Creator of Solmar Tables.)

Since the Solmar Tables were first made public almost 20 years ago, we have tried to impress upon the men and women who use them the inescapable fact that the Solmar Tables are effective to any marked degree only upon wildlife that is undisturbed.

As you know, the animals, birds and fish in which the sportsman is interested regulate their lives according to the distribution of food. Self-preservation is uppermost in the consciousness of the creatures of the wild. Failure is secondary. Hunger plays second fiddle to fear. Only when fish and game feel secure and unafraid are they interested in food, and opportunity is not given to many of us to observe wildlife under ideal conditions.

Many of us, however, go camping on the outdoors to allow any of us to move about freely without being observed and, quite justifiably, mistrusted. This, obviously, influences the behavior of the creatures under observation.

The other day a young man of our acquaintance returned from two years of employment with the Alaskan Road Commission. As a member of a survey crew his travels had taken him deep into the wilderness. It may be that a trapper or two had run his lines in this back country from time to time but that was all. Otherwise the country has been untouched by man.

Creatures which he encountered regarded him with curiosity, not fear. None of them had heard the sound of a gun. The animals he crossed had been unfished. In short, the instinctive fear of man was not known to most of the inhabitants of this virgin territory.

Variance in Activity

Our young friend had a copy of the Solmar Tables in his kit. He noticed a pronounced variance in the activity of the wild creatures from time to time during each day, so he took the pains to see if this evident cyclic behavior corresponded in any way with the Solmar Periods.

The majority of the crew was a half-breed dog who acted in the dual capacity of mascot and camp guard. Perhaps you've seen this hazard in northwoods camps and you've duly felt job to avoid these pests did not come in and chew up everything which held the slightest trace of salt.

Of course, the dog did not limit his activities to porcupines and chased everything that would run from him. Our friends noticed that he would be very active one hr. chasing ground squirrels and never for a space of two or three hours.

Then, by contrast, he would leave the crew and burrow into the brush for a nap which might last for two or three hours. Systematic check showed that the dog's activities fitted exactly into the Solunar Periods, so, for that matter, did the behavior of the other animals. During Solunar Periods the dog would steal anything he could get his paws on, and between times there would be no animals in sight.

Of course, there was always a bountiful supply of Canada Jays on hand. Should a meal happen to coincide with a Solunar Period these birds were absolutely unconcerned. They showed no fear of man and would steal anything they could pick up if it remotely resembled anything edible.

Gone Again.

During the times between Solunar Periods — the hourly periods — the camp robbers were not to be seen, regardless of whether or not a meal was being served.

The amount of work a man does in a day, in accordance with the required minimum, is governed by the way he happens to feel. At some times during the average day one finds he can work with the road gang would be especially interested in their tasks and alert to hasten the job along.

At other times, they worked mechanically, accomplishing the minimum of work for the hours put in. Regarded in terms of group behavior, the crew responded to the Solunar Periods every bit as completely as did the birds and animals.

Perhaps the most surprising instance of the total response to the Solunar Periods was the behavior of the fish in the streams. In all of these there were hundreds of Alaskan grayling. These make fine table fare, so our friend made it a point to keep his camp supplied with them to provide a mess for the camp.

He learned that it was really wasted effort to attempt to catch these fish in quantity unless there was a Solunar Period in progress. At these times he could take a grayling almost every cast. Between Solunar Periods he had practically no luck at all.

Apparently the fact that the fish were there by the hundreds in any stream was of little importance. Solunar Periods are the only significant factor in the daily rhythm of the Solunar Periods.

No One Will Regret Closing Of Hockey Year

Toronto, May 12 (CP)—No one in Toronto or district will have the least regret when the big sign at Maple Leaf Gardens proclaiming "hockey tonight" winks out for the last time this spring. The Toronto Maple Leafs meet St. Michael's Monarchs tonight for the Alexander Cup, a major-league ice affair melted into minor-league proportions by May weather.

It's the last official game of the season—and it's just as well. If there were any more, probably no one would pay to see them.

Win, lose or draw, a winner will be declared, Canadian amateur Hockey Association officials after checking their seed catalogues and farmers' almanacs, decided. Monarchs and Toronto Marlboro Flyers 9-5 to win the best-of-seven series in four straight games.

A great year went up at Allandale station as team captain Real Cherry held the Memorial Cup high. From there a long parade wound more than a mile to Barrie arena, where Mayor Hamilton had a kiss for every player.

The Flyers themselves were packed out in sweaters, pants, pucks with 10-gallon hats and bright neckerchiefs. Even Coach Emms had discarded his stetson for a sombrero.

Business halted while the parade continued. At the arena each player was given a travelling clock, a gift of the town. Defenceman Jimmy Morrison also was given a watch after each game, the team's most popular player by Flyers fans.

Flyers also were given trophies for winning the OHA and Eastern Canada titles, presented by OHA president Jack Roxburgh and George Dudley, secretary of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

Big Four Schedule

Ottawa, May 12 (CP)—D. Wes Brown, secretary of the Interprovincial Rugby Football Union, Friday announced the Big Four schedules for 1951.

Opening games with Montreal playing a night game at Montreal Stadium, Saturday, Sept. 30 and Oct. 28. In previous seasons, Ottawa and Hamilton have played Sunday games, but Toronto has declined.

The Schedule:

Wednesday, Aug. 29 (night game)—Montreal at Hamilton.
Saturday, Sept. 1—Toronto at Ottawa.
Monday, Sept. 3 (Labor Day)—Toronto at Hamilton.
Saturday, Sept. 8—Montreal at Ottawa; Hamilton at Toronto.
Sunday, Sept. 9—Ottawa at Montreal.
Saturday, Sept. 15—Montreal at Toronto; Ottawa at Hamilton.
Sunday, Sept. 16—Hamilton at Toronto.
Sunday, Sept. 23—Hamilton at Montreal.
Saturday, Sept. 29—Hamilton at Ottawa.
Sunday, Sept. 30—Toronto at Montreal.
Saturday, Oct. 6—Montreal at Ottawa; Hamilton at Toronto.
Sunday, Oct. 7 (afternoon game)—Ottawa at Montreal; Toronto at Hamilton.
Saturday, Oct. 13—Toronto at Ottawa.
Sunday, Oct. 14—Hamilton at Montreal.
Saturday, Oct. 20—Montreal at Toronto; Ottawa at Hamilton.
Saturday, Oct. 27—Hamilton at Ottawa.
Sunday, Oct. 28—Toronto at Montreal.
Saturday, Nov. 3—Ottawa at Toronto; Montreal at Hamilton.

Roaring Welcome Greets Flyers On Return Home

Barrie, May 12 — (CP) — A roaring welcome Friday greeted Barrie Flyers when this town of 14,000 turned out en masse to applaud the team that brought home its first Dominion hockey trophy.

Mayor Marjorie Hamilton, who proclaimed a public holiday for the occasion, headed the welcoming parade. For Coach Happy Emms, stormy petrel of the Ontario Hockey Association, it was fitting climax to a long season and a hard climb to national heights.

Flyers won the Memorial Cup, emblematic of junior hockey supremacy, Tuesday night at Winnipeg by knocking off Winnipeg Flyers 9-5 to win the best-of-seven series in four straight games.

A great roar went up at Allandale station as team captain Real Cherry held the Memorial Cup high. From there a long parade wound more than a mile to Barrie arena, where Mayor Hamilton had a kiss for every player.

The Flyers themselves were packed out in sweaters, pants, pucks with 10-gallon hats and bright neckerchiefs. Even Coach Emms had discarded his stetson for a sombrero.

Business halted while the parade continued. At the arena each player was given a travelling clock, a gift of the town. Defenceman Jimmy Morrison also was given a watch after each game, the team's most popular player by Flyers fans.

Flyers also were given trophies for winning the OHA and Eastern Canada titles, presented by OHA president Jack Roxburgh and George Dudley, secretary of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

St. Mike's Coach Not Satisfied With Refereeing

Toronto, May 12—(CP)—Canada's last hockey series of the season warmed up today with Johnny (Pesmaky) O'Flaherty, Toronto St. Michael's coach, unloading a blast at the refereeing in the Alexander Cup.

O'Flaherty, hipped at the officiating in the fifth game at Montreal Thursday, won by Valleyfield Braves 7-3, said last night that he has appealed to the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association for new officials for tonight's final contest here.

Said O'Flaherty:

"Those referees are terrible, absolutely incompetent. Thursday night's exhibition was simply a disgrace. We've taken the worst of the refereeing all season and I think it's ruining the game."

The referees, Hap Shouldice and Stan Pratt, both of Ottawa, had their hands full in the wild contest, separating fighting players and handing out the penalty box. Twice, in the first and third periods, the game was held up 15 minutes as spectators thronging onto the ice to join in the scraps.

The Flyers, trying to end the lagging best-of-seven series in six games, decided Wednesday night Valleyfield players' gate prizes would win the cup and the Canadian junior title. The Braves now lead St. Michael's seven points to five, with the final game to count 60 points.

O'Flaherty said the referees "took about 15 minutes to decide who they should penalize after the fight. It was awful."

Valleyfield players are scheduled to arrive at noon today. There's an 11:45 p.m. Saturday train. The game is hockey, but George Dudley, secretary of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, will be declared. In event of a tie, the four points will be split, which would give Valleyfield the title.

Paramount's 'Samson and Delilah' C. B. DeMille's Latest, Greatest

Cecil B. DeMille long has considered that a great motion picture could be made from the pages of the Bible. He has done it with the memorable "Ten Kings," "The Ten Commandments," and "The Sign of the Cross" and promises to dispel any remaining doubts with his latest Technicolor epic, Paramount's "Samson and Delilah," which opens today at the Belle Theatre.

A tremendous undertaking that took 14 years elapse between the time the original treatment was written and the final print completed, "Samson and Delilah" will go down in motion picture history as DeMille's greatest production, according to advance reports. That's high praise, indeed, for a man whose previous pictures not only have set box-office records but have won permanent place in filmdom's hall of fame.

Casting "Samson and Delilah" was a monumental problem in itself, and it is said more than a score of exhaustive tests before Victor Mature and Hedy Lamarr were chosen for the coveted title roles. The time was shorter, perhaps, but the other starring players were selected with the same meticulous care. They are George Sanders, as the suave, worldly Saran, Lord of the Philistines; Angela Lansbury, Delilah's beautiful and amoral sister, and Henry Wilcoxon as the stern military governor of Dan.

Appearing for the first time on the screen in Technicolor Miss Lamarr is more than satisfactory as the lovely moviegoer has a reasonable right to expect, most previews of which are fleetingly seen. Delilah probably is the most famous temptress in history, and nature and Hedy have seen to it that she looks the part. Enticingly clad in costumes that are both eye-opening and revealing, Miss Lamarr is said to give her most exciting performance in "Samson and Delilah."

The selection of Victor Mature to play Samson is an inspired bit of casting. From the standpoint of talent as well as physique, the rugged handsome star has a build-up made for the part. At this point the high spot of his career, that began with a sensational performance in the Broadway stage success "Lady in the Twilight," the role of Samson is certain to establish Mature as one of Hollywood's most sought after leading men.

As in all DeMille pictures, the supporting roles in "Samson and Delilah" are handled by veteran players who time and again have demonstrated their ability to maintain the high level of performance set by the stars. Included in the cast of thousands are Olive Deering, Fay Holden, Julia Faye, William Farnum, Wilfred Aather, Moroni Olsen, John Miljan, Fritz Leiber, Mike Mazurki, George Reeves and Russ Reiker.

The climax of "Samson and Delilah," of course, is the destruction of the Philistine Temple at challenge even in DeMille, the man whose cinematic exploits include the crossing of the Red Sea, the siege of Acre and the storming of Fort Pipp, the scene took eight days to film and is regarded as the most spectacular catalysm ever staged.

AT THE CAPITOL

Hit Musical Opens Monday

Hailed as the one in a lifetime, love-time musical romance, "Do You Love Me," 20th Century-Fox's brilliant Technicolor hit starring Maureen O'Hara, Dick Haymes and Harry James opens Monday at the Capitol Theatre.

The song - and - thrill - packed story of a girl who said "Yes" once too often presents Maureen O'Hara as a shy, bespectacled and conservative music school dean who comes to town in search of a guest conductor but becomes "titivated" instead. One thing leads to another when Harry James falls in love with her, and Dick Haymes takes the words-and music—right out of his trumpet. With the appearances of Reginald Gardiner as an ingenious Cupid and Richard Gaines as her staid but stubborn fiance, the fast-moving story develops into the screen's wackiest four-sided triangle.

Four new song hits including "I Didn't Mean A Word I Said," "Do You Love Me," "Moonlight Propaganda" and "As If Didn't Have Enough On My Mind" are introduced by Dick Haymes and Harry James and his Music Makers. The film was directed by Gregory Ratoff and produced by George Jessel.

"Do You Love Me" a re-release by popular demand is shown with the added adventure thriller "Bombers Moon" starring George Montgomery and Annabella.

Fights Break Out At Peace Rally

Vienna, May 12 (AP)—Scattered street fights broke out today in Vienna between socialists and young communists arriving for a three-day Whitsuntide peace rally.

The fights occurred as trains packed with communist boys and girls arrived from the western provinces.

The communists were met outside the station by socialist youths distributing anti-communist pamphlets.

The socialists were attacked by the older boys among the communists as each train pulled in.

Police arrested several communists who were later released. Several youths were slightly injured.

LIGHTNING DESTROYS FLAG

Bangkok, Thailand, May 13 — (Reuters) — Lightning has destroyed the only Soviet flag the Russians are entitled to fly in Bangkok.

It struck the 40-foot flagpole at the Soviet Legation, shattering the top 10 feet.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, May 13 (AP)—That master of the novel and pundit, Lionel Barrymore, has completed his memoirs. They reveal him to be as sentimental as any of us.

The reminiscences, under the title "We Barrymores," told to Cameron Shipp, the Sage of Glendale who also listened to Billie Burke's remembrance. The book is full of gruff, self-effacing anecdotes, as well as warm recollections of Lionel's fellow workers. This is how he discusses some of them:

John Barrymore—"My brother's real and earnest and life-long ambition was to be a painter. He even . . . persuaded Maurice (his father) to put money for lessons in the hands of the Art Students' League; but . . . trapping" Jack Barrymore in a classroom was like tethering a he-fawn in a cell. He broke loose in one day and escaped."

Greta Garbo—Her unpriestly lounges was so extreme that it amounted almost to a malady. She appeared and disappeared as silently as a wraith . . .

"She has real simplicity, the true simplicity of the genius her-self. She is so direct that her psychology is comparable to the terror of a gun-shy bird dog."

Margaret O'Brien—"I soon realized that Margaret could perform like no youngster I or any-body else had ever seen. When she takes over, you might as well imagine yourself a design on the wallpaper."

Spencer Tracy and Lew Ayres —Tracy is a master of the art of throwing lines away! The best lines of any author are barely audible, so casual is Spencer. The only other actor who comes anywhere near him in this department is Lew Ayres."

Ethel Barrymore — "In 1940 Ethel celebrated 53 years on theatre and screen by age and 70th birthday . . . On the wireless to what seemed like comic-strip dialogue she be-came a noble justice. My sister, after all, is the champion. She has licked the only unlickable person—time himself."

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

For Sunday, May 13

March 21 to April 20—(Aries)—Not encouraging for business or money deals unless they are inquisitive at this time. Weekday advises caution, moderation and, if spare time, restful recreation.

Hobby can benefit.

April 21 to May 20—(Taurus)—With steady, calm pace with your plans and don't strain or worry needlessly. Day favors mostly religious services, charity and wholesome socials, restful recreation and pleasantries.

May 21 to June 21—(Gemini)—Planetary influences today stress need for patience, moderation and thought of spiritual values. Start right at church, then enjoy leisure hours at pleasant but not too strenuous pastimes.

June 22 to July 23—(Cancer)—Good day for irritation or peeves. You can, should, spread cheerfulness and good will. Cancer natives are known for their entertaining talents; give of your cheer. Go to church.

July 24 to August 23—(Leo)—Your natural exuberance and love should be toned down to a restful tenure this Sunday. Necessary duties favored but try to keep that should wait till Monday. Nourish your soul with beauty.

August 22 to September 23—(Virgo)—Ideal for rest, reflection, family and friendly gatherings, enjoying a hobby, particularly outdoors if possible. Good reading, music and of course your church service in your schedule.

September 24 to October 23—(Libra)—"A little with contentment is great gain." Perfect sign for today, especially. Don't be nervous about anything but attend your soul's needs. Rest, relax within reason.

November 23 to December 22—(Sagittarius)—Head advice to the other typical natives. It's pertinent to your welfare, contentment now. Join family, honorable friends in semi-healthful, pleasant diversion from work.

December 23 to January 21—(Capricorn)—Mildly favorable for essential tasks, yes and urgent hard work, but if work is not on your schedule then do enjoy interests for which you don't have time during week. Rest is part of your schedule that do enjoy.

January 22 to February 20—(Aquarius)—Extra care stressed in traveling, making changes, in writings, handling electrical, any intricate appliances. But day can be restful, pleasant if you do God's bidding and are sensible.

February 21 to March 20—(Pisces)—Your natal planet, Neptune, only one in favorable aspect now, augurs well for your personal interests, advancing in your hobby; undertakings (that would not offend God). Attend church.

YOU BORN TODAY: Stability and loyalty are your keywords. You are innately dependable, practical, kindly. Have a strong temper but as a rule do not exercise it unless taunted or aroused by injustices. If true to your better self, you are a fine friend, usual, capable of great learning and doing things in an efficient and orderly manner. Can do wonders with soil, such as gardening, landscaping, forestry. Many noted scientists, physicians, surgeons, actors and orators born in Taurus. Develop your talents!

Birthdate: Maria Thyresa, Empress of Austria; the Arthur Sullivan, musical composer.

He Came to Kill

By Adeline McElfresh

At midnight he had not found Pete, had been raining since 10:30 and now, as Leeana paced worriedly up and down the wide, verandah, the steady drizzle accelerated into a bone-chilling pelting storm. Shivering in spite of her close-buttoned sports coat, Leeana thought of men from the sheriff's office still determinedly beating the brush all over the rugged Thorne estate.

What did they hope to find? Surely Peter with his innate love of comfort would not let himself be miserably cold and wet, surely he wouldn't take to the woods. Not voluntarily.

But what if—Leeana thought again of the note.

Peter was desperate. He must have been she reasoned or he would not have disappeared as he had.

They had found Jasper, or at least they knew he was in Thorne City. He had flagged a bus at the foot of the hill and, the girl at the bus station said, had gone across the street and into the theatre, the one where Lana Turner's new picture was being shown.

She pulled her coat closer against the cold that seemed to press damply about her and resumed her pacing up and down, past the lighted windows of the living room where Miss Aggie and Sondra sat on opposite sides of the fireplace, pointedly ignoring each other. Sondra was deep in a magazine, or appeared to be; Miss Agatha just sat there, looking into—nothingness.

Sondra had been loud in her defense of her absent husband, and angrily sincere. And convincing. She had flung accusation after accusation into Sheriff Clem Purdy's teeth and he had spit them back at her, badly mangled. But Sondra had won they had let Jasper enjoy his movie in precarious freedom and had gone on searching for Peter at Thorne Hill.

That had been another victory for Sondra.

Why not look for him here? she had demanded. Was there evidence that he had gone somewhere else?

There was not, Purdy had to admit. The cars were in the garage. Peters' clothes were all in his closet. Not even an overcoat was gone, or y raincoat. The whole thing was puzzling— and sinister.

"Nothing?" Leeana asked.

"Nothing." He echoed her despair. "I can't understand it, unless—Look, Miss Leeana. You've been with these people lately. You've had a chance to know [illegible] ou make of it?"

"Peter's dead."

The whimpering wind, moaning through the rain-swept trees and under the eaves of the big old house, caught the words and flung them out on the cold, accusing night. Leeana could feel the sheriff's shock, his disbelief.

"Why do you say that?"

Leeana looked at the sheriff. The faint, frightened light from the house behind her showed nothing. Only his voice was tired. She said, "I don't know. I—I shouldn't have said it but it—it just slipped out. I—didn't even think it, not really."

Purdy digested that in silence for a long moment, then:

"The note?"

"Old Peter write it!" Leeana countered.

"Well-l-l," the sheriff drawled, uncertainty sapping his suspicion.

Leeana said quickly, "it was written last night, perhaps by Peter. But it might have been left there by someone else."

"Peter's murderer?" the sheriff said quietly.

"And Miss Maggie's."

Again that silence that so narrowly missed being hostile.

Quickly she told him. Words spilled over each other, their individual meaning being supplemented by fresh-loosed terror.

That one thought kept going through her mind with maddening precision, dodging in and out among the things she told the sheriff. She didn't know Peter was dead. This might be another of his beastly cunning tricks. Peter was like that—clever. Leeana jerked away from the sheriff's solicitous grip.

"He's running away!" she cried "that's it! He said all those things to fool me. He knew I'd tell you —we've reached the point where we'll believe anything, all of us! We—"

"Now wait up," Purdy, one hand on the doorknob, interrupted her sharply. "You're too fast for me, but maybe you're right."

He headed for the telephone, leaving Leeana to close the door.

Then, as she stood there hearing Purdy bark orders to send out a general alarm for Peter Thorne, she was conscious again of the mental mosquito that had plagued her before. What was it, why should it nibble at her sureness, now, that Peter was the murderer? The old fear rippled up her spine and as the sheriff hung up and she took her eyes from his broad back, she saw Sondra, standing like a pale, silent ghost in the doorway.

"What—what is it?" she barely whispered.

She came forward slowly, moving like someone in a nightmare. Leeana started to her, and stopped. It was Purdy who explained.

"That," he half-gestured toward the telephone "was the state police. I asked them to send out an alarm for Peter—for murder. We—Miss Leeana thinks — Mrs. Thornell"

He sprang forward, but he was too late. Sondra had slumped to the floor in a dead faint.

Aided by a benevolent taxi driver and the fact that he was, after all, a Thorne, Jasper arrived home a few minutes after Sondra had been put to bed and left under the watchful —if accusing eye of Mrs. Carstairs.

"Pay the gennulman," Jasper said thickly, staggering through the doorway under the steadying assistance of the yonker-faced young man. "Be a good guy, pay 'im, I'm—" He looked at Leeana, eyes widening, seeing her, apparently for the first time. "Cousin Leeana look—Whash— what's the matter?"

Leeana told him being purposely blunt. It might sober him up to hear that Peter had fled, perhaps to escape arrest for murder.

"You mean good ole Pete—Oh no!" He began to laugh wildly. "Don't tell me my wife hitched her wagon to a murderer!"

Bitterness came into his maudlin glee and sobriety seemed a bit nearer. Leeana wondered, fleetingly, how he would feel about that outburst in the morning. If anyone reminded him of it. Now, though, he rocked back on his heels steadied himself with an effort—and stopped laughing.

She urged him toward the door but Leeana hung back. He bobbed his head at the taxi driver and said belligerently.

"Go on away. Tell 'im. Tell 'im you picked me up at the Red Ace 'n' not at that crummy Bijou."

Leeana saw alertness come into the sheriff's eyes, where it mingled with suspicion that had been slumbering— until now. Jasper was talking himself right out of an alibi, if—Realizing she was on him?

You know Peter was not with your wife because you saw him upstairs. And for that reason you know your wife may be lying, too. Right?"

For a long time Jasper didn't speak. Then he muttered hoarsely "you know it is," and walked away from them.

Leeana was afraid to look at the sheriff, afraid of the knowledge she would see in his face. So Jasper was upstairs too; May- be he had been listening at the door when Peter gave her the lavaliere. . . How else could he have known about it? The coppery taste of fear was on her tongue as she watched Jasper go up the stairs and disappear.

"It's closing," the sheriff said softly.

So the trap was closing at last. On whom? Leeana asked herself, would it be Jasper, or Peter, or someone else?

"Now I've put REGULAR SAVINGS in my budget

We've always been methodical about spending. We've stuck to a detailed budget. But, you know how it is these days. There are so many things you feel you want to spend your money on.

However, my wife and I thought we'd never get round to a methodical savings plan.

When the Mutual Life representative called, we found he understood our money problems better than anybody we've ever talked to.

He showed us that investing in a life insurance policy was a sure way to keep our savings on a regular basis. We took his advice and found it worked out."

"... and I'm mighty thankful for the protection it affords

Now regular Saving is in our budget to stay. The protection it gives is something I'm mighty thankful for, both for the children and myself."

Everybody NEEDS Life Insurance

Everybody can afford it

PRODUCES SYNTHETIC BLOOD

The amber fluid in the bottle held by Dr. Charles E. Dutcher, medical director of Lawrence, Mass., is PVP-Ringer's, a synthetic "blood extender," which has shown remarkable value in treatment of shock and burns. This water-like substance which, if made generally available may virtually do away with the need for costly blood banks, is being made in limited quantity at a Lawrence, Mass., hospital. Further research is being conducted with an eye to its use following an atom bomb blast. The new material, which is completely synthetic and requires no refrigeration, was developed by the Germans in World War II. — Central Press Canadian.

U.N. COMMITTEE VOTES EMBARGO ON RED CHINA

Shipments of War Goods to be Curtailed

United Nations, N.Y., May 14 (AP)—The United Nations sanctions committee today voted a world-wide ban on shipments of war goods to communist China. The vote was 11 to 0, with Egypt abstaining.

Urged on by the United States, the Additional Measures Committee is considering ways to consider punishment by red China for her intervention in Korea, meets at 10.30 a.m. E.D.T. to vote on the proposed ban. The committee is expected to recommend the embargo.

Countries voting for the proposed embargo today were the United States, Britain, France, Australia, Canada, Belgium, Brazil, the Philippines, Turkey, Mexico and Venezuela.

Egypt abstained because she has no trade with communist China and because her delegation is one of the few Asian and Arab group which has been attempting to work out a cease-fire with communist China.

Declined to Serve

Yugoslavia and Burma, named to the committee, declined to serve.

Sir Gladwin Jebb of Britain told the committee the United Kingdom has been applying restrictions on trade with communist China for some time. He said the committee should not recommends that other states do what they have been doing."

Following this, the vote must be debated by the political committee of the general assembly in plenary session. The Soviet bloc is expected to fight it in both forums in the last ditch. Nehru, leader of the neutralist group in the U.N., also is expected to oppose the embargo as endangering any chance of peace negotiations with Peking.

All signs point to eventual assembly acceptance, however.

Opposition Desperate

British and French opposition to the move, based on the fear that it might enlarge the area of conflict, evaporated last night. Both formed sources said Conservative protests in the British House of Commons and French complaints to red China plus adverse U. S. comments, helped change London's mind.

Britain announced last Thursday that she would not export further rubber shipments from Malaya to areas controlled by Peiping.

Pushing of punitive measures against the aggressor in Korea indicates the extreme pessimism with which the U.N. regards the possibility of a truce negotiated in Korea. The Additional Measures Committee, set up by the resolution branding red China as aggressor in Korea last Feb. 1, was charged with recommending the punishment until a U.N. Good Offices Committee has had every chance to try conciliation.

Members of the punishment group are Australia, Australia, British, Belgium, Brazil, Egypt, France, The Philippines, Turkey, Mexico, the United States and Venezuela. India and Burma were invited to the committee but have refused to serve.

Korean War Said Stalemate As Front Has Not Moved More Than 85 Miles Since December

Somewhere in Korea, May 14 (AP)—There has been a lot of talk about the Korean war becoming a stalemate.

As a matter of fact it has been a stalemate for the last 5 1-2 months.

Except for the evacuation of northeast Korea and some guerrilla fighting in the south, the main front has never moved more than 85 miles since the first week of December.

All the sound and fury of battle since hasn't changed the real military situation a bit.

The United Nations army is playing it cool, keeping out of the clinches, and cutting up its adversary when it can without trying too hard for a knockout.

Last November the allies were on the Yalu River, North Korea was on the run and the referee was up to the count of nine.

Then the China stepped in.

Since then the U.N. army has almost gone out of its way to avoid taking chances with the AP correspondent George Mac. Arthur reported the Chinese deployment and concentration below the Choyang River.

The bridgehead poses a flanking threat to Chunchon, key to rail and road networks, 45 miles northeast of Seoul.

Allied pilots hunting through the rain clouds reported redstreaming southward. Artillery men reported more than two divisions, roughly 15,000 men, were moving toward the Chunchon area.

The other main build-up was on the west central sector, north and northeast of Seoul.

An eighth army spokesman said the Chinese have been using this time they wanted. The consensus was that they would in about 10 days.

There were hints that the new communist drive will be backed by greater fire power—and possible chance.

A new airfield was discovered at Pyong, 25 miles northeast of Pyongyang, by a Marine reconnaissance pilot. B-29 superforts fore it up with 130 tons of bombs.

Lt.-Gen. Frank W. Partridge, U.S. Fifth Air Force commander, said the reds "would build up (air force) fairly rapidly. . . We are keeping a watchful eye on them."

SIX ARE DEAD, ONE CRITICALLY HURT IN CRASH

Car Struck Head-On By Passing Freight

Blenheim, Ont., May 14—(CP)—Condition of Neil Merritt, 19, was listed as "unchanged" by hospital authorities early today.

Merritt was taken to hospital Saturday night suffering from severe head and internal injuries. He was given blood transfusions and treatment for shock but little hope is held for his recovery.

He was one of seven persons in a car struck head-on by a freight train at a level crossing one and a half miles west of here. Dead are: William Alexander Merritt, 49, Northwood; Kenneth C. Crawford, 18, Chatham; William Edward Hughes, 20, Kent Bridge; Rosemary Therrian, 17, Merlin; Marjorie Graham, 15, Merlin, and Mary Ann Simcox, 20, Chatham.

They were killed when the car police said was driven by William Merritt passed two others halted at the crossing to be removed into the front of the locomotive. The impact welded the car to the engine. It had to be removed by chains anchored to the rails.

The party was on its way to a dance at Rondeau Park, about 16 miles away, when the accident occurred. Merritt died instantly in death, in the front seat of the car, and died pinned in the wheels of the train, the fifth on the way to the hospital and the sixth an hour after admittance.

British Parachute Brigade May Be Ordered to Iran

Stronger Stand on Oil Concession Trouble Possible

London, May 14 (AP) —Britain told its trouble-shooting 16th Independent Parachute Brigade group today to bring itself to an instant state of readiness.

Simultaneously, Foreign Secretary Herbert Morrison—interrupting his Whitsun holiday on the isle of Wight—kept in touch with the foreign office by phone on the latest developments in Iran.

There was speculation that the British might be ordered to Iran or that Britain is ready to make a stronger stand, if necessary, to hold its rich oil concession in Iran.

Not Under Sailing Orders

But this speculation was with out official confirmation. A war office spokesman stressed that the parachute brigade is not under sailing orders. He described the alert order to the brigade as routine war office business.

The unit now is assembling at Aldershot, 35 miles from London. It is known as the "Fire Brigade" because it is the first to go to emergencies.

Some sections of the British press have been demanding a stronger attitude toward Iran. The line taken by these publications is that Iran's oil is so important to Britain and the Atlantic powers that Britain should resist any attempt by Iranian authorities to take over the installations of the Anglo-Iranian Oil Company, as Iran's parliament has voted to do.

A few days ago the Economist, a weekly independent journal of opinion, said Morrison had drafted a note to Iran hinting that Britain will resist by force, if necessary.

The recall order cut short by 24 hours the training exercise that units of the parachute brigade have been taking in North Wales, Kent and Devon. Morrison on leave also are being concentrated at Aldershot.

The Air Ministry said the transport command which provides the Royal Air Force parachute troops is co-operating with the war office in planning for the brigade.

Brig. K. T. Darling commands the brigade. He won distinguished service with the Rhine Army in Germany about two years ago. It consists of the parachute regiment together with airborne units of Royal Engineers and Royal Signals.

WILL HOLD INQUEST

Sudbury, May 14—(CP)—A coroners jury decided today that the 30 lifts the deaths of two Creighton miners, killed last Tuesday night in a fall of rock, 6,500 feet underground.

Norman Clifton, 33, of Sudbury, and Arley Dwyer, 30, of suburban Minnow Lake, died instantly in the accident.

An inquest will be held into the deaths of Daniel Hamilton, 47, of Sudbury, killed Wednesday night at Frood Mine after being buried in a ton of fill. No date for the inquiry has been set.

'Will' Indicates Knudsen Intended Taking Own Life

Hull, Que., May 14—(CP)—A scrawled "will" found in the personal papers of Henry Knudsen has satisfied Hull police that the Port Edward, B.C., taxi operator who trailed his wife 2,500 miles clearly intended to take his own life and family.

Police announced last night that no inquest will be held into the murder-suicide shootings that brought death to the couple Friday in a night club hotel here.

Knudsen, 50, killed his wife with two shots from a newly-purchased rifle. He then shot himself through the mouth.

The bodies were found in a blood-spattered hotel bedroom late Friday night.

Letter For Daughters

Police Chief Robert said a letter left by Knudsen to his daughters, Yvonne and Jennie, did not contain a clue to the motive for the slayings.

Much of the letter police could not decipher as Knudsen, a Swedish-born, was not well versed in writing English.

Part of the letter which could be read said:

"Mom's car is fully paid for. I've got about $400. That's all money now. So is my house."

Police Chief Robert revealed these other facts:

Struggled Valuable

Mrs. Knudsen had struggled valiantly to avoid shooting at the hands of her husband.

She had come to Ottawa in company with Mrs. Grace Maloney and Robert Belanger, both 41-year-old construction workers and neighbors of Knudsen's in Port Edward.

They arranged with Mrs. Knudsen to drive them east where they were to take on new jobs.

POLICE SEARCH RUINS

Sorel, Que., May 14—(CP)—Police and firemen searched among the ruins of the ancient Quebec hotel for possible victims of a general alarm fire that completely destroyed the interior of the three-storey building early today.

The fire started in the basement and spread rapidly through the rooms. Only one guest in the hotel remained standing.

Most of the persons were in the hotel when the fire started. One man was injured when he jumped from the third storey.

'Sizeable Increases' Made By Soviet in Military Camps Near Korea Says Marshall

Washington, May 14 — (AP) — Defence Secretary George Marshall testified today Russia had made "sizeable increases" in its military garrisons near Korea since last December.

Marshall told senators that while the Russians always have maintained strong forces on their Siberian borders, there has been a recent stepped-up buildup.

He had mentioned this in testimony last week but his reference to December pin-pointed the time of the build-up as he had not done before.

Under questioning, Marshall also testified that Gen. Douglas MacArthur's plan of stepped - up air and sea fighting would not defeat communist China in Korea.

For the seventh day Marshall was before the Senate Armed Services and Foreign Relations committees which are inquiring into MacArthur's dismissal from his Far Eastern commands.

Chairman Tom Connally (Dem., Texas) of the foreign relations group, asked Marshall whether "our air power" could help to win a war against red China and . . . keep them from making an invasion of Korea.

"I do not think they could," Marshall replied.

MacArthur has testified that only a few more ground troops would be needed in Korea to win a victory there if American bombers were permitted to raid red China's bases in Manchuria, a naval blockade was clamped on China coast, and Chinese Nationalist troops were used against the communists.

More Optimistic

As the hearings went into the new week, senior members of the inquiry panel indicated they have picked up considerable optimism over the future in Korea.

Senator Ralph Flanders (Rep. Vt.) told reporters "there seemed to be something big in the wind" that will support Marshall's assertion the allies are moving toward success.

And Senator Estes Kefauver (Dem. Tenn.) said he has "the definite feeling" the top command has a plan "which makes the outcome look optimistic."

Senator Styles Bridges (Rep. N. H.) took up with Marshall the question of the Russian strength in the Korean area.

Senators have heard estimates that approximately 200,000 Russian troops are available within a range of 300 miles from the Korean border.

HUNT ARMED MANIAC

Paris, May 14 — (Reuters) — Police today hunted an armed maniac who escaped after killing five persons and wounding two others in Aflaurene, near Bin El Ouidane, Agence France-Presse reported from Rabat, Morocco. Police said the man, a laborer, first killed his mistress' soldier husband, then shot a friend beside and fired at passing vehicles.

Communist Troops Expand Bridgehead Across Choyang R.

Tokyo, May 14 (AP) —Chinese communist troops today expanded a threatening bridgehead across the Choyang River on the central Korean front despite the pounding of American planes.

These forces northeast of Chunchon may spearhead a second spring offensive by the 500,000-man red army, expected in about 10 days.

Elsewhere along the 100-mile front, United Nations patrols probed the enemy with little opposition. However, two sharp clashes broke out on the western front.

One American task force ran into a Chinese ambush and pulled back after a battle. Another crowded prolonged fight began when an armored column of infantry ambushed a Chinese patrol.

For the first time in the war, U.N. forces are getting a small but steady trickle of Chinese defectors. Air Commodore Dermot Randolph reported from this front.

Bad weather screened their movements Monday.

Pilot Makes Forced Landing Near Brighton

Trenton — (Special) — A pilot from a Toronto RCAF station successfully brought his aircraft down in a farmer's field five-and-a-half miles north of Brighton this morning after his engine failed him.

Flying Officer D. A. G. Smiley was a Harvard aircraft down near Bailey Lake with engine damage, at 9:35 a. m. He was not injured. Smiley was on a routine training flight, from Downsview RCAF Station to St. Hubert, P. Q., when his engine conked out.

RCAF officials at Trenton said this morning that they had dispatched an ambulance to the scene, but found that Smiley did not need medical treatment. Necessary arrangements to have the plane removed have been made by the RCAF.

Dept. Denies Sugar Being Stockpiled

Ottawa, May 14 (CP) — The Trade Department reported today that the recent Canadian sugar price rise was the result of speculation that Canada is going to stockpile sugar. The department flatly denied it.

"Canada is buying no more sugar from the world than the amount to meet current needs," a spokesman said. "We are not stockpiling sugar."

What is the real deal amounts to he added, is that Canada will be buying that much less from her traditional Commonwealth suppliers.

Stalled Car Leads To Arrest Of Holdup Suspects

Guelph, May 14 (CP) —Three men, arrested Sunday night when their car stalled a few blocks from the police station, are being questioned in connection with an unsuccessful bank holdup at Clarkson's early Saturday and a $4,500 safe robbery in Hamilton Sunday.

Police identified the three as Marcel Lefebvre, 27, Gerard Lavesque, 26, and Donat Eslembre, 31, all of Montreal. They were remanded one week in a brief court appearance today.

Police said they found an unopened safe in the trunk of the car and that the men were carrying $4,500 in cash.

An office safe was taken from the Hamilton office of the Canada Bread Company Ltd., after men wearing masks. Early Saturday there the safe-wearing men failed to crack the safe at the Bank of Commerce branch at Clarkson, 15 miles northeast of Oshawa.

Another Volcanic Eruption Feared

Port Moresby, New Guinea, May 14—(Reuters)—An island crater in the Solomons, 500 miles from Mount Lamington, scene of the disastrous volcanic eruption of modern times, stirred ominously today.

Officials warned that there were mounting signs that an explosion may be imminent in the long-silent crater of Bougainville Island.

Lamington, 500 miles away in New Guinea, erupted in January, spraying molten rock "thousands of feet in the air and killing 4,000 people.

Bagpipes Skirl Farewell to Men Of Middlesex Regt.

Somewhere in Korea, May 14 — (AP) — Bagpipes skirled a farewell to men of the British Middlesex Regiment when they marched from Pusan May 29, bound for Hong Kong after 8½ months in Korea.

They have been relieved by the 1st Battalion of the King's Own Yorkshire Light Infantry.

Lt.-Gen. Sir Horace Robertson, administrative commander of the Commonwealth Division in Korea, and Korea, told them before they sailed:

"You have given a great account of yourselves.

"You were hastily grabbed from Hong Kong when the going was rough and you came here with almost no notice. But you came through in spite of all difficulties with great credit to your regiment and to the British Commonwealth."

Many Successful People Unhappy Type Says Counsellor for Jobs

New York, May 14—(AP)—Are you unhappy? Restless?

Then bum up—it could be an advantage, helping you to be a success in your job, says Jack Klein, an authority on job counselling.

People have inborn tendencies to be happy or unhappy, he believes. Many successful people are the unhappy type. They become happy by finding jobs that suit both their talents, drives and ambitions. Then they must have a capacity for work.

Klein is head of the Klein Institute which he founded in 1939. It's one of the organizations being called upon increasingly more by industry, business and government for advice in fitting people into the right jobs.

Out of his experience, particularly in psychological testing, Klein offers some advice on how to succeed in your job.

A pleasant family life is important, for "you never hire a man, you hire a family." Quarrels and bickering and incompatibility can drain a man's energies from his job and will very likely be his undoing.

Among other psychological rules for getting ahead in your job:

"Be smart by not sparouting big ideas by talking too much and showing off their knowledge.

"Never betray a confidence.

"Listen to the other fellow when he's talking. Don't interrupt, and don't supply the words

Red Mongol Cavalry Appear Over-Rated as Korean War Menace

Tokyo, May 14, (AP)—Wiry Mongolian horsemen have been getting quite a publicity buildup. But these descendants of Genghis Khan have yet to prove themselves in the Korean war or anywhere else against modern weapons.

Instead the Japanese captured numerous bewildered Russian infantrymen. They were young conscripts who said they thought they were being sent to a Labor Camp and ended up on the front.

The Japanese have made a great Khan's exploits and the opposition of his descendants, had trained their own cavalry.

The Japanese intended to ride across the Gobi desert to strike sabre battle with the Mongols. Then they rode straight into Russian machine-guns that cut them to pieces.

Now the Japanese tried out their own Mongolians as infantrymen, mixing them with other racial groups in a so-called Manchukuan division. The outfit collapsed, permitting Soviet tanks to surround and destroy a Japanese division.

In the end the Japanese did most of the fighting themselves.

of the war as a struggle solely by the Outer Mongolians to establish a buffer-state-and-a-half border against Japanese-occupied Manchuria.

Instead the Japanese found many Mongols.

Forecast Weather

Toronto, May 14 (CP)—Synopsis: A disturbance extending from the southern prairie provinces to Ontario Tuesday is drifting slowly eastward. It has already spread cloud and rain over the northwestern White River region, but will not seriously affect central or southern Ontario today or Tuesday. In advance of the system, strong southerly winds are bringing a warm spell to the province.

Today's many alerts will persist in the central and southern sections through Tuesday, driving the temperature to 15 degrees higher than on Sunday, when the temperatures neared the 60 mark throughout the province.

Youth Confesses Killing Woman, 81

Hamilton, N. Y., May 14 (AP)— The bludgeoned body of Mrs. Jennie R. Neff, an 81-year-old widow, was found in her modest farm house here after Allied-intel and state police later arrested a 16-year-old youth as her slayer.

State police Inspector John J. Lawson said the woman was killed in her mother's modest farm home last Thursday by six blows to the head and face. He said he and his men had been working on the case "day and night" since the murder.

Lawson said that Arthur Ass Hill, 16, of Richland, made a statement admitting the slaying

Rev. H. O. Eastman, Victoria Avenue Baptist Church, Dies

Rev. Harold Oliver Eastman, pastor of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church since July 1941, died in the Belleville General Hospital late Sunday after an illness of three weeks. He has been in failing health for some time.

Mr. Eastman was born at Arcona in Lambton County, 59 years ago, being the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Nile Chute Eastman. He was educated at the public and high schools in Arcona and attended Normal School at London. For some years he taught school and then entered McMaster University to study for ministry. After being ordained he had a pastorate at Burke's Falls for six years, Collingwood for 14 years and came to Belleville in 1941 and at the end of this time he would have completed 30 years in the Baptist ministry. Since coming to this city he had won a high place in the affections of the congregation which he had served and had also made many friends in other congregations. He was a man of keen intellect and personal charm and his death will be keenly felt among a wide circle of friends. He took an active interest in the Ministerial Association and at one time served as president.

Surviving are his wife, the former Flossie Mae Landon, one son, Rev. Nile Eastman of Galt, one sister, Mrs. Edward Hayton, of Fort Erie, and one brother, Rev. C. Eastman, of Arthur.

Resting at the Thomas C. Thompson Funeral Home, the funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this edition.

Bell Committed For Trial On Perjury Charge

Charged with perjury as result of evidence given at a careless driving trial heard April 19th, Attington Bell, Church Street, was committed for trial by Magistrate J. L. Lloyd of Northbrook at a preliminary hearing held Saturday. Bail was renewed at $3,000.

Thomas Jeffrey, Patterson St., who is also charged with perjury as result of evidence given at the careless driving trial, has elected for trial by judge and jury and the date for the preliminary hearing was set for May 28th.

Early in April Bell and Jeffrey were driving on No. 2 highway when they came upon their cars turned over on the highway and went into the ditch. Provincial police investigated Bell stated he was the driver of the car and he was subsequently charged with careless driving.

Charges Laid

At the hearing, however, Jeffrey testified that he had been the driver and this was corroborated by Bell. The charge against Bell was dismissed and perjury charges were laid by the Crown.

Saturday at the preliminary hearing of the charge against Bell, the Crown called seven witnesses. They included Mrs. R. Cooper, justice of the peace; O.P.P. Arthur Watson; Roger White, court stenographer; Mrs. Betty Halbert, Bayside, a witness of the accident in which Bell and Jeffrey were involved; Mrs. A. Halbert; F/O B. R. Ketcheson and O.P.P. McBride.

Two other witnesses were O.P.P. Norman Canning, and B. Westover, were called by defence counsel Hollis Walker.

Mr. Halbert and F/O. Ketcheson said they were in the scene of the accident when the car went into the ditch. Bell had been sitting behind the wheel of the car, they said. They had seen no activity in the car as they came towards it.

Constable McBride quoted Bell as having told him that he suffered a heart attack as result of striking the steering wheel.

Saw No Movement

Mr. Westover, who lives almost directly opposite where the accident occurred, said he was just going out his door when the accident occurred. He had walked directly toward the car and there had been no movement in the vehicle until after the arrival. Bell had been sitting behind the wheel.

Under cross examination by Hollis Walker, K.C. Donnan Mr. Westover said the car had been in his vision, at the time and there had been no movement or change or drivers in the car, he said.

Bell and Jeffrey were driving charge against Bell was heard, Jeffrey said that the accident had suggested to Bell that he (Bell) say he was the driver. Jeffrey said he had suggested this because he (Jeffrey) had no renewed his driver's license.

HOT DOG FOILED TROUT

Dollar Days Being Sponsored By Merchants

Dollar Days are here again!

Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week local merchants are staging their annual Dollar Days sales event when special merchandise from the past three months will be offered during the three day sales event.

Dollar Days is sponsored by the Retail Merchants Division of the local Chamber of Commerce of which Jim Walker is president. The event has now developed into an annual feature.

The Rawson Bus Lines are entering into the spirit of the occasion and as a special feature are offering free transportation downtown during off-peak hours on Thursday and Friday, the first two days of the sale.

SENATOR IMPROVING

Tulsa, Okla., May 14 — (AP)— Senator Eugene Millikin, (Rep., Colo.) will leave hospital here today and return to Washington, hospital authorities announced. Millikin collapsed Friday night while addressing a banquet. A physician said Millikin has "suffered nothing more than a case of over-exertion."

War Friendship Brings Comrades Together Again

Bonds of friendship forged by service in the Second World War are not lightly broken.

Take the case of Corporal A. B. Chariebois of Penetanguishene, Ont. The corporal served overseas in the last war with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment. He was attached to "C" company commanded by Major Joseph Johnson, of this city. The two went through the war together.

Following the war Chariebois joined the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps as a cook.

A few days ago he heard the news that his former company commander had again "gone active" with the Hasty Ps. The ex-corporal sent his discharge from the permanent force and drove his car from Penetanguishene to Belleville where he "signed up" to be with his former company commander.

En route the Chariebois jalopy gave up the ghost, but the corporal continued the journey. Now he's in the army again.

Twenty-eight applicants for enlistment were signed at the Bridge Street Armories over the weekend, of the quotas set sent to Kingston today.

According to Lieut. Angus Duffy, the average of civilians joining the force is gradually increasing, although little inclination is shown to join the reserve services.

The total of applications to date is 108, the best record of any regiment outside the metropolitan areas.

RECORDS STOLEN

Boston, May 14 — (AP) — The Dorchester district draft board office was broken into yesterday and records of 30 men stolen. Papers for 500 others were buried, Col. Chester A. Purdish said it was "obviously an attempt on the part of person or persons trying to escape the draft." But he said a duplicate list was untouched.

Says High-Protein Diet Would Cut Tooth Decay

Toronto, May 14 — (CP) — A high-protein diet would eliminate tooth decay, Dr. M. A. Cox of the University of Toronto told the Canadian Society of Dentistry for Children Saturday. He said if Canadians doubled the amount of meat, dairy products and vegetables they ate they could cut down tooth troubles. An average Canadian diet is 55 per cent carbohydrate and 15 per cent protein, Dr. Cox said.

Jeep Turns Over, T. Wrightmeyer Fractures Leg

Losing control of their "jeep" panel truck and turning over in the ditch near Brighton, Mr. Thomas Wrightmeyer of Bonisteel, West, and Mrs. Mac Hawley, suffered injury Saturday night.

Mr. Wrightmeyer is in Belleville General Hospital with a compound fracture of the left leg and head lacerations. Mrs. Hawley went through the windshield. Mr. Hawley suffered a bruised shoulder.

It was reported that no other vehicle was involved in the accident. Mr. Wrightmeyer was driving when the accident occurred.

Minister Willed Share of Paper

Napanee, May 14 — Rev. Dr. Alexander James Wilson, editor of the United Church Observer, has become part owner of the Napanee Beaver, a weekly newspaper, through the will of the late Mrs. S. A. Templeton.

The estate, valued at $88,103, granted the newspaper - founded by the husband of the late Mrs. Templeton to Dr. Wilson and three daughters of the deceased, Mrs. Winifred Church Vanneck, Mrs. Margaret Augusta McIntosh and Mrs. Jeanette Adeline Carlisle, all of Toronto.

Dr. Wilson, one-time minister of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, was also associated with the publication of the Napanee Beaver.

FORM COMMITTEE

St. Thomas, May 14—(CP) — The Elgin Hog Producers' Association has set up a committee to discuss the selling of shares in the packing house co-operative being established at Hamilton to hog raisers in the Elgin district. James Goldman of Southwold Station heads the committee.

Good Progress Being Made With Seeding

Despite the heavy April rains good progress is being made with the spring seeding on higher land in the Belleville district, according to the weekly crop report of the Ontario Agricultural Department.

Through the district canning peas have been largely planted with the occasional farmer having early land reporting peas already up. Although the season is late it is felt there is still good prospects for a normal crop.

Orchard owners in Northumberland county have commenced spraying their orchards and fruit conditions are excellent.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, May 14 (CP) —Prices weakened slightly as the session progressed on the stock market today.

Industrials slipped a little with only a handful of issues showing any movement. Papers, utilities, agriculturals, metals and refining oils posted a majority of losses. Steels, constructions, foods, banks refining oils and manufacturing companies were mixed. Price changes were mostly in small fractions.

Base metals dipped fractions. Steep Rock, Sherritt Gordon, Quemont, Falconbridge, Noranda and Golden Manitou were lower.

Western oils tended on the downside as several leaders dropped pennies.

McIntyre stood out with a $2 loss in the otherwise slightly lower senior gold section. Secondary golds showed little change or trading.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, May 14 (CP)—Trading was strong on choice weights steers and about steady on other grades at the Ontario stockyards today. Receipts: Cattle, 4,100; calves, 350; hogs, 550; sheep and lambs, 60. The holdover was estimated at 200 cattle.

Good to choice weighty steers brought $34-$35 and good light steers $33-$34. Good heifers were $31.50-$32. Medium to good cows sold for $27-$28.50 and good bulls for $29.50-$31. Fed yearlings traded from $31-$34 depending upon quality. Medium to good stockers sold at $32-$33.50.

Calves were steady at $37-$38 for choice vealers and $25-$35 for common to medium.

Hog prices were not established; good sheep were $19-$22.

N.J. Town Says 'Thanks' to Vet Blinded in War

Lakewood, N. J., May 14 (AP) — Townspeople have said "thanks" to Ray Marine by giving him a $23,000 home.

The 25-year-old former marine, who was blinded by Japanese gunfire on Iwo Jima, accepted the key to the six-room, white frame house yesterday.

His fiance, Miss Mary Jane Shafto, at his side, Marine turned to the crowd and said simply:

"When you are asked why we are fighting today, here is your answer."

30,000 Catholic Workers Hear Pope Say Mass

Vatican City, May 14—(Reuters)—The Pope celebrated mass Sunday in St. Peter's Basilica for about 30,000 Roman Catholic workers of 10 countries and called on them to cling to the three principles of Catholic social doctrine—truth, justice and Christian love.

The special mass commemorated the 60th anniversary of the papal encyclical "Rerum Novarum" which dealt with working-class conditions. It was published by Pope Leo XIII May 15, 1891.

"Here on the tomb of Saint Peter you are expressing the solemn promise to let yourselves be guided by these three fundamental values and to strive towards the ends which the Pope indicates for your good," the Pope said.

He asked: "Are you ready to make this promise?"

A whispering "yes" filled the Basilica, and the Pope continued:

"To work united as you are in your Catholic faith for the Holy ideals and for your companions is your second solemn promise. Are you ready to do that?"

The workers — from Canada, Italy, France, Belgium, Holland, Spain, West Germany, Colombia, Ireland and Austria—gave assent.

Belleville Wins Over Batawa In Soccer Match

Belleville took the points in their Eastern Ontario Soccer League game against Batawa at the Fair Grounds on Saturday, defeating the Shoemen by a 3-2 score in a closely-contested match.

The first half went scoreless with both teams striving hard for the opening counter. Play surged from end to end but both defences put up strong efforts to hold the opposition out.

Gemmel drew first scoring blood for Belleville five minutes after play resumed in the second half. Ten minutes later Hawrylin tied the score. The city team again forged in the lead a few minutes later when Murphy scored with a fine drive from well outside the penalty area. Gemmel got his second goal ten minutes from full time from the penalty spot following an infraction of the rules by a Batawa player.

The city team showed a marked improvement over its former appearance.

The teams:

Belleville: Baker, F. Jones, Longhurst, Arbuckle, Lane, Salter, Cox, Leech, Gemmel, Carter, Scott, Rob, Barclay, Murphy, Williamson.

Batawa: Peracka, Planowski, Mueller, Abraham, Zemla, Hrywnak, Kravacek, Flamm, Hawrylin Hlecozyn, Schutz; subs, Mitts, Przebyzersky.

Referee: Jack Jones.

OLD FRAME BARN ON CANNIFTON ROAD DESTROYED BY FIRE

An old frame barn used as storage on the property tenanted by J. Minett, 87 Cannifton Road, was burned Sunday evening.

Sparks, either from a house or passing train are thought to have been responsible for the blaze which completely destroyed the frame structure despite efforts of firemen who were called to the scene. The barn was used as storage and contained tanks for fuel oil for use in the Minett home.

SCHOOLS AFFECTED

Buffalo, N. Y., May 14 — (AP) — A water shortage in several Buffalo suburbs gave about 3,500 pupils a holiday today when their schools were unable to open. About 1,000 homes in this area have been affected by lack of water pressure since a main gave at the plant of the Western New York Water Company broke Friday night.

TRENTON

District Chambers Meet at Trenton

Trenton (Special)—Ezra Smith, manager-secretary of the Trenton Chamber of Commerce, announced today that a conference for the Central Ontario Chambers of Commerce will be held in Trenton on Wednesday, May 16, with representatives from 20 to 30 chambers in the district expected to be on hand.

The delegates will be greeted by Mayor Kenneth Couch at a dinner at the Queensway Hotel in the evening. The guest speaker will be D. A. MacDonald, K.C., of Alexandria.

In the afternoon delegates will register at the Trenton Country Club. C. A. Pollock, president of the Ontario Chamber of Commerce, will deliver a message at the afternoon session. Title of his speech is "The Ontario Chamber of Commerce Movement."

Freeman Burrows of Belleville and Jim Fraser of Peterborough have been selected as chairmen for the question box session, when subjects under discussion will include tourist promotion, de-centralization of industry, co-operation with farmers, federal postal service and provincial legislation.

Three Escape Injury

Trenton (Special)—Two Trenton men and a resident of Brighton district escaped without injury on Saturday night when an old model car in which they were riding crashed into a hydro pole at the Front and Redoski Streets intersection. The car literally fell to pieces as the machine struck the pole and bounced off.

The car, heading south from north in Trenton, carried Roy Deschane and his father, Norman Deschane of Marmora Street, Trenton, and Robert Carr, of R.R. 6, Brighton. The vehicle was registered in the Brighton man's name.

Build New Streets

Trenton (Special)—The Blyth Construction Company of Toronto moved heavy equipment into Middleton Park last week commencing a road building and grading job that is expected to last eight weeks. The Toronto firm has the contract to build the streets in the new part of the park.

To supply the crushed rock for the big job, the Toronto company set up a 65-ton crusher at Coleman's pit within the boundaries of Trenton. Operation of the crushing plant can turn out two yards of gravel every minute.

Agricultural Branch Set Up in Huntingdon

Organization of Huntingdon township branch of the Hastings County Federation of Agriculture was completed at a meeting held in Ivanhoe.

Cecil Geen was named president; Russell Sills vice-president and Ross Ketcheson, secretary-treasurer. Directors are Mrs. Don Holbert, Mrs. Barton Haggerty and Messrs. John Wallace and Angus Mumby.

During the business session, plans were completed for calf-hood vaccination in the township. An open meeting will be called in the near future to discuss other matters of importance.

Ronald Longwell, president of the county federation, acted as chairman for the meeting. Speakers were Clarence Milligan, Napanee, vice-president of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture; Roscoe Robson, M.A., Hastings East and A. O. Dalrymple, county agricultural representative.

THE SENATE NEEDS REFORM

There have been many comments on what should be done with Canada's Senate. A few rash voices have called for the abolition of the higher House; demands have been made that the powers of the Senators be sharply curbed. Objections to the age of some of the men in the ranks have been heard.

By far the most sensible suggestion has come from within the ranks. Senator Leon Gouin, of Montreal, hearing the critics, agrees that the present system is not quite right, but also provides a solution. At present, of the 102 seats in the upper House are occupied by appointees, through political patronage. Those who hold the seats in scorn have long said that it is the graveyard for politicians who have been thrown out, in the Commons, and who are no longer fully active. The Progressive Conservatives have ten seats of the 102, and the other seven positions are vacant. There is every reason to suppose that the vacancies will be filled by Liberal supporters.

The rest of the political parties are not represented. The C.C.F. has no representatives; the Social Credit party has but one voice; the Labor Progressives, happily, are in the cold; and various other splinter groups are not considered. The last two categories are of little concern, because they do not represent enough of the population to merit consideration in the Senate. But the C.C.F. and Social Credit do have representation for definite blocks of electors in the nation. For that reason, they should be considered in Senate appointments.

Senator Gouin maintains that the present system of appointment is degrading. Ottawa's government is owed full power over who shall sit in the Senate, is directly within reason. And it is, to a point. That point has long been passed in the Senate of today, as witnessed by the predominance of Liberals in the House. It would make no difference if the government in power was Conservative, and the Senate were overloaded with men sympathetic to Conservative ways of thinking. Either way, the situation is not healthy, because there is no opposition within the Senate.

Mr. Gouin is a Liberal, and he has seen that the present situation is not good for either the country or the government. He claims, and rightly, that the situation needs dangerous tampering. Ottawa's government is a two-party effort, should not be allowed to happen here.

Senate reform is needed, but it does not have to be static. A simple application of good sense, to give adequate representation to all, will remedy the situation.

NO TRADE IS WORTH IT

One week ago today, Sir Hartley Shawcross, president of the United Kingdom Board of Trade, told the House of Commons that Britain will buy from China goods of importance of many other goods which might directly assist China's military operations are totally prohibited." By Thursday, the two protests were heard around the world, Britain had decided to purchase rubber to China.

On Monday, Sir Hartley had promised that all the goods being sent to China had been "absorbed in her civilian economy," and that it was "nonsense to suppose that they have been a factor of any significance in the Korean campaign." By Thursday, the same question was put by opposition in the Commons, Harold Wilson's successor was forced to admit that Chinese rubber imports had been abnormally high during the first three months of 1951, and that 3,000 tons had been sent. She had also imported enough rubber during those three months to satisfy her civilian needs for a full year.

Sir Hartley still claimed that trade with China, apart from rubber, still was having no significant effect on the military potential of China in Korea. Prohibition of trade prevented the exporting of military equipment, aircraft, motor vehicles of special types, copper, zinc, and industrial goods, including machine tools.

Yet, so far this year, the $700,000 worth of tubes, pipes, fittings, and other materials left for China. Since then, is where the story begins to get mixed up. Despite the ban on copper and zinc and their alloys, copper and copper tubes and strip were shipped.

The second leak in the system is through Hong Kong, where goods are sent to legitimate sources and then smuggled into China. The Board of Trade has denied that shipments of rubber have been increased, but cannot deny that some of the goods are definitely finding their way into communist hands after they are put into Hong Kong.

Britain is caught. She badly needs the trade she can carry on with China, and yet she cannot afford to alienate the rest of the world by shipping there. Worse, she cannot endanger her own safety and the safety of every man in United Nations forces in Korea by providing the communists with materials. No trade is worth the disruption already precarious international relations. Nor is all the trade of the world worth the life of one fighting man in Korea's free forces.

TWO TOASTS

MOTHER TO DAUGHTER	DAUGHTER TO MOTHER
As my mother prayed for me,	As you taught me how to pray
So for you I learned to pray	When you held me on your knee,
For God's blessings day by day.	So I ask from day to day
May you touch with grace the years,	To deserve your love for me.
Bravely bear what hurts you must,	For your never ending care;
And should come the time for tears,	For the patience you have shown
Never cease in God to	Every burden I have known,
trust.	Thank you, mother, now I say,
Now you be as proud as I	But, there's something more. I have been	pray
Of the woman you will be.	Should a daughter come to me,
	That my love like yours will be.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

May 14th., 1931.

Summer caps are to be obtained for the members of the Bay of Quinte Rowing Club.

The city council has renewed the contract with Robert Orr for the collection of garbage for one year from May 15th, at the same price, viz., $4,500.

Mr. G. G. Quirk of Montreal spent the weekend in the city.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Frost spent the weekend in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Cole spent the weekend in Oshawa.

Mrs. Roy Rickard of Oakwood spent the weekend here with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Clarke, Foster Avenue.

Mr. J. Wiley of Toronto spent the weekend here with friends.

Mr. and Mrs. E. V. Hiser have returned home after a trip to Bermuda.

30 YEARS AGO

May 14th., 1921.

Last evening about 5.30 o'clock the big American flying boat, Santa Maria, arrived here after circling over the southern part of the city landed on the bay near the Government dock, where it anchored for the night and left early this morning for Toronto and Detroit. Nine persons constituted the passenger list with Capt. Tibbs as pilot. It is planned to use the Santa Maria for regular commercial and passenger service on the great lakes.

Capt. and Mrs. Hunter, Victoria Avenue, have arrived from Montreal where they spent the winter.

In connection with the Belleville Athletic Association the following committee has been appointed to arrange for sports during the summer: William (King) Rogers, J. C. Wells, Wm. Ponton, Robert Brown, C. A. Keeber, J. O. Herity and Capt. H. Smith.

GAMBLING

The news in recent months has revealed in startling fashion how widespread gambling is all over the country. The reports by the committee of senators investigating crime have shown beyond question that the professional gamblers are highly organized and that they taken many millions of dollars from the public every year. Simultaneously, the recent sensational cases in New York involving bribery of college basketball players have demonstrated concretely how gambling flourishes.

One might suppose that intelligent people would be immune to the lure of gambling. Common sense tells us that we cannot get something for nothing. Gamblers are made.

They want amounts of money which the professionals make from the public every year should be a warning to the would-be beginner. And the thoroughly established connection between gamblers and organized crime ought to make any responsible citizen unwilling to gamble.

Sincere Christians have additional reasons not to gamble. The basic Christian spirit is that of giving, not getting. Jesus' message is not one of self-enrichment or of getting something for nothing, but a message of sacrifice and unselfishness. "It is more blessed to give than to receive." "What shall it profit a man, if he gain the whole world, and lose his own soul."

This is not the stuff of which gamblers are made.

Many Observers Agree With Dewey On Full Embargo

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

Governor Thomas E. Dewey of New York is urging a complete fully all free countries against communist China.

The governor says he does not mean the embargo list of rubber or steel or military equipment but "a total embargo against shipment of any goods or any trading whatsoever with red China." Many observers will agree with that viewpoint, although admitting the difficulties of getting concerted action for such a move.

The United States already has before the United Nations a proposal for a world-wide embargo against shipping arms, ammunition to the United States, China and North Korea. And there are strong feelings that Britain and France will support this proposition.

However, at this juncture there would be small hope of obtaining the passage of restriction on every front. Russia would veto that, even with an embargo on Russia herself. Then the United Nations of trade in other lines all of which in one way or another strengthen the war potential of our enemies.

Amazing Exhibition

This amazing exhibition of divided attitude towards an enemy reminds me of the situation that I encountered a generation ago in India, up by the famous Khyber Pass.

There were two savage tribes which were always having fights with each other. One of these tribes managed to get hold of an automatic machine gun, a weapon which threw a non-explosive ball. So the next time the tribe went into action against the enemy, the cannon was trotted out.

Naturally the phenomenon discomfited the enemy, and finally they sent over a flag of truce with this message:

"It isn't fair for you to use a cannon when we don't have one. If you don't cease firing the cannon, we will call off the battle and we'll both go home and rest."

So the side possessing the cannon declined to do so.

In not dissimilar fashion the allies continue to pour into enemy countries foodstuffs and goods which indirectly, but certainly, give military aid and comfort.

Of course the imposition of an all-out embargo against enemy states is a matter which must be viewed in view of the diversity of interests among the many U. N. countries concerned. Necessity, fear and cupidity all are involved.

However, an all-out embargo by the major democracies would be a powerful weapon in the conflict. They are the ones with the greatest resources.

Fearing for Life, Iranian Premier Seeks Sanctuary

Tehran Iran May 14 — (AP)— Fearing for his life, Premier F. Mohammed Mossedagh moved last night into the sanctuary of the parliament building. He says he will remain there until his "dream" — nationalization of Iran's huge oil industry — is completed.

Mossedagh fainted and fell from the rostrum yesterday after telling the Majlis (Lower House of Parliament) of threats on his life by the fanatic secret Moslem Sect of Fedayan Islam, whose assassination tactics have made it a power in Iranian politics. Carried to the parliament building, he recovered a few minutes later.

The jittery, elderly premier was laughed at during his talk by Mossedagh's deputies, many of whom felt he used the emotional spectacle of him to pressure them into quick action.

However, the Majlis speedily acceded to Mossadegh's demand that it elect five members to work jointly with a Senate five — man group to draft a new petroleum and Anglo-Iranian Oil Company when it is taken over from British control.

All five board members named by the Majlis are known supporters of Mossadegh — making it appear there will be little compromise in the future.

Nationalization of the British-owned oil company was finally approved by parliament. Starting with the assassination of Premier Abdel Razmara, which was ordered for the take-over was marked by killings, strikes in the oil - fields and violence by Iranian nationalists.

After yesterday's vote Mossadegh ordered servants to take his bedding to a committee room. He has lived there since.

In addition to the threats from Fedayan Islam, which was responsible for Premier Razmara's assassination, the premier said he was menaced by small leftist groups demanding release of their followers from prison. A government spokesman said later that Mossadegh had accused Anglo - Iranian Oil Company of plotting the death threats against him.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

The finest garden on our street gets all the potato peelings from the house, all the carrot parings, butts of asparagus, vegetable tops, celery leaves, and when the lady of the house carrying out these parings sees that every other time of year the ground is not frozen, She buries them in holes in the back yard and they are her favorite rose bushes or perennials.

Organic matter; she calls it, and says that what the city garden needs more than anything else is real fertilizers is organic matter. When she sees the rest of us raking and burning in our yards, she has to weep, she says.

But they look best of her yard, behind handsome shrubs, she has a big packing case sunk in the ground into which she puts all the grass cuttings, weeds and rakings of her garden. She hoses these green leavings and then tramps them mug and puts a layer of an inch or two of soil over each new layer of green. Onto this she sprinkles a little super-phosphate and some sulphate of ammonia, to hasten decomposition. Each times the box gets full of this delicious manure it is dug into earth, with the chemicals dusted in. And when spring comes she, by the way, has the richest, darkest garden richly and meatily.

Besides all the vegetable waste from her kitchen, of which she cheats the garbage pail, she has been seen to sink a great big bucket in some of the holes of her down near the foundations of a climbing rose.

"It's an old superstition," she tells us. "But the best gardens are all full of old superstitions and plenty of organic matter."

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

ATTITUDE OF MIND

How little do we realize the importance of the right attitude of mind. It can be the one controlling factor in either success or failure.

The great Louis Pasteur, French founder of the science of bacteriology, once said: "Do not let yourselves became tainted by a hopeless, cold, scientific skepticism, do not let yourselves be discouraged, by the sadness of certain hours which pass over us. Tomorrow dawns and our scientific work will be more fruitful."

What we think is what shapes our lives.

Our attitude of mind—it's everything! It is what gives to us a successful and happy life, even though we may have been called upon to face many a problem and to have involved each one according to our best judgment. We cannot always be right, but we can think we are until it is proved to our satisfaction that we are wrong.

It is healthiest to think well of everyone. Habitual suspectors of evil make psychological wrecks and should be shunned as friends. We can suppress what we think help to keep our chin up and who inspire us toward courageous adventure. It's the attitude of mind that makes all the difference with our associates, our individual work, and our future plans. It is healthy and intelligent there is nothing to worry about.

It is our attitude toward life in general that catalogs us. We are put in our place the moment we express ourselves. We invite or we repel. It's our own fault our mind that does it. And we have the power of choice within ourselves. How easy it is to get along with a person who is just, generous, magnanimous, and understanding.

A cheerful attitude of mind is such a joy, light into the darkest day and dispel every discomfort and pain. It is essential for the setting of a successful day. It's influence is widespread.

Personal Health Talks

THE AIR IS FREE — BUT SOMETIMES HARD TO GET

The oxygen requirement of the unborn baby is supplied by the mother's blood through the maternal-fetal cord which enters the baby's body at the navel. During the process of birth and immediately afterward, the baby is deprived of its oxygen supply and this deficit serves as a powerful stimulus to the first breath.

Despite the fact that for countless generations, babies have been born without the aid of medical science, the death rate in the newly born had declined at a rate commensurate with the application of scientific procedures. Getting born is one thing. To keep on living is something else.

Occasionally, during the process of birth, a slight respiratory action may cause fluid, or excretions from the baby's bowel, or greasy substance from the baby's skin, to enter the baby's airway to the lungs thus obstructing the flutter and producing some degree of asphyxia.

Not until about 1840 was it fully realized that this type of obstruction was the cause of many deaths among the newly born, and about that time the suction apparatus was devised to remove accumulations from the upper respiratory apparatus and this was occasionally employed either by mouth to mouth breathing. The latter, crude performance, exposed the baby to infection and the possibility of injury to the delicate structures of the lungs by excessive air pressure.

Today, the routine removal of fluid or other accumulations from the baby's airway is standard procedure following delivery, which is situated at the upper end of the windpipe, a soft rubber or plastic tube is then introduced into and through the larynx and through this tube the airway accumulations are sucked out.

The suction is interrupted frequently to permit the administration of oxygen through the same tube. This is necessary because the infant is suffering from an acute lack of oxygen. The oxygen thus administered is under a slight pressure so that injury from distention may be avoided. The entire procedure is safe and harmless although considerable skill is involved in its use.

It is estimated that about eight minutes is the maximum time which may elapse between birth and the establishment of a free airway. The nervous system may be irreparably damaged after this period of time has elapsed—without oxygen—even if the baby survives. This service — together with the oxygen, apparatus and facilities now always available in every approved hospital — is rendered at birth department. This does not mean that deliveries at home have to forego this service. Every physician who makes a practice of conducting deliveries at home can and should have the apparatus and skill with which to meet this emergency.

Fortunately, this emergency seldom occurs although it ranks high in the cause of new born deaths. Anesthesia applied to the mother for relief of pain may, if overdone, partially anesthetize the baby and reduce its power to rid itself of obstructing secretions. If the mother fully realizes all the possibilities, she may be encouraged to withstand some pain —rather than ask for complete oblivion.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Galloping Consumption

What is the medical term for the common expression "galloping TB?"

Answer—The common expression is one for "galloping consumption," and the medical term was acute pulmonary tuberculosis, applied to exceptional cases, where the disease ran a rapid course.

Stone in the Nose

Daughter had very bad breath. Doctor said it was tonsils. Removed them and breath persisted. Dentist tried two other doctors. No relief. Then she was 15 family doctor looked into nose, worked at it for two or three times at intervals of a few days and finally out came a pebble the size of a lima bean, with considerable mud, and the trouble was gone. (Mrs. T. G)

Answer—Foreign body lodged in nose is a common cause of foul breath in childhood It may accumulate for years, discharging from one side of the nose. The doctor who removed the child's obstruction was performing a routine the nasal passages by means of speculum and head light or mirror was guilty of a kind of mal practice that is almost routine among the ear, nose and throat operators.

New Nazi Party's Strength In Elections Alarms Officials

By GEORGE [illegible]LTWOOD

Bonn, M[illegible] (AP) — Are the Nazis making a comeback in Western Germany?

This question has been asked by alarmed Allied and German officials since the startling election successes of a new political party which openly backs Nazi ideas. Nearly 400,000 West Germans voted for the radical right - wing Socialist Reich party May 6 and gave it 16 seats in the lower Saxony State Parliament.

The party won 11 per cent of the state vote by calling for the restoration of the "many good features of Nazism," rule by the 100-percent elite of the country through the Hitlerite "leadership principle," and the "neutralization" of Germany between east and west.

The Bonn cabinet says it will ask the new federal constitutional court to outlaw the party, but it may be months before a ruling is handed down.

Meanwhile, Bonn must be content with outlawing the party's jack-booted "Reichsfront" guards, and with asking the various state governments to keep the activities of the neo-Nazis in bounds.

The present situation has a spine-chilling resemblance to the 1930s when Hitler's thugs bulled their way into power.

Old Catch-phrases

S. R. P. speakers at mass rallies trotted out many old catch-phrases. There was talk of "German blood" and "German honor." There was no apparent party program or any reasoned discussion of West German politics. The Bonn government was condemned as "the traitors collaborating with the allies."

Another popular party line was the demand for evacuation of Germany by all four powers and the refusal to have anything to do with aiding western defence. The party doesn't bar rearmament. But "German blood" must be shed only for Germany — not to cover the retreat of the western armies, said former Nazi Gen. Otto Ernest Remer.

Remer, promoted personally by Hitler for helping suppress the 1944 anti-Nazi revolt, is the party's prize speaker and obviously is being groomed as a new "Fuehrer."

The party has little to say about Russia. But significantly, neither the communists nor the S. R. P. have attacked each other.

Telegrapher Cleared of Blame In Train Wreck

Prince George, B.C., May 14—(CP)— Telegrapher Alfred John Atherton had been cleared of blame in the Canoe River train wreck in the Rockies of British Columbia which took 21 lives.

Atherton, charged with manslaughter following the collision of a Canadian National Railways passenger train and troop train Nov. 21, was acquitted Saturday by a jury which deliberated 40 minutes.

Canoe River is about 150 miles southeast of here.

The Crown claimed the 22-year-old youth, a telegrapher for the C.N.R. at the time of the accident, failed to relay a train order correctly—dropping two vital words and thereby bringing on the crash.

Atherton, arrested in Saskatoon, was defended by three lawyers: William Ferry, R. Hall and John Diefenbaker, Progressive Conservative member of parliament for Lake Centre Saskatchewan.

FAMILY OF 10 HOMELESS

Peterborough, May 14—(CP)—Hector Cheriten, his wife and eight children ranging in age from seven to 20 were left homeless yesterday when fire destroyed their farm house four miles west of here. Neighboring farmers formed a bucket brigade to keep the flames from spreading to a large barn nearby.

Claim Doukhobors Set Fire In Penitentiary

New Westminster, B.C., May 14—(CP)—The News-Herald today quoted an unidentified police officer as saying imprisoned Doukhobor arsonists set a fire yesterday at the federal penitentiary here.

The News-Herald quoted him as saying:

"We had to use our billies when they (the Doukhobors) really got out of hand.

"It was almost what you would call a riot.

"The Douks set the fire and they are apparently expecting some kind of outside demonstration."

The fire was reported to have destroyed one of the buildings housing the Doukhobors.

Cruiser Ontario On Way Home

Auckland, N.Z., May 14—(CP)—The Canadian cruiser Ontario sailed for home today after a 16-day goodwill visit to New Zealand.

On the homeward voyage the cruiser will stop at Suva, Fiji Islands, to drop off stores for New Zealand army and air force units stationed there. Owing to a waterfront strike no merchant ships have been able to ship the stores, and the Canadian Navy made the Ontario available to New Zealand authorities.

Fuchs May Be Freed to Continue Atomic Research

London, May 14. (AP) — Reports that Dr. Klaus Fuchs, convicted atom spy, may be released to continue atomic research work under guard were published yesterday by two newspapers.

The Reynolds News and the Sunday Chronicle both carried such speculative stories on Fuchs and the Chronicle added that Dr. Alan Nunn may also might be released under a similar arrangement.

Government officials made no immediate comment.

Both men are serving prison terms for disclosing atomic secrets to Russia.

The newspapers said that if Fuchs is released he will be guarded to make certain no secret information gets out this time.

A third paper, the Sunday Dispatch, quoted the Warden of Stafford prison as denying reports that Home Office officials have interviewed Fuchs with a view to obtaining his release.

W.M.S.

The May meeting of St. John's United Church W.M.S. was held in the church parlors on Thursday at 3 p.m. Thirty members were present. Mrs. Sisco presided with Mrs. J. Sager at the piano. Mrs. John Kingston had charge of the worship service. Scripture readings were given by Mrs. C. Moon, Mrs. Wm. Courtney and Mrs. J. Kingston, these readings were interspersed with verses from a hymn. Mrs. Barnett led in prayer. A sympathy card for Miss M. Howe, Chisamba, Africa, was signed by all present. Mrs. Allen McLaughlin gave a few highlights on the meeting at Madoc, at which Miss Ida McKenzie, field secretary spoke. She also called on different members for their impressions of this meeting. Mrs. W. Provost sang a solo which was much enjoyed. The theme of the program "Christian Citizenship at home and Abroad," Mrs. S. Way presented the topic "What the W.M.S. is doing to Promote Peace Abroad." Begun decades ago these peace building projects continue year after year, without fanfare, supported by the loyal efforts of many groups of devoted individuals. Mrs. Fred Foster chose as her topic "Neighborly Friendliness," she read a chapter from David Crayson's book "Adventure in Friendship" which illustrated how we all, unknowingly, belonged to the brotherhood of man and this fact itself should make everyone better neighbors. Mrs. W. E. Jones spoke on the community friendship department aims and stressed importance of all members being aware of their work in this department. A friendly cup of tea was enjoyed by all members at the close.

MIFFLIN—FAIREROTHER

The marriage of Verna Ruth Fairbrother, daughter of Mrs. Thomas A. Fairbrother, of Oshawa, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Mifflin, Whitby.

A bank of spring flowers and white baskets of pink snapdragons and carnations formed the background for the ceremony performed by the Rev. R. F. Scott at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Hughes, 65 Centre Road, Whitby. Mr. H. W. Gourley, of Belleville, played the wedding music.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was gowned in Chantilly lace over white satin. A sweetheart neckline and long pointed sleeves studded the basque bodice and the bouffant skirt ended in a short train. A headdress of small white flowers held her fingertip veil of tulle illusion and she carried a bouquet of calla lilies tied with a white satin bow.

Her only attendant, Miss Shirley Mifflin sister of the bridegroom, was in blue nylon net over taffeta inset with French lace. She wore a bandeau of blue cornflowers and pink roses completed her bouquet. Her jewellery was the bride's gift, a rhinestone necklace.

Mr. Thomas A. Fairbrother, brother of the bride, performed the duties of best man and the ushers were Mr. David Fairbrother, also a brother of the bride, and Mr. James Mifflin, brother of the bridegroom.

At the reception, the bride's mother was wearing navy blue sheer with a pink nylon straw profile hat and pink accessories. The bridegroom's mother was in mauve rose crepe with black accessories. Both wore corsages of carnations.

A three-tier wedding cake set in ferns and carnations centred the bridal table and the bride later cut the cake with an heirloom silver knife.

During the reception a cable was received from Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Wagstaffe, uncle and aunt of the bride, Surrey, England.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Mifflin left on a wedding trip by motor through New York State and upon their return will reside in Whitby. For travelling the bride chose a coral wool camille suit with a navy blue silk hat and accessories. Her corsage was white gardenias.

LLOYD—BINGHAM

A lovely spring wedding took place May 5, in St. Peter's Church, Cobourg, when Rev. H. Ernest Jones united in holy matrimony, Marguerite Gonzales Dunn Bingham and Richard Denis Clendinning Lloyd.

The bride is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McKee Dunn Bingham, and the groom is the son of Prof. and Mrs. Wm. Henry Lloyd, of Belfast, Ireland.

White lilies and snapdragons were the church flowers, and Miss Kathleen Warner played the wedding music. Miss Shirley Pegg sang a solo accompanied in chorus by the boys of St. Peter's choir.

The bride was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. J. B. Dupe of Toronto. She was lovely in a gown of imported French Chantilly lace, rose pattern, over imported tulle net. The bridal gown was fashioned with portrait neckline, and bouffant skirt. Her mantilla headdress was of matching lace, and her flowers of stephanotis and white roses.

Miss Jane Pirie, bridesmaid, and Miss Judith McKellar, Toronto, junior bridesmaid, were gowned designed like that of the maid of honor, in pale yellow, the latter wearing a white poke bonnet and the former in large hat to match her frock.

The groomsman was Mr. Harry Willowby, of Pembroke; the ushers were Mr. Wesley Meggs, Gore's Landing and Hugh McMasus of Belleville.

The wedding reception was held at Tangmere House, where Mrs. Ruby Meggs, Gore's Landing, and Mrs. J. Walsh, Toronto, received with the bridal party; the former was in ensemble of blue green crepe with natural straw hat and corsage of Johanna Hill roses; the latter was in navy blue ensemble with pink carnation corsage. White lilies, snapdragons and spring flowers made the setting for the reception and the bride's table.

The happy couple will motor through the States for their honeymoon. For their wedding trip the bride was wearing light cocoa taffeta dress with chocolate brown taffeta duster and beige sailor hat trimmed with chocolate brown and natural accessories with a white orchid corsage. They will reside in Peterborough.

KNAPP—MONTGOMERY

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemized on Saturday May 5, at two o'clock in Wall Street United Church, Brockville, when Rev. Gordon Maxwell united in marriage Emma Elizabeth Alice, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Montgomery, North Augusta, to Elmer Keith, youngest son of Mrs. George Knapp, and the late Mr. Knapp, of Algonquin.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride look charming in a floor-length white slipper satin gown with long sleeves and embroidered bodice, matching veil and silver slippers and a single strand of pearls. She carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses.

The bridesmaid, Joyce Montgomery, a sister of the bride, was also charming in a floor-length gown of powder blue with long sleeves, matching veil and headpiece and carried a fan-shaped bouquet of roses.

The flower girl, Jean Montgomery, youngest sister of the bride, was dressed in a pale slipper satin gown and carried a basket of colorful snapdragons.

The groom's brother, Lloyd Knapp, of Trenton, acted as best man while Herbert Knapp, of Roebuck, was the usher.

During the signing of the register, Miss Joyce Wright, of Ottawa, sang very sweetly "O Promise Me."

The groom's gift to the bride was a two-piece set of luggage, and to the best man, a cigaret lighter. The bride's gift to the bridesmaid was a double strand of pearls.

After the ceremony a wedding dinner and reception were held at the Hotel Manitonna, at which 45 guests were present. The bride's mother received in navy blue with grey and wore a corsage of red roses, while the groom's mother received in a grey dress with navy accessories and wore a corsage of pink carnations.

The dining-room table was beautifully decorated with bouquets of pink and white snapdragons and sprays of green fern, and centred with a three-tiered wedding cake. After the cutting of the cake, Lloyd Knapp proposed a toast to the bride, to which the groom responded in a most appropriate way. The bride and groom received many beautiful and useful gifts for which they thanked their many friends.

The happy couple left by motor on a trip to Toronto, Detroit, and western points, the bride travelling in a tan suit with navy and tan accessories. On their return they will reside in Brockville.

Tricolor Ribbon Calot

By ALICE ALDEN

THE ribbon hat, when well done, is always a success, and so we want to show you a real beauty. Laddie Northride turns tricolor ribbon of red, white and blue polka dots into a smart profile calot. The ribbon, deftly draped across the crown, flares gracefully into a sharp, stiff bow at one side of the head. A soft little veil softens the brow. A piquant scarf is of matching material.

MARIO ... in his distinctive feature about FOOD ... What's Cooking?

Science is finally catching up with so-called scientific food tasters.

Many people have recognized that the actual taste of food can be affected by color, the atmosphere, the company in which we eat and many other circumstances.

The steam from an urn of hot coffee on a winter's day may transform a muddy drink into a grand brew. A sourpuss sitting across the table will make everything seem off flavor.

Now the University of California is attempting to solve the problem. In their new million dollar Food Technology Division food tasters will sit in air conditioned rooms, and eat under perfectly controlled lighting conditions. Each tester will sit in a small cubicle so that he cannot see other testers' expressions.

It all sounds scientific, detached and rather unappetizing. It's hardly the sort of atmosphere you would choose when the family sits down to a dinner of brown-red meat balls, velvety tomato sauce and egg noodles.

Meat Balls with Noodles
Serves 4.

1-2 lb chopped beef
1 lb. chopped pork
1-4 lb. chopped veal
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon ground pepper
Vegetable fat or butter
1-4 cup finely chopped onion
1-4 cup finely chopped celery
1-4 cup bread crumbs
1 egg
2-3oonce cans tomato sauce
1 teaspoon finely chopped dried basil
1-2 lb. medium size noodles

Mix the chopped meat with salt and pepper.

Melt 1 tablespoon vegetable fat in saucepan. Add the onion and celery. Saute until onion is yellow.

Remove vegetables from fire. Add to meat. Add bread crumbs. Separate the egg and from white, and add the yolk to the meat. Add 1-3 cup tomato sauce. Mix meat thoroughly.

Beat the egg white until stiff. Stir egg white into meat. Shape the meat into balls about 1 inch in diameter.

Fry the meat balls in a shallow pan or metal pie plate. Put the pan under a moderate broiler flame and brown meat on all sides.

Transfer the meat to a saucepan. Add the tomato sauce, basil and 1-3 cup water. Simmer, uncovered, about 30 minutes or until sauce is thick.

Drop the noodles in boiling salted water. Cook 10 minutes. Drain well.

Spoon the meat balls and sauce over noodles on serving plates.

FLEW TOGETHER

London, May 14—(AP)— The King, Queen and Princess Margaret flew together in the same plane Sunday for the first time.

It has been customary for members of the Royal family to use separate planes even though bound for the same destination because there would be less danger that several might be killed at the same time.

The Royal party flew from London to Aberdeen en route to Balmoral Castle for a week's stay.

$4,500 TAKEN

Hamilton, May 14—(CP)—Three masked safecrackers stole an estimated $4,500 Sunday after tying up two employees of the Canada Bread Company here.

They took about $3,000 in cash and $1,500 in cheques after battering open one safe and stealing another, smaller one.

Police found the 70-year-old watchman, Jack Chettle and doughmaker Howard Leeman, 45, bound hand and foot.

FRANKFORD

P. S. Presents First Musical Festival

Frankford — The citizens of Frankford were treated to something new in the way of entertainment Thursday evening, as the Frankford Public School presented its first music festival. Under the capable leadership of the school's music teacher, Miss Phyllis Sine, pupils from kindergarten age to entrance presented a program of music varying from comedy to patriotic and sacred selections.

Jack Williams, chairman of the school board introduced each number in turn. The program opened with "O Canada". Misses Virginia Elsner and Sue Anne Wallace paid a musical tribute to the month of May.

Colorful Song Pageant

The children of the Batawa and Frankford kindergarten presented a colorful song pageant entitled "The Children's Garden." In this number, the various spring flowers and song birds were portrayed.

Lorraine Arnott next favored with a piano solo. Besides her solo, Lorraine did a splendid job as pianist for the entire musical program, following which the Batawa and Frankford Grade 1 classes joined in a rhythm band number. Dressed in colorful costumes, they really took over the hearts of the large audience with their number.

Little Joan Black presented a tap dance number, which brought a fine ovation. The next number, "The Circus" by Batawa and Frankford second grades, had it be altered somewhat, due to lack ness of some of the members. Nevertheless, it was greatly enjoyed.

Best Action Number

Sue Anne Wallace favored with a piano solo. The next number, "The May Pole" was perhaps the best action number of the program. With a background of singing children, a group of girls performed a rhythmic drill around the may pole, climaxed by braiding colored ribbons around the pole.

Joan Black made her second appearance, this time, joining with Joyce Woodcox to bring a tap dance number. Grade IV presented a number of patriotic songs, which should have brought a little deeper appreciation of Canada's land to everyone present.

Two Part Harmony

Lorraine Arnott then favored with her second piano solo. The senior choir closed the program with two beautiful sacred selections in two part harmony, "Bless This House", and "Jesus High in Glory."

Miss Sine, and the teachers of the Batawa and Frankford schools are to be congratulated on their first musical festival. It is almost a certainty that this will become an annual affair.

The school received valuable help from the C.G.I.T. girls of the United Church, in making flowers for some of the numbers.

Robbers Were Forced to Quit Bank Empty-Handed When Supply Man Out

Bank Manager W. Irwin

Scene of Robbery Attempt

A bank robbery failed to materialize at Canadian Bank of Commerce branch at Claremont, Ont., when supply acetylene used by three would-be robbers to cut through bank vault gave out before job was completed. Armed men gained access to premises through living quarters above the bank of manager Wilfred Irwin who, along with his wife, spent two gruelling hours in custody of thugs before they left, with their task uncompleted. Police believe the attempted robbery was definitely the work of "Ontario's best organized team of bank robbers" which since 1945 has grossed over $1,000,000 in at least 12 hold-ups. — Central Press Canadian.

Twenty Persons Left Homeless In B.C. Blaze

Bonnyville, B.C. May 14—(CP)—An early-morning fire yesterday destroyed four main buildings in this tiny northern Alberta community. Loss was estimated at between $150,000 and $500,000.

First reports from Fire Chief L. C. Bartier indicated that damage was heavy and might run as high as $500,000. Later, however, a Calgary insurance firm handling damage claims placed the lott at between $150,000 and $172,000.

Twenty persons were left homeless in the fire, which raged out of control for six hours. A general store, a meat market, several offices and a cafe were destroyed.

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

by
WINIFRED E. WILSON

KING-BILLED GULL

One of Canada's most abundant gulls wears a ring on its bill, put there by nature, not man. When in flight, it is by this black ring on a greenish yellow bill that the adult ring-billed gull can perhaps best be differentiated from the adult herring gull. Other distinguishing marks are greenish yellow instead of pink legs, smaller size, and more black on the under side of the long wing feathers. But slate-grey mantles, white heads and underparts, and yellow eyes with red lids are common to both species, confusing for the amateur bird watcher. The way gulls' looks change as they get older is also the cause of mistakes in identification. A complete moult takes place in the autumn, and a partial one in spring. Young ring-billed gulls are really difficult to recognize. Their first autumn, they are mottled brownish grey above, have a black band near the end of the square tail, bills that are dark except near the base, and dark or flesh-colored, webbed feet.

In the next stage, they are definitely light birds, though the black band is still in evidence, only about half the bill is black, and their feet are yellowish or flesh-colored. Changes take place gradually, until the bird is at least two years old, and it may be well on in its third year. Then the mature markings have been completed; the grey and white bird has acquired an all-white tail, and only the wing tips and the ring on a yellow bill are black.

Most Common

Because ring-billed gulls breed right across Canada from Newfoundland to the Rockies, and north as far as Great Slave Lake, it is in spring that we have a good opportunity to see them returning home from their holidays in the United States. These are the most common large gulls of the interior prairie region, and on the Great Lakes compete with herring gulls for first place. Further east they are not as numerous, although flocks up to several hundred stop off in spring and fall migrations, and feed near our southern border. Their high-pitched voices are welcome, for we know these birds are of great economic importance, feeding on mice, insects, offal from fishing vessels or found on shore, and even grasshoppers.

Colonies nest on rocky, stony, or marshy ground near lakes and sloughs, building their homes of dead reeds. Their eggs are so blotched with shades of brown and lavender as to be inconspicuous.

Baghdad Airport Departure Point For Strangest, Tragic Movements of Jews in History

Baghdad, May 14—(AP)—The airport at Baghdad is the departure point for one of the strangest and most tragic movements of Jews in history.

A Jew leaves Baghdad by air on the average of one every two minutes. This is the peak of a great exodus which began slowly about a year ago.

These Jews, descendants of Israelites, are flying home to the new Israel some 500 miles away.

Nearly 75,000 have made the westward journey. More than 50,000 left since December when transfer was speeded up.

The exodus began when the Iraq government announced it would permit Jews here to migrate to Israel—if they dropped Iraq nationality. Iraq and Israel are still in a technical state of war.

The Jews see no future here for their children. Many believe the Arab-Jew conflict generated by formation of Israel will make normal living impossible here for a long time to come.

Even the 15,000 remaining in Baghdad have doubts about the future. Some nationalist politicians have been peddling the slogan "Nationalize oil and de-nationalize all the Jews." Newspapers have urged openly that Iraq be purged of all Jews.

A recent government "freeze order" on Jewish property closed all Jewish shops and stopped all Jewish trade. Some shops have reopened, but business is till at a standstill.

The current exodus is chiefly of poor Jews. Some wealthy Jews read the handwriting on the wall several years back and left the country, getting their money out with them. Others with big properties are remaining.

Many Jews waiting to leave are living for the most part from the money obtained by sale of their household belongings. They are permitted to take only personal clothing.

Iraq authorities don't permit relatives to see them off for fear of last-minute attempts to smuggle jewels or gold.

Peterborough, May 14—(CP)—A one-week clean and paint-up campaign launched by the Junior Chamber of Commerce got off to a good start Saturday when 14 members painted the home of Mrs. J. Daley, a widow with three small children. The workers finished the job in just over five hours.

Correspondent Cited for Bravery By U.S. Battalion

By RUSSELL BRINES

Tokyo, May 14 (AP)—A tanky correspondent drifted out of the Korean dusk one night and asked permission to accompany an American outfit preparing for an attack.

The battalion commander tried to talk him out of it ,because it was April 23, the second night of the heavy Chinese offensive on the western front.

But John Randolph, Associated Press correspondent, went along anyway.

The next day many American and Canadian newspapers carried his graphic account of the fight put up by Company B, 1st battalion of the U.S. Seventh Infantry Regiment.

Today the rest of the story came out.

Randolph has been cited for "his courageous actions under fire on behalf of my men" by the battalion commander, Lt.-Col. Fred C. Weyand.

The Associated Press writer was under constant fire from automatic weapons, mortars and artillery, Weyand said in a letter to The Associated Press. Several men in the lead platoon fell in the open.

"With complete disregard for his own safety Randolph moved forward to carry these wounded men to less-exposed positions where they could receive medical attention. All in all, I believe he made four such trips.

"Several men in this battalion undoubtedly owe their lives to his efforts to get them immediate attention."

"Although his account was completely factual, his modesty apparently forbade mention of his own contributions. I am taking action through army channels to secure official recognition of his courageous actions under fire on behalf of my men. I thought however, that you would be personally interested in knowing the type of man that you have working for you."

LINE IN BANKRUPTCY

Toronto, May 14—(CP)—Muskoka Lakes Line, Ltd., filed bankruptcy papers here Friday, saying it could not finance structural changes in its five ships on the Muskoka Lakes.

The effect may be to cut off mail and supplies to summer residents of the resort area, some 100 miles north of Toronto.

Certain changes in ship construction were among safety measures ordered for Canada's inland shipping in an order-in-council passed following the burning of the lake cruiser at Toronto Sept. 17, 1949, with the loss of 119 lives.

Gen. Willoughby Returning To U.S. With Fire in His Eye

Tokyo, May 13—(AP)—Gen. MacArthur's top controversial associate is going back to the United States with fire in his eye.

He is Maj.-Gen. Charles A. Willoughby, the generally intelligence officer in two wars.

The 59-year-old Willoughby requested retirement after 40 years of army service. He says he will leave here late this month, expecting to join MacArthur.

He will be prepared to fight for the intelligence program of the last decade which has brought frequent criticism to himself and his chief.

Willoughby may be a key witness on a basic point in the present controversy over the Korean war: Did MacArthur tell President Truman the Chinese would not 'attack, and if so, why?

In effect, this was Willoughby's explanation to Tokyo correspondents after the first Chinese surprise attack:

Intelligence authorities knew the Chinese were massed in reinforced strength along the Yalu and were sifting into north Korea. But whether they actually would enter the war was a political decision, known only in Peiping and the Kremlin, which military intelligence could not anticipate. Legend Around Tokyo

Whatever his future role in the controversy, Willoughby will fix war with his own brand of color and expressive crispness.

He is a legend around Tokyo, a man violently supported and strongly opposed. He is one of the few remaining "Bataan Boys" who escaped Corregidor with MacArthur.

Willoughby is the most flamboyant officer MacArthur has kept around him all these years. Yet, when with his chief, Willoughby changes from a drillmaster to a respectful second lieutenant.

Willoughby consistently has shared strongly and openly MacArthur's views that a decisive struggle began with 'the Soviet Union for Asia as soon as peace was declared in 1945.

In Tokyo, the general administers the largest military section at headquarters. Its activities range from intelligence observation of the Japanese to propaganda and psychological warfare in Korea.

It was considered inevitable here that he would be replaced after MacArthur's removal. Willoughby said he requested retirement.

Body of ABC Writer Found In Oslo Fjord

Oslo, Norway, May 14. (AP)—The body of Lyford Moore, American Broadcasting Company correspondent missing for five months, was found in Oslo Fjord yesterday and police sought to determine the cause of his death.

A medical expert said the body showed no signs of death by violence, but that a further investigation is being made.

The 40-year-old Moore, a native of Detroit, last was seen alive Dec. 10. Four days later the American Embassy announced he had vanished and asked Oslo police to conduct a search.

Moore, chief of the ABC Bureau in Berlin came to Norway early in December with a party of United States Air Force men to obtain Christmas trees for American airmen in North Africa.

MAY KNOW SOON

Edmonton, May 14—(CP)—Lt.-Col. J. R. Stone said Sunday that doctors may know definitely today what ails his two-year-old daughter who had her right eye removed last week.

In a statement at a press conference, the tall, tanned commander of the 2nd Battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, said his return to his troops in Korea, whom he left last Wednesday night, "depended on the decision for my daughter."

The Colonel, from Salmon Arm, B.C., visited his daughter Saturday.

In this modern age, nickel helps us lead a longer life stronger and healthier. Cod liver oil, tooth paste, medicines and toilet preparations are all processed in equipment made of pure nickel or nickel alloys.

Today bicycles are being made stronger, more durable — but lighter in weight — with the help of alloys made strong and tough by the addition of nickel.

In the dairy, the purity of milk is protected by the use of nickel-alloy materials in the pasteurizers, coolers, bottling machines and other equipment.

Nickel is on the job most everywhere

Hundreds of everyday uses for Nickel have been developed by the Nickel industry through a planned program of research. Today a large share of Canada's Nickel production is being diverted from peacetime uses into channels for preparedness. So the Nickel mine facilities, greatly expanded over the past decade, are again being operated at peak capacity. There is actually more Nickel now being delivered by Canada to the free world than in any peacetime year.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

This baseball virus, like printers' ink, once it gets in the blood is as hard to shake as a process server. The ill ole bug perhaps may remain dormant for years after a player has ceased diamond action, but there comes a time when it besirs itself and the "victim" gets itchy feet, ditto hands, and a yen to get "out there" and get into the game.

Of course the old "gentleman with the spike and whiskers is a certain antidote for this kind of "poison", but occasionally the victim satisfies his craving with some action outside the diamond.

* * *

Take Bob Scott, Frankford Times was, and that was around the era when Wall Street held its famous egg: Old Man Depression had a stranglehold on the country, and things in general had gone to pot, when the hawkshaw Robert was one of the best third basemen to envort around the hot corner in these parts.

That was back in the "Peeny" Mills; Harry Mills, Jack Williams, Stan Hagerman et al regime, when the now famous Nationals of this city, were knocking off the best teams in the district and going on to defeather the famed Walkerville Chicks for the provincial title.

* * *

Bob, who now is associated with the CNR, played on that squad for three years. Later he joined the Brockville team in the Canadian - American League, when Jesse Spring was in his heyday, and remained in the loop for the next five or six years.

However that is beside the point. Bob, who has been doing his baseballing these past years in the sports pages and grandstand, has "gone active". With the first senior team to represent Belleville in years, in the making, he has volunteered his services and experience "to help out" with the training of the boys.

* * *

And he is doing a good job. The old noggin hasn't forgotten the "tricks of the trade" learned the hard way years ago, and Bob is proving an invaluable aid to President Jack Carson and his executive cohorts. He is out there every-practise night putting the boys through their "jumps" so to speak. And they like it.

National Loop Race Confirms Forecasts by Some Managers That it Would be Tight Fit

By JOE REICHLER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The closeness of the National League scramble is lending added stature to those managers who predicted an eight - team dogfight.

"Anybody has a chance to grab it all," said Cincinnati's Luke Sewell last March in Florida. Others just about echoed the same thing.

As the league enjoys a day off today, the eight clubs are so bunched up that only 3½ games separate first from last place.

The American League also is shaping up for a tight pennant race with 3½ games between first and sixth place.

In the National Brooklyn Dodgers, New York Giants and Cincinnati were chiefly responsible for contracting the dazzling yesterday.

Brooklyn took over first place from Boston, overcoming the Braves 12-6. Behind 6-0 after two innings, the Dodgers tied it up in the sixth and went ahead for keeps on Carl Furillo's three-run homer. The victory went to Irv Palica, who pitched two-hit shutout ball the last seven innings.

Phils in Seventh Spot

The Giants whipped the defending champion Philadelphia Phils 11-2 and 4-2 to climb past the wind - tide into sixth place, only one game away from third. The Phils dropped the Phils into seventh place, half a game out of the basement occupied by Cincinnati.

Larry Jensen and Sal Maglie went the route for New York and received good support at the plate as Leo Durocher's hitters came up with five-run runs, two of them by Eddie Stanky.

Cincinnati inflicted the sixth and seventh defeats of their last eight games on the flu-ridden St. Louis Cards, 7-2 and 6-3. Two homers by outfielder Joe Adcock was all Howie Fox needed to win the opener. Willie (The Knuck) Ramsdell held the Cards in control in the second game to win his first of the season after four losses.

Chicago and Pittsburgh split a twin bill to move past the Cards into a tie for third place. Mel Queen pitched a six-hitter and singled in the run that gave the Pirates the 2-1 opener. Johnny Klippstein's six-rit hurling and homers by Hank Sauer and Jack Cusick off Murry Dickson won the second game for the Cubs 6-0.

Yankees Beaten Twice

The Yankees, American League pace-setters, received a double-barrelled jolt from Baltimore Orioles thrashed them 5-4 and 9-8 in Philadelphia. First baseman Ferris Fain of the A's batted in 2 runs with a single, double and triple in the opener. He also rapped out three hits and drove in 3 runs in the second game.

Homers by Vern Stephens and Ted Williams made it easy for Mel Parnell to register his third victory for Boston Red Sox over Washington, 10-1. But the second-place Senators picked up some ground to trail the Yankees by 2½ games.

Cleveland, Chicago and Detroit wound up in a three - way tie for third. The Indians whipped the White Sox 11-3 in the first game as Bob Feller hurled an eight-hitter for his fourth victory without a loss. Al Rosen hit a grand-slam homer for the Indians, A triple play by the White Sox took some of the sting off the 20-point defeat.

The second Cleveland - Chicago game ended in a 4-4 tie. The Indians tallied three times in the top of the 9th. At this point by prior agreement, the game was called to allow the teams to catch a train. Darkness the score reverted to the end of nine innings.

Ned Garver gave up 11 Detroit hits but went the distance to chalk up his fourth win at St. Louis Browns defeated Detroit 13-10 in the opener. Ted Gray fanned, relief as the Tigers came back to win the nightcap 5-3. Ray Coleman collected six hits for the Browns during the two bill while Detroit's Vic Wertz slammed two four-baggers.

Sir Thomas Lipton, one-time errand boy who became a merchant prince and great sportsman was elected a member of the exclusive Royal Yacht Squadron in England 20 years ago today in recognition of his gallant but unsuccessful attempts to win the America's cup with his great yachts. All Home Teams Win Openers In Intercounty

(By The Canadian Press)

The Senior Intercounty Baseball League got under way Saturday on three fronts and everybody went home happy; all the home teams won.

Season openers were staged at Waterloo (where the Tigers downed Guelph 5-1), Galt (where the Terriers defeated St. Thomas by the same score) and Brantford (where th: Red Sox drubbed Kitchener 15-7).

On the sidelines in the seven-team loop were London Majors, who pry the lid off at home Wednesday against Brantford.

At Waterloo, Guelph Maple Leafs had a 1-0 lead going into the last of the eighth inning, when the Tigers exploded for six hits—and five runs—to sew up the decision.

Southpaw Matt Gumenlak, who pitched for Guelph Juniors last season, waged a scoreless battle with Joe Yosurak, Waterloo's ace righthander, until the fateful eighth and allowed only two hits up to that point.

Guelph opened the scoring in their half of that inning when Matt Jeffries doubled and came home on Joe Consoli's single.

Third baseman Bobby Fisher and Yosurak led the Waterloo offence with two hits apiece.

At Galt, veteran Bill Leader showed mid-season form as he pitched the homesters to victory over St. Thomas Legionaires.

He allowed seven hits—one more than his 17-year-old opponent, Bob Stormes—but was stingy with men on base.

Score Three in Fourth

The Terriers scored three runs in the fourth inning on two successive triples, a walk and a St. Thomas error and added two counters in the eighth inning. The Legionnaires got their singleton in the fifth frame.

Augie Mormino, a right-handed pitcher from Chicago, reported to the Terriers Saturday and Jackie Robinson of New York, who pitched in the Mexican League, sent word he would arrive Tuesday.

The game at Brantford was a six by Brantford.

They'll Do It Every Time

By Jimmy Hatlo

high-scoring, free-hitting affair.

The Red Sox teed off on four Kitchener hurlers for 16 hits, good for 13 runs. Kitchener collected nine safeties off the offerings of Wilmer Fields, who went the route for Brantford.

Leading the Red Sox hitting parade was playing coach Stan Lipka, who had a perfect four-for-four. Fields also sparkled at the plate banging out three hits—one a home run—and driving in four runs to help his own cause.

Rolly Larouche started on the mound for Kitchener and allowed six runs before he was replaced in the second inning. He was followed by Hal Johnson, Freddy Frank and Gord Hymond. Larouche was tagged with the defeat.

Rick of the Kitchener squad was playing coach Don Gallinger, who had a two hits, one a double.

The fielding was shoddy. Eleven errors were committed, into action again Tuesday when The Intercounty swings back Galt visits Kitchener.

Defending Champs Rochester Wings, Beginning to Roll

(By The Associated Press)

The defending champion Rochester Red Wings are beginning to assert themselves in the International League pennant race.

Off to a poor start, the Wings are zooming into high gear with six straight victories in eight out of their last nine starts.

The Wingmen took both ends of a doubleheader from Syracuse Chiefs yesterday, 4-2, 5-0, to move into third place, 1½ games behind the second-place Chiefs and five in back of the leading Montreal Royals.

Bob Habenicht, a recent acquisition from the Cards, posted his third victory without a loss in the opener. Home runs by Charley Kress and Hal Rice featured the triumph.

Johnny Yuhas blanked the Chiefs on 8 hits in the finale and fanned eight. Bud Hardin's three-run single in the second was the big blow for the Wings.

The Royals swept a pair of games from Toronto Maple Leafs 8-2 and 4-0 behind the excellent pitching of Bob Alexander and Bud Podbielan. Alexander limited the eLafs to four hits, three by Lou Morton. Podbielan restricted the Leafs to two singles.

Springfield and Baltimore divided a doubleheader. The Orioles won the opener 1-0 behind the three-hit pitching of Karl Drews. Spec Sanger held Baltimore to two hits in the windup.

Buffalo Bisons and Ottawa Giants also split a twin bill. The Bisons won the opener 7-2 behind Rudy Minarcin. Ottawa grabbed the nightcap 4-0 behind the one-hit pitching of Charley Eisenmann and Alex Konikowski. Frank Carswell singled for the only one Buffalo hit in the second.

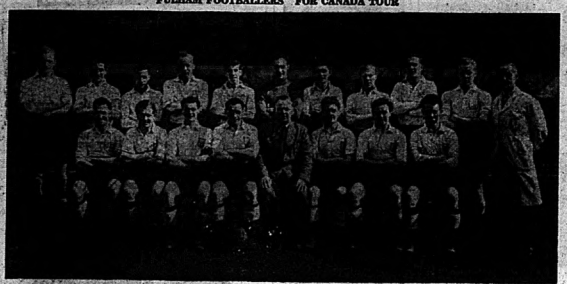
FULHAM FOOTBALLERS FOR CANADA TOUR



Grouped in the rare winter sunshine in their home ground, Craven Cottage, London, are the Fulham football players, who will display their tenacity, teamwork and battle tactics during a tour of Canada this summer. They open on May 24 at Toronto and play in Montreal, New York, Edmonton, Vancouver, Victoria and Winnipeg. They are, left to right: Back row — R. Lowe, J. Baccurzi, H. Freeman, W. Pavitt, L. Quested, I. Black, J. Taylor (captain), R. Lawler, E. Lowe, A. Macaulay, F. Penn (trainer). Front row — A. Stevens, J. Bowie, R. Robson, B. Thomas, W. Dodgin (manager), R. Brennan, B. Jezzard, J. Campbell. —Central Press Canadian.

Famous Fulham Football Club To Tour Canada, United States

By EDWIN L. JOHNSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, May 11—(CP)—Led by their president, Sir Leslie Howard, the Fulham football team of the English First Division leaves next week on a post-season playing tour of Canada. The party, 30 strong, sails from Liverpool May 15 on the Empress of Scotland.

Fresh from their recent International test against the Dinamo from Yugoslavia, the Fulham boys are eagerly looking forward to their tour. Although none of the major soccer clubs came their way this season, they are confident the team will uphold the high traditions established by other old country clubs that have toured the Dominion.

In Toronto May 24

Facing a well-spaced exhibition schedule of 10 games, the team is due to reach Montreal May 22, with the opening game of the tour on the May 24 holiday against a team of Ontario all-stars at Toronto. After a side jaunt to New York where they tackle the touring Glasgow Celtics, the Londoners return to Montreal for a match on May 29. The team then proceeds westward for games in Winnipeg, Edmonton, Vancouver and Victoria. Before returning home June 22, the visitors will play return matches in Toronto and Montreal.

Organized in 1880 and one of the oldest professional clubs in England, the Fulham club for the first time is sending a representative team on a North American tour. Three of the club's players, however, appeared in Canada last year. The Irishmen Johnny Campbell, and Robin Lawler were loaned to the visiting Belfast Celtics, while the captain of the team, Jim Taylor, toured the dominion with the Football Association all-star squad.

It is only two years since Fulham, after 30 years of striving, attained first division rating. In that long, up-hill struggle the club's management steadfastly resisted the temptation of buying their way to promotion. Some of the wealthier clubs this season have been offering more than $100,000 for top-flight players.

Fulham followed the policy of acquiring up-and-coming players in deals that were easier on the pocket-book and by developing youngsters from nursery clubs and corner lots.

The plan finally paid off in 1948-49 when the championship pennant of the second division was raised at Craven Cottage, the club's historic field overlooking the Thames River.

While the team lays no claims to such great stars as Blackpool's Stanley Matthews or Newcastle's Jackie Milburn, it has in its lineup seven players of international status.

Apart from the brilliant forward line led by Taylor, the club's rearguard of goalie Ian Black, supported by fullbacks Joe Bacuzzi and Harry Freeman is one of the soundest in the country. It also boasts of such stellar marksmen as Art Stevens and Bedford Jezzard as well as the speed demon, 24-year-old Jimmy Bowie.

A well-knit combination, trading an aggressive open style of play the white-and-black squad is certain to give a good account of itself.

Frank Osborne secretary-general manager and himself a former English international, will direct the affairs of the club on the tour. Manager Bill Dodgin and trainer Frank Penn will also accompany the team.

Three Players Cut From Roster By Detroit Tigers

St. Louis May 14 (AP) —Detroit Tigers yesterday cut three players from the roster before leaving here for their first eastern tour of the American League season.

Veteran righthander pitcher Paul Calvert was sold outright to Seattle of the Pacific Coast League.

Pitchers Wayne McLeland and Marlin Stuart were sent to Toledo of the American Association.

Belmont Park, Biggest Track In U.S., Opens

New York May 14 —(AP) — Swanky Belmont Park, the biggest race track in the United States, opens today with 21 stake races and a lure of almost $500,000 in added money for horsemen during the 34-day spring meeting.

A dozen crack sprinters are expected to go in the 58th running of the Tobogan Handicap on opening day. The climax of the meeting, however, is the $100,000-added Belmont Stakes June 16, when the Kentucky Derby and Preakness survivors meet for an adjustment of three-year-old ratings.

The Belmont Stakes is 1 1-2 mile "test of the champion," final number in the triple crown, to be run for the 83rd time.

For the first time this season the jumpers return to New York with races through the field every day except Saturday and holidays.

Among the major stakes coming up at Belmont are the $30,000 Metropolitan Handicap May 19, the $25,000 Withers mile May 26, the $50,000 Suburban Handicap, one of the country's major events, May 30, the $50,000 Coaching Club American Oaks, the three-year-old Fillies Derby, June 2, and the $20,000 Peter Pan Handicap, a final prep for the June 9 Belmont.

They are on option to the Mudhens subject to 24-hour recall.

The Tigers must release one other player when ailing catcher Bob Swift returns to the active list May 27. He underwent an operation shortly before the season opened.

Valleyfield Wins Alexander Cup For First Time

Toronto, May 14—(CP)—The 1950-51 hockey season came to a bedraggled end Saturday night.

Valleyfield Braves won the Alexander Cup, Canada's top amateur award. Only 2,787 cared.

The 2,787 looked lost in the 12,000-seat Maple Leaf Gardens as Braves defeated Toronto St. Michael's Monarchs 4-1 to take the point series in the final game. The victory was a sad climax to a booming hockey season that attracted hundreds of thousands of fans.

These teams, the cream of the country's senior hockey outfits, played six games in the finals. The average attendance was in the neighborhood of 2,000 a game—not good for any championship match.

Coach Toe Blake of the Braves hit the nail on the head with this comment:

"It was just a case of too much hockey. The series should have wound up weeks ago. Gosh, we're well into baseball and everyone's thinking of golf and other sports."

Braves won the point series 11-4. They took three wins, lost two, games and tied one.

Braves licked like a winning team all the way. They battled through a scoreless first period to score the only goal of the second and then outscored Monarchs 3-1 in the final.

Don Menzies led the Valleyfield attack with two goals, both of them coming in the last period. Jack Schmidt and Jacques Larivee got singles.

Monarchs made a last-ditch offensive in the dying minutes. They yanked netminder Phil Hughes with less than a minute left in the game. The move backfired. Menzies broke up a Toronto rush at his own blueline and skated just far enough to get a clear shot at the empty nets.

When the final bell went, Braves leaped over the boards to receive the trophy, presented by George Dudley, secretary-manager of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

Braves blew a golden opportunity in the first period when they were awarded a major penalty shot, after Toronto defenceman Mat Mesich tripped Georges Bougie in front of the nets.

Andre Corriveau, one of the slickest scorers in the Quebec league, took the shot. He raced in on Hughes, who managed to get a piece of the flying puck, and kicked it to one side.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON

The Kibitzer

Expert bridge includes a bit of lying to partner in the bidding. Its efficiency, however, depends on knowing routine rules. Only then do you know when, and does your partner know if it's a lie.

An opening bid of one shows a hand containing five tricks, four high cards, two "extra tricks." A double for takeout promises the same thing. This you know from learning routine rule.

Take a hand like the one you see here:

♠Q 6
♥K 6 3
♦K J 6 3 2
♣A Q 7 5

If you are the dealer, do you have a true opening bid? No. You lack a sure trick for it, I know how tempting it is for you to open with it anyway. But why lie about it and fool your partner??

Pass and wait for some other player to open the bidding. If an opponent opens you are in a position to tell partner the truth. Oddly enough you can tell him the truth with a lie.

If an opponent opens you can double for takeout. With the above hand is as good as an opening one bid. And you do not have everything promised by an opening one bid. So, how can you double for takeout?

You passed an opportunity to make an opening bid. This told your partner you lacked some quality or quantity for such a bid. Therefore, he knows you lack some quality or quantity for a double.

This does your partner know you are lying. But he is not fooled thereby. Whatever he does will be based on the fact that you are a bit shy of what your bid would ordinarily promise.

This does not mean that partner should start an epidemic of lies between them. It is only an example that proves initiative, not a stifler of imagination, initiative, or card sense.

Actually, a player with routine rules can play rings around any "natural." Why? The routiner can lie without fooling partner. His basics tell him where to apply all the angles.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, May 14—(AP) — Podner, you'd never guess what happens to that there Randolph Scott in his latest movie. He gets kissed.

Not by his boss, either. That's what happens to other movie cowpokes. This wrangler Scott is defyin' the old no-spankin' tradition. He's even gettin' smacked by two gals—Joan Leslie and Ellen Drew.

You might blame the whole thing on that new-fangled television. Or so sez Harry Joe Brown, the feller who's producing the new Scott flicker, "Man in the Saddle."

Fig Shots and Flicks, Too

"With so many westerns on television," the man sez, "we have to give the public something more than a routine western. We have to give them a strong plot."

This feller Brown started making shoot-'em-ups after the First World War and has 'em pegged to a system now.

"Western picture fans—and that includes just about everybody—have rigid requirements for what they see," he sez. "They want action. If you don't give them action enough, they get restless.

"People can't figure out why such fine pictures as 'The Ox-Bow Incident' and 'The Gunfighter' don't make money at the box office. It's because they don't have action. Make a psychological western and you're in trouble."

Don't Laugh, Podner

"You can have comedy in a western," he sez, "but you can't kid the whole works. People take their westerns seriously. "Ticket" to Tomahawk' and 'Fancy Pants' didn't come up to expectations. People will laugh in a western, but they won't laugh at a western.

Maybe you're a-wonderin' why I'm a-writin' like this today. Been seein' too dad-blamed many westerns on TV, I reckon.

Hi-yo, video!

TRAFFIC JAMMED

Niagara Falls, May 14—(CP)—All available traffic police were on duty yesterday as thousands of cars jammed highways in the district for Blossom Sunday. Most orchards had a good showing for the visitors although blooms were not at peak beauty because of cool weather. No accidents were reported.

AT THE BELLE

Thrilling Entertainment In "Samson and Delilah"

Spectacular was the adjective used in advance praise of the picture Cecil B. DeMille's "Samson and Delilah" which opened Saturday at the Belle theatre, and spectacular is the right word for this mammoth Technicolor attraction that reaches new heights in screen entertainment.

Magnificence, splendor, excitement, romance, adventure, thrills suspense, beauty, great acting, memorable scenes, you name it and this great Paramount picture based on the Holy Bible, Judges 13-16, has it. And it has it in such quantities that "Samson and Delilah" is destined to go down in history as one of the most amazing film achievements of all time.

As the mighty Samson, Victor Mature turns in a remarkable portrayal that is almost unbelievably perfect. He not only looks the part of the strong man of Gaza, but plays it so convincingly that even his most staggering feats of strength, and there are many, prove wholly acceptable to the imagination. And in his scenes with Miss Lamarr, too, have that fame quality of credibility and sincerity. It is, without a doubt, the finest performance of Mature's career.

Breathtakingly beautiful in her first technicolor picture, Hedy Lamarr is a provocative Delilah. It's easy to see why any man would be completely unable to resist her ravishing and seductive charms. But the Viennese star does more than just look beautiful in "Samson and Delilah." Her portrayal of the Bible's famed temptress is an inspired bit of acting that comes through on the screen with a raging passion almost overpowering in its intensity.

In the other starring roles, George Sanders, Angela Lansbury and Henry Wilcoxon give impeccable performances. In fact every member of the huge cast fits so perfectly into his or her part that they seem not to be acting but actually living this exciting drama.

Superbly directed by Cecil B. DeMille, "Samson and Delilah" is the crowning achievement of the venerable producer's long career. It should be number one on your list of entertainment "musts."

AT THE CAPITOL — Harry James, Maureen O'Hara and Dick Haymes are co-starred in 20th. Century-Fox's gay Technicolor musical romance, "Do You Love Me?" which opens tonight at the Capitol Theatre. The hit was directed by Gregory Ratoff and produced by George Jessel. On the same program, 'love', adventure!, and romance! "Bomber's Moon," starring George Montgomery and Annabella.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

For Tuesday, May 15

March 21 to April 20—(Aries)—Better rely some on past experience, others' knowledge. Stars say little outside assistance likely. Know the facts, bank on sound information only. Be wary of gilded schemes.

April 21 to May 20—(Taurus)—An authoritative attitude, yes, but if you are entitled to it and know you are right. Anyway, be also tactful. Co-operate, be friendly for top results.

May 21 to June 21—(Gemini)—Some unfriendly periods likely now. Pride, perhaps will be submerged in the general interests of all. An emergency condition can create benefits as well as shelve differences.

June 22 to July 23—(Cancer)—Day's outlook about the same as for Gemini; your formula of operation also. Study well, move confidently slowly and don't think you are the only one in any "tough" situation. Faithful.

July 24 to August 22—(Leo)—Proper outlook, even if coy's less generous than you would like, can pull you through to gains. Complimentary manner, sensible direction is what day needs from you, Leo.

August 23 to September 23—(Virgo)—Have you grasped strategic need of more concentration on immediate matters, the value of congenial relationships? Stress today's needs today. Do more to help yourself succeed.

September 24 to October 23—(Libra)—Have your problems in convenient filing for ready reference early. Clear deck of all needless matters. Thus can you readily attempt to cope with things and bring about good results.

October 24 to November 22—(Scorpio)—No need to go guessing for busy tasks, extra work, you will have all you with today, this week. Stars advise more caution and patience for most endeavors. Tread easily.

November 23 to December 22—(Sagittarius)—May be asked to assist in schemes of questionable character — Don't! Regarding loans, be sure you can afford before agreeing. News may be of assistance helping you solve things.

December 23 to January 21—(Capricorn)—Some contradictions may tend to confuse. Be wary of those who exaggerate or readily follow others' statements. Be a careful judge in all instances and protect money, business.

January 22 to February 20—(Aquarius)—Follow in spots for financial issues and new tries. Lean towards sound routine, familiar matters, for security's sake. Study facts, find them before acting. Otherwise generally good prospects.

February 21 to March 20—(Pisces)—A big change now for the good you capable natives of Pisces can achieve. Manufacturing, shipping, promotion work and most business ties sponsored. Romance favored in its turn.

YOU BORN TODAY: Are blessed with many fine qualities, including the will to win, keen perception and practical sense. Be aware also that you often are over-persistent and are likely to overtax your strength. You help make happy domestic surroundings, are entertaining, should love music, art, and can be the life of the party. Generally fine-tempered, but wise to avoid holding grudges. Are honest, able in business, science, construction. Don't be stubborn. Take sensible care of throat; check appetite.

WHY WE SAY

Cover the fire
In the Middle Ages in France outdoor fires were ordered to control the people. They instituted a system of ringing a bell at night as a signal to cover or extinguish household fires. With the fires out in the cold weather, little activity continued. Cover the fire in Old French was "covrefeu" which turned into our English word curfew.

Kids Have Top Place in Classes

There's a noise coming out of many of the public schools around the nation that has folks badly worr1ed. It's like the noise of the wolf pack. Discipline is taking a beating, and the struggle against growing adolescent rowdyism complicates a problem already serious, Chester L. Saxby writes in The Saturday Evening Post.

9 Resignations

Teachers in numerous centres testify that unruliness uses up half the class time and most of their strength. I know one West Coast high school from which nine members of the faculty have resigned years ahead of the legal retirement age, for this reason alone. In Midwestern city system, 30 per cent of the new instructors quit each year because they couldn't take the wear and tear on their nerves. It is as so, what's happening to the nervous systems of the youngsters?

We have known for some time that the home has changed hands. Now comes a much more alarming aspect; lack of control over large groups of youth supposedly learning to live together. Though we are not ready to conclude that the walls of public education are tumbling down before the trumpeting and snorting of the marvericks, evidence of an unhealthy situation is widespread. Disturbers get shocking support. Children have learned to organize against authority. On the East Coast a high school student body walked out in open rebellion when an athletic coach was transferred. In the Far West a disciplinary ultimatum was delivered because two boys were dropped from the football team.

Can't Expel Them

I know one school in which experienced and normally mild women teachers fight insolence with their hands, scurrying dismissal to hold down the teacher-batting. In another high school, far removed, incoming teachers are warned by dozens of pupils that their jobs depend on their popularity. A school in a restricted residential district of a large city has several-three-generation cases a court officer told me. Most of these rampaging youths can't be expelled; they are under sixteen years old.

Of course, one answer exists for all this trouble: The flesh in enforcement offices is weak. School authorities parents and governments fear the kids, while the kids fear nobody. Recognizing the mounting clamor as a desire for independent thinking, the administration in a midland city has been hard at work molding the curriculum into "socialized and progressive" lines, seeking parental channels for the youthful disorder it can't defeat. The idea spread.

May Be Hope

This has led to a counter-revolution of parents in four or five cities where this "progressive education" experiment is being tried.

And therein may lie the real hope for sound education without sound effects. For published surveys in these cities show strong opposition to stop-gap measures; they also showed demands—some of them downright militant — for stricter enforcement of school rules and more old-fashioned teaching of basic requirements.

We can afford to put up with more than normal bad manners. Psychologists prophesy that mounting revolt against school authority will ruin those who get away with it. They venture that if some inhibitions are not developed during adolescence, social requisites will demoralize us in adult life. They insist that schools enforce proper discipline, to change the "me-and-I-make-me-do-that attitude, so that fewer of their charges will be fired from jobs later in life.

Near Heartbreak

Schoolteaching has always been a nervejangling job. Without solid backing from the public, it can be the road to disillusion and heartbreak. Boil down your million-dollar school buildings, and all you've got is a lesson. Make it too tough for her, and all you've got is a harassed and sometimes inarticulate mother—plus television.

Canadians Spend $6,000,000 Yearly on Dance Lessons

By VIC MORRIS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, (CP) — Canadians learning to dance shuffled to the tune of $6,000,000 last year as the waltz, fox trot and samba held sway in dance studios across the land.

A professional dancer here, Jack Dell, says there are no age limits in this business. Teenagers and elderly folk alike receive the same instruction and enjoy it.

It is estimated the 250 schools in Canada, employing about 4,-500 dance teachers, collected $3,-000,000 from ordinary citizens wanting to improve their dance floor abilities. The other $3,000,-000 came from persons aiming at professional careers, mostly specializing in ballet or tap dancing.

Men are in the majority in the ballroom classes and are favored by the operators "because men are more liberal with their money", according to Dell. But the average man is shy when it comes to lessons.

"We only get him when his wife or girl friend goads him into taking lessons," said Dell "Then he will come to us, but generally only on the promise that we keep the fact confidential."

Most women on the other hand are eager to tell their friends they are taking lessons.

Big Dividends

The business pays out big dividends to the operators while teachers can earn salaries ranging from $40 to $75 weekly, depending on experience.

Schools maintain strict disciplines between teacher and student with a definite ban on off-school fraternization. However, cupid finds a way and it is not uncommon for a pupil to marry his teacher.

MOUNTAIN VIEW

Season's Card Parties' Total Receipts $119.63

Mountain View—The last community card party of the season was held recently with Mrs. Alan Wallbridge and Mrs. E. Lott sponsors.

There were 10 tables in play. The winners were: ladies high, Mrs. Fred Lee; men's high, Mr. Grant Minaker; lone hands, Mrs. Lett; low score ladies, Mrs. J. D. Keeble; low score men's, Mr. Douglas Black.

Total receipts for the season $119.63.

Mr. J. D. Keeble moved a vote of thanks to the ladies who sponsored the parties and also to Miss M. Huff for her services.

On Thursday evening Miss Mary Huff was hostess at Mountain View School to a capacity crowd when the Women's Teacher's Association entertained their respective trustees, secretaries and their wives to a social evening.

Miss Pearl Neal entertained Miss Shirley Thompson and Miss Yvonne Poste at the supper hour on Sunday evening. The occasion was Pearl's 18th birthday.

Miss Nellie Sprague celebrated her 17th birthday on Sunday by entertaining a number of her classmates of BCIVS at her home in the afternoon and at the supper hour.

Miss M. Huff and pupils observed Arbor Day on Friday.

He Came to Kill

By Adeline McElfresh

Miss Agatha appeared at the out of the field jacket that had head of the stairs, wraith like in her long flowing gown and faded wrapper.

"You—you'd best come up, Clem." Her voice seemed to be reaching for help; she put a hand to her lips, as though to pull it down. "It's Sondra. She's — gone."

Deputy Sheriff Martin Preston tossed his belligerent felt hat on the kitchen table and shrugged superior.

"The boys all gone?"

Purdy nodded. "They'll be back in the—this morning."

"What good will that do?" Mart demanded wearily. "We've muffed it all along Clem. If we'd had the sense to take Peter in we could have sweated it out of him, somehow."

Leeana poured scalding coffee and handed the cup to him. He took it without thanks, too tired even to smile. In another two hours it would be dawn, and the search would begin again. Would that, she wondered, be too late?

"I can't understand it." Mart said. "If Sondra left in that taxi she should be in Thorne City somewhere. She isn't, so"— he took a deep breath—"we're up a blind alley."

The cab driver's telling the truth. He drove right back to the Red Arm, went in for a snort, and then took the prosecutor's assistant home and put him to bed." Mart sat back, his face grim. He did was go over the house and grounds till a grasshopper could not escape."

Leeana nodded. "I know. But what if Sondra and Peter had planned to meet . . somewhere. Couldn't they?"

"So dramatically!" Purdy was skeptical.

"I think not." Mart said, but without the sheriff's sarcasm. "Why put the finger on themselves like that? They're in enough trouble as it is."

"Maybe," Leeana admitted. "But if the murder is Jasper—"

"If," the sheriff snapped. "Well Mart, I'm shoving off. You stick around till daylight; I'll be back by then if the old bones hold out. As for you, Leeana," he said "Mart will lock you in your room. Stay there."

"Mart will do no such thing!"

"I will too." Preston chuckled. "I will brook no disobedience in the Preston domicile. So long, Clem," he said as Purdy turned to go.

Miss Agatha was asleep when Leeana looked in on her as she went to her own room a little later. One thin hand was curled under the wrinkled pale cheek; Miss Aggie seemed peculiarly young, as though she had received in her sleep the youthfulness she pursued so persistently during her waking hours. Poor Agatha, she thought, living always in Miss Maggie's shadow—on her generosity, which must have worn pretty thin at times. So closely , did Margaret Thorne guard the minutes of her family's wealth —seeing the money that should have been divided four ways—between the two girls, Leeana's grandfather and Peter's and Jasper's father—that bare necessities were begrudged. Leeana recalled the bitterness that had lessened with the years following Gramps' death, bitterness that had made her father unhappy, knowing that Gramps' life might have been prolonged if Miss Maggie had been different.

Leeana tiptoed out of the room pulled the door shut behind her, and went into her own room. It was not until she shot the old-fashioned bolt into place that she realized Miss Agatha's door was not been locked.

"Strange," she murmured half aloud.

Wasn't Miss Aggie afraid now? Didn't she realize that there still was Jasper?

Suddenly weary, she leaned against the door, as though to borrow on its strength, Could it be there wasn't anymore never had been anyone—but Miss Agatha?

Of course! she thought numbly. The connecting bath. Doors opening into the hall locked—against Peter. Miss Agatha volunteering the information that she had told Miss Maggie her nephew was dangerous after he learned terms of the proposed new will. Leeana rolled over and sat up.

Had those been Miss Aggie's hands at her throat?

"But if she did and—" Leeana began.

Warned by the frown gathering force on the sheriff's brown, Leeana let it go. She sipped her coffee, watched perplexity clear Mart's tired features, and tried to catch her mental unconquito. Sondra Thorne was nobody's fool certainly she wouldn't try to leave town.

Deputy Preston roused himself from the morass of his cup of coffee. "If you're going to say she came back here, don't" he warned, "Not after telling that he did was go over the house and grounds till a grasshopper could not escape."

Leeana nodded. "I know. But what if Sondra and Peter had planned to meet . somewhere. Couldn't they?"

"So dramatically!" Purdy was skeptical.

"I think not." Mart said, but without the sheriff's sarcasm. "Why put the finger on themselves like that? They're in enough trouble as it is."

"Maybe," Leeana admitted. "But if the murder is Jasper—"

"If," the sheriff snapped. "Well Mart, I'm shoving off. You stick around till daylight; I'll be back by then if the old bones hold out. As for you, Leeana," he said "Mart will lock you in your room. Stay there."

"Mart will do no such thing!"

"I will too." Preston chuckled. "I will brook no disobedience in the Preston domicile. So long, Clem," he said as Purdy turned to go.

Miss Agatha was asleep when Leeana looked in on her as she went to her own room a little later. One thin hand was curled under the wrinkled pale cheek; Miss Aggie seemed peculiarly young, as though she had received in her sleep the youthfulness she pursued so persistently during her waking hours. Leeana recalled the bitterness that had lessened with the years following Gramps' death, bitterness that had made her father unhappy, knowing that Gramps' life might Have been prolonged if Miss Maggie had been different.

Leeana tiptoed out of the room pulled the door shut behind her, and went into her own room. It was not until she shot the old-fashioned bolt into place that she realized Miss Agatha's door was not been locked.

"Strange," she murmured half aloud.

Had those been Miss Aggie's hands at her throat?

Miss Aggie's fall down the stairs might have been staged to draw off suspicion.

Wearily she undressed, flicked off the lamp and stretched out on the bed. She slept almost at once.

The sun, cold and watery-eyed, was hovering on the eastern horizon. Still drowsy, heavylidded, she sat up.

From somewhere, too far away to be anything but a buzz, came the sound of voices. Then there was a shout, and another. Snatching up her robe, Leeana ran barefooted into the hall.

Cynthia Carstairs met her in the downstairs hall.

"Don't go out there!" the housekeeper pleaded.

But Leeana brushed past her, followed the gabbling voices outside and around the house. The greenhouse—

Mart was inside, with old Arthur Jones. They turned together, Mart, sober-faced, came to meet her. Jones just stood there, his seamed old face convulsed with grief.

Men from the sheriff's office came and went, last night's weariness masked by a brief rest and rising excitement. The state policeman, trim figures in their dark blue uniforms, poked into and under things already thoroughly examined — by Thorne county officials as if they expected to find the murderer lurking at their fingertips.

After Miss Agatha Thorne's body had been removed from the greenhouse, Leeana turned from the window through which she had watched and went to sit close by the fireplace, as though an evening's warmth could banish some of her terror. She did not look at Jasper, who nursed his thumping head in the lounge chair across the hearth.

"Maybe she was sorry," Jasper coughed, "I was out like a light, Blotto, if I hadn't been—"

"Don't, Jasper." She couldn't feel sorry for him; there was no room in her heart for anything but the withered feeling that her life had been wrung out and flung back at her—empty. "I just cant believe it. Miss Aggie wouldn't!"

"Maybe she would. People do strange things when they feel a noose tightening around their necks. Wouldn't you?"

Leeana shook her head. "It's no good, Jasper. I can't see Miss Aggie taking her own life. Thornes just aren't made that way!"

"They are made the 'murderer' way!" Jasper was bitter, sarcastic. "You accused Peter and me—but not Aunt Agatha."

"But," Leeana said softly, "maybe Peter's dead too."

"Exactly!" boomed Dr. Zimbrunsky from the doorway. "Or maybe he isn't. What interests me now is: How did that old lady managed to get herself hanged to that rafter—without standing on a chair?" He looked from one to the other, and Leeana felt her flesh crawl at the implication. "The gardener's chair is over near the furnace."

A natural thief?

Not at all! The raccoon is not the robber his appearance leads you to think he is. The mask of dark fur across his eyes makes him look like a bandit. But even though he does most of his prowling at night, the raccoon lives almost entirely on small turtles, clams, crawfish, and other inhabitants of fresh-water streams and lakes.

ONE KNOWN DEAD AND FIVE MISSING IN COLLISION

Navy Seaplane Tender Coal Collier Collide

Norfolk, Va., May 15 — (CP)— The U. S. Navy today announced that the toll of yesterday's collision between the seaplane tender Valcour and the collier Thomas Tracy stands at one known dead, five missing and presumed dead and 19 in hospital.

The list was revised downward from last night's announcement of 11 known dead because that was based on "an estimate" that nine bodies were in the engine — room of the fire-ravaged Valcour.

A total of 190 men were accounted for. Two bodies have been recovered.

The navy today postponed attempts to enter four compartments of the Valcour because of the gasoline gasoline fumes.

The Valcour had 70,000 gallons of gasoline aboard when she collided with the collier some five miles east of Cape Henry.

A gaping hole in the bow and evidence of severe fire damage was found aboard the Tracy when she docked late yesterday under her own power at Newport News, Va. But there was no trace of casualties to crew members.

The Navy said the two ships were headed in the same direction and the Valcour had passed the other when a steering control failure jammed the rudder. The tender cut across in front of the Tracy and was struck.

A 2,400-ton vessel, the Valcour is 320 feet long. The Tracy, owned by the M. and J. Tracy Company, of New York, is 426 feet long and displaces 4,607 tons.

CANADA AND U.S. ON BEST OF TERMS SAYS PEARSON

Statement Given To Request by Drew

Ottawa, May 15 (CP) —Canada and her big neighbor to the south still are on the best of terms, External Affairs Minister Pearson assured the Commons last night.

That was his reply to a request by George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, that the minister bring "out into the open" any reasons for recent criticism of the United States in her relationships with this country.

Mr. Pearson said there apparently has been some misunderstanding of a recent speech in Toronto, where he said Canada will not be content to be an echo to the U.S. on foreign policy.

He had not, as Mr. Drew suggested, spoken on a "personal pique." When he spoke as Minister for External Affairs, he spoke as a Canadian, analyzed that Canada's voice be not misunderstood and that Canada stand on her own feet while marching in step with her neighbors, especially the U.S.

"Our relations with the United States," said Mr. Pearson, "continue to be on a good and friendly basis."

Completing a lengthy foreign-policy debate, Mr. Pearson also reiterated his belief that the United Nations would be "profound-ly mistaken" if it adopted a policy of bombing north bases in Manchuria, blockading the Chinese mainland and using Chinese Nationalist forces in Korea.

Such a move would not end the war in Korea, and indeed, might lead to unlimited action and story of Russia directly into the conflict, Mr. Pearson said, thus unleashing of a third world war.

While he did not refer directly to Gen. Douglas MacArthur, he recalled that some in Canada and the United States have advocated the adoption of such strategy.

Sees No Indication

He said he sees no indication that the Chinese reds are ready to negotiate a peaceful settlement, but, at the same time, he does not believe they will continue indefinitely with their present campaign without realizing that it is not going to succeed, that is being served by the Korean aggression.

Mr. Drew urged that Canada declare herself against the "unwarranted attacks on the United Kingdom and the United States and remain on the side of the latter between this continent and Europe.

Observing that there had been criticism in Canada and elsewhere of the continuing campaign before the U.S. Senate Armed Services and Foreign Relations Committee, Mr. Drew said they had demonstrated to Moscow that in a democracy free discussion was not afraid of free speech.

COMMUNIST CELL WORKING

Concord, N. H., May 15 — (AP) — Frank Sawyer, state adjutant of the New Hampshire American Legion said yesterday a communist cell capable of sabotage is operating in the Portsmouth Navy Yard. He said the New Hampshire American Legion has been investigating since last October and that information was given to Styles Bridges (Rep. — N.H.).

Bradley Says U.S. Not Prepared For War With Russia

Denies Chiefs of Staff Overridden by Truman

Washington, May 46—(AP) — Gen. Omar N. Bradley testified today the United States is not ready for a "showdown with Russia and should not risk world conflict, by adopting Gen. Douglas MacArthur's Korean war proposals.

Making plain he considers Russia to be the United States' real foe, Bradley said MacArthur's proposals for direct blows at communist China "would involve us in the wrong war, at the wrong place, at the wrong time and with the wrong enemy."

Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs, of Staff, told Senators he knows some critics are "impatient" with the U.S. government's plan to fight a limited war in Korea and are calling for a showdown with the Soviet Union. Bradley then added:

"From a purely military viewpoint, this is not desirable. We are not in the best military position to seek a showdown, even if it were the nation's desire to forfeit the chances for peace by precipitating a total war."

Disagrees With MacArthur

Appearing before two Senate committees investigating MacArthur's dismissal from the Far Eastern commands, Bradley also said:

The Joint Chiefs—top military planners of the army, navy and air force — believe MacArthur's proposal would increase "the risk of global war."

That they are in a better position than MacArthur to assess the risk of general war and to judge of the United States' military resources.

Nothing would "delight" the Kremlin more than for the U.S. to adopt MacArthur's strategy and carry the fighting to China, Bradley said.

Bradley said it was "just not so" that President Truman, State Secretary Dean Acheson and Defence Secretary George Marshall "have a policy all their own, and that the joint chief of staff have been overridden."

MacArthur, when testifying before the Senate committee understood the joint chiefs had endorsed his proposals and he 'assumed' they were vetoed by Truman or Marshall.

Other High Spots

Here are other high spots of Bradley's testimony:

1. He believes the administration's "global strategy" of avoiding all out war with Russia at this time "is paying off."

2. The "containment policy" is no guarantee that a world war will not be thrust upon us" but he says it is a "policy of firmness and determination without provoking war." He says to improve our military power" is the one to follow.

3. There is "real danger" of Russian intervention if all-out war is carried to red China, although it is "impossible to say" about the degree of the risk.

4. The Chinese Nationalist troops now on Formosa have "very limited capabilities."

5. He favors economic sanctions against red China but opposes a naval blockade—as advocated by MacArthur—because it "can be taken as an act of war" and would put the effective navies all United Nations members joined in it.

Medical Assoc. Told Planes Verging On Speed too Fast for Human Eye

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
(Associated Press Science Editor)

Denver, May 15 (AP)—Aviation planes are verging on a speed too fast for the human eye.

Supersonic flight is the term that it was explained to the Aero Medical Association today. It will travel about half a mile, before the pilot of another plane even recognizes what it is, and by the time you are on the ground, they will come that much closer before you can even react.

This report on visual problems of speed was made by Capt. Gordon Dr. Richard A. Byrnes, of the United States air force school of aviation medicine at Randolph Field, Tex. The delay in seeing, he said, is in the human eye itself, the time it takes nerves to register an image. At the back of the eye is a layer that image is transmitted to the brain.

comes into view travelling at 1,-800 miles an hour, it will go about one-tenth of a mile before it is even seen. That is because the eye and brain take between three-hundredths and one-tenth of a second to see at all.

And this beats in the shocking fact that if two came out of the clouds, head on, at 500 feet apart they will probably never see anything before they collided.

If they emerged at 3,000 feet the pilots would know there was something in front of them, but would surely collide, possibly without recognizing — never knowing were hitting.

If they emerged four miles apart they would have just four seconds in which to see, think and dodge.

Human eyes, said Dr. Byrnes, will not be generally adequate

Calls on House To Investigate Stock Racketeers

Toronto, May 15 (CP) — Alvin Caldeen, executive vice-president of the Ontario Liberal Association, last night called on the Ontario Legislature's Crime Investigating Committee to probe Toronto "stock racketeers."

In a half hour "provincial affairs" speech over a CBC Ontario network he said:

"There has been set up by the government a select committee to investigate law and order. May I suggest that the attorney-general, who is chairman of the committee, bypass the cigar store bookie for a few days, and go after the fellows who live, not on the $2 bets, but on the $20,000 nest eggs of the unsuspecting investor."

He urged that the committee "investigate the weakness of the Ontario Securities Commission."

"If something is not done at once then the people of Ontario are left to conclude that the government is a mute witness to the sure of an unwholesome kind, that the power and wealth of the stock racketeers is tending to subvert the Ontario government.

"What I have said about stock racketeering is not meant to be politically slanted. A serious mess exists. Let us clean it up.

"Not only are these Bay Street bums leaving personal tragedy and ruin in the homes of their selected victims but they are seriously handing out good name in the United States at a time when good relations between these two countries are very important."

MADE SETTLEMENT

Pittsburgh, May 15 — (AP) — Arthur P. Schultz of Caernarvon, Md., was bitten on the right hand by "Jumbo Rollerhead," a 700 pound pig at Greensburg, Pa., county fair Sept. 1, 1948. Schultz filed a $10,000 damage suit against the Fair Association. The Association claimed Schultz teased "Jumbo." This Schultz emphatically denied. Yesterday they reached a settlement with Schultz settling for $1,550.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, May 15 (CP) Synopsis: London was the coldest spot in Ontario Monday night with a temperature of 42. Elsewhere the mercury held in the 50 to 60 range, moderating sharply with the weather at Churchill — drifting snow and a temperature of 16 above.

Cooler air will push into northwestern Ontario tonight, but central and southern regions will enjoy another hot summer day Wednesday.

The four sweepers which accompanied the Ontario Mackinaw there were of some help to five fishers there, but the crews of more serious fires, Blind River to Sudbury, are too far south to receive this help.

Former private of the Royal Rifles of Canada, Harold Mayne, who used to live around Stirling and was recently released from Korea, not forgotten three years and eight months in a Japanese prison camp.

This morning, Mayne, one of the heroes of Hong Kong signed the "dotted line" as an applicant for a settlement in the 25th Canadian Brigade, through the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

Mayne saw the Jap flood over Hong Kong, when he and several of his fellow Canadians were taken prisoner. He tells a colorful story of prisoner-of-war experiences. He recalled being incarcerated in a damp cellar when he and his fellows caught rats. Later they enjoyed rat stew.

He is single. He said, Mayne, deprived of action through his being taken prisoner-of-war is anxious to get back into the army.

At least he was. He signed the application this morning and was transferred with fifteen other applicants to Kingston. This brings the total of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

Says A-Shelters Should be Part Of New Homes

Toronto, May 15 (CP)—Persons who build houses should consider constructing atomic bomb shelters, Brig. M. M. Dillon said Monday. Addressing the annual convention of the Building Industry Conference of America Inc., the London professional engineer and civil defence official said new homes being built in possible target areas should be designed with reinforced concrete shelters connected to the basement and provided with ventilation.

BUILD PENICILLIN FACTORY

United Nations, N. Y., May 15—(AP) — The United Nations said yesterday it will help the government of India build a $500,000 penicillin factory. The World Health Organization, a UN agency, will supply the technical know-how and $320,000 for training Indian workers.

Eisenhower Looks Behind the Ears In Inspecting Atlantic Pact Armies

Udine, Italy, May 15 (AP) — mored cars drawn up. When he reached the end of the line he turned to the commander and said:

"There's just one thing I would like you to please have this whole line move forward for 50 yards."

The line rumbled forward. They went 50 yards, then on, and on, and on.

"That command did you give them?"

"I told them to advance—about 50 yards."

"That looks more like 150 yards to me," Eisenhower retorted and walked up to look closer. Then in front of the tanks, was a little dirt mantling the new line.

"Oh," said Eisenhower. "Now I see why," he grinned.

The energetic Atlantic Pact commander drives himself hard. In three days in northeast Italy he inspected every kind of military force in the area and most of the military posts.

Talk of Possible Peace Feelers Spreads Among Senators As Bradley Takes Stand in Inquiry

By JACK BELL

Washington, May 15. (AP)—Unconfirmed talk of possible emergency peace feelers in Korea spread among congressmen today as Gen. Omar N. Bradley carried on the administration's military reply to Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

Before Bradley's scheduled appearance (at 10 a.m. E.D.T.) in the Senate inquiry into MacArthur's ouster, Senator John J. Sparkman (Dem.-Ala.) told a reporter he the feeling is growing among Senators that the Chinese communist may give some early sign of willingness to negotiate.

Defence Secretary George C. Marshall, who completed yesterday about 22 hours of testimony spread over seven days, declined to discuss peace probabilities. But other Senators who heard his testimony have indicated they think Marshall must have some reason for what they regard as relative optimism on his part.

Sparkman said he thinks Marshall made it clear there isn't too wide an area of difference between MacArthur and the administration, but that the difference is vital.

"MacArthur is proceeding on the theory that red China is a government in its own right and can make its own decisions," the Alabama Senator said. "Gen Marshall and the administration leaders believe that what red China does is dictated by the Kremlin."

On the question of possible peace feelers, Sparkman made it clear he has no knowledge of any specific move.

Believe Reds Will Be Forced

But he said some members of the two committees are so impressed with Marshall's recital of American success in decimating the communist troops that they believe the reds will be forced to seek an early truce.

"We just have the feeling that the Chinese reds can't go on much longer under the losses they have been sustaining," he said.

Marshall wound up his testimony yesterday by telling the committees that as far as he knows every responsible United States military leader—including Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower—favors the President's plan to fight a limited war in Korea.

This was in line with what some Senators said was the administration's strategy to bring the military leaders down from their mittees and have them voice opposition—one by one—to the MacArthur proposals.

Administration Senators said they hope in this way to overcome the tremendous impact they conceded MacArthur made on the American people by his address to Congress and subsequent testimony.

Defence Production Program Boosts Employment Figures

Ottawa, May 15 — (CF)—The government's defence production program is beginning to make itself felt on the employment situation, the Labor Department announced today.

Its report covering the first two weeks of April, the department also noted that the tempo of activity in farming, fishing, construction and transportation increased during the period.

"Largely as a result of the expanding defence program, the report said, "there have been increases in employment over the last year of some 4,000 in the aircraft industry, about 1,000 in shipbuilding, and approximately 18,000 in primary iron and steel, iron castings and machinery, 2,-500 in the smelting and refining of non-ferrous metals, and 4,001 in chemicals."

Contracts Help

The department predicted that expansion of plant facilities, brought about by defence contracts, "will add considerably to the spring increase in construction employment and has important implications for employment in the petroleum, chemicals, aircraft, iron and steel, nickel and electrical apparatus industries."

Effects of extensive resources development projects are expected to be confined to the construction industry "for some time yet." There include the railway to the Quebec-Labrador iron deposits, the diversion of water power for new aluminum developments in northern British Columbia, and the Hydro developments at Niagara Falls, various parts of northern Ontario and the interior of British Columbia.

However, the rate at which workers were being absorbed by April 19 had "by no means reached its peak," the report said. At that time there were 258,000 applications for work on file at National Employment Service offices—a decline of 24,700 from April 3.

Persons seeking jobs at April 19, with figures for April 5 in brackets:

Newfoundland 11,900 (12,800); Maritimes 32,300 (34,000); Quebec 92,100 (94,500); Ontario 50,400 (53,900); Prairies 41,600 (41,-800); Pacific region 33,100 (32,-100).

Three Montreal Men Remanded In $8,000 Robbery

Sarnia, May 15—(CP)—Three Montreal men, arrested Monday following an $8,000 weekend robbery of Walker Brothers' Supermarket here, pleaded guilty in court today and were remanded to May 23 on charges of breaking entering and theft.

Tse men, Maurice LeBlanc, Donat Laroque and Conrad Levesque, were arrested in Guelph during a routine police investigation of parked cars. Police said the men had $1,000 cash in their possession, other cash totalling $700 hidden in the car and a safe con-

Security Police Question Poles Regarding Riot

New York, May 15 (AP)—The New York Times in a dispatch from Paris says today more than 1,000 Poles have been reported questioned by security police in Stettin in the last month as participants in a riot following the fatal shooting of five Poles April 9 by a Russian major.

The shooting was an enraged mob, which gathered after the shooting, was reported to have slain four Polish police because they made no attempt to capture the unidentified Russian officer.

The Polish press has omitted any mention of the incident which has fanned anti-Russian sentiments in the Baltic port to the highest pitch since the Second World War, the dispatch says.

The Times story gives this account:

The Russian major, arguing with Polish police in the street, suddenly pulled a pistol and shot down the Poles in front of him, walked down the street, killing a doctor and a woman.

The major then hid in a cellar and later shot a Polish militiaman who appeared on the scene.

A crowd of Poles, attracted by the shots, demanded police go in and get the major. When the police failed to do so, a riot flared and four police were killed.

Finally another Russian officer and squad men appeared on the scene and escorted the major away.

The next day all the dead were buried without their cause of death being notified.

Yesterday a Soviet inquiry board reportedly investigated the incident, and since then the security police have been making their arrests.

BOY SCOUTS ENJOY NATURE WEEKEND AT CAMP SIFTO

Recently a number of Boy Scouts of the city, under the leadership of A.S.M. Ken Moore, attended a weekend outing at Bloe Springs, the Gilwell Camp site near Galt. The Scouts were B. Owen, T. Pitman, P. Stewart, R. Fox, J. Bedford, E. Gillespie, R. Kline, and Cub Pat Gillespie.

The nature weekend consisted of lectures, demonstrations, motion pictures of wild life and instructional rambles under the direction of professors Coventry and MacIvor of Toronto University. The boys camped under canvas and cooked their own meals.

The enjoyable weekend was made possible through kindness of two of the boys' fathers, Mr. O. Owen and Mr. J. Gillespie who took the boys in their cars.

Rotarian Tells Club Middle Age No Handicap

Members of the Rotary Club heard a regular classification talk at the weekly luncheon yesterday when Rotarian Phil Morrall of the Canada Packers Wallpaper shop addressed them on his pet subject.

Rotarian Morrall stated that he began this business three years ago because of a desire to prove to himself that "life can begin at 50 and even beyond." He is now a Belleville business of his love of the water primarily, but also because the capital power of this city is one of the highest in Ontario.

At the conclusion of his talk he asked the members to look under their chairs where he had previously placed a birthday tag.

Rotarian Art Bateman was presented with one gallon of paint when he found the tag.

At the district meeting held recently in Toronto, John Deacon acted as song-leader and solist while Dr. Bert Howard spoke on Youth Service.

It was reported that the Ontario Society for Crippled Children had received $380,341, as compared with an objective of $375,000. Of this amount the Belleville Rotary contributed $1,965.

An inter-club family party will be held in Picton on the 30th of May under the directorship of Rotarian Clare Morgan and his committee.

Obituary

ROBERT HAROLD BLAND

Following an illness of eighteen months, Robert Harold Bland, 26 St. Paul Street, died in the Ongawanada Sanitarium in Kingston on Monday evening. He was born in Belleville, 56 years ago, being the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bland and had resided in Belleville his entire life. In 1941 he enlisted in the RCAF, basic training at Kingston and served overseas and in France and was discharged from the service in 1919. The late Mr. Bland made many friends in this city and his death will be sincerely regretted.

He was a member of St. Michael's Church and surviving are two sisters, Miss Hilda Bland at home, Mrs. Mervin (Vera) Brooks of this city, two brothers, Harry Bland at home and Kenneth Bland in this city.

Resting at the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, the funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this edition.

LATE MRS. A. I. DONALD

Campbellford, May 15—Funeral services were conducted on Monday afternoon for Alice Isabella Little, wife of Harvey B. Donald of Campbellford, who passed away at her Centre Street home early after a short illness. She was 61 years of age. Mr. Donald is a former mayor of this town. A daughter of the late John Little and Emma Milne of Seymour, Mrs. Donald had lived all her life in Campbellford for the past thirty years. She was a member of St. John's United Church in Campbellford and active in the work of all the church organizations. She was a member of the choir at St. John's for a number of years.

Besides her husband H. M. Donald, is one son Harold Little, at home; her sons. Rev. Dr. D. M. Smith conducted services from the family residence on Centre Street at 1.30 Monday afternoon, assisted by Rev. A. E. Smith of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church. Burial was in Burnbrae cemetery.

Pall bearers were six grandsons, old Pierce Harold Twigg, George Lucy, Stuart Nelson, Robert Batteon and Walter Henson.

EVERETT SILLS (Thurlow Township)

After an illness of some time, Everett Sills died at his home on the 5th concession of Thurlow township Friday morning. He was born at Zion Hill, 86 years ago, being the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Sills. He took up farming early in life and resided on the 5th concession of Thurlow but for the past 28 years has lived on the 5th concession. He had been ailing for some years.

The late Mr. Sills was a member of Foxboro United Church and for some years served as an elder. Surviving is one son Arnold Sills on the farm at home. His wife, the former Magdalena Jones died last year.

Resting at the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, the funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this edition.

LAWRENCE CECIL ROSS (Stirling)

Stirling—Lawrence Cecil Ross, life-long resident of Holloway district and for 30 years, died in the Belleville General Hospital on Sunday. The funeral is being held this Tuesday afternoon from Sidney Baptist Church, interment being in Guffin's Cemetery.

The late Mr. Ross was born at Holloway, 63 years ago, being the son of the late Allan Ross and Della Marshall and has resided in that community all his life. He was a farmer and was well known and highly respected in this district. He was a member of Sidney Baptist Church and at the time of his death was a trustee in the church.

Surviving are his wife, the former Bessie Jane Spencer, two sons, Charles Cecil, of Stirling, and Ronald Roy, of Holloway.

LATE SHELLEY J. ANDERSON

The funeral of the late Shelley J. Anderson was held from the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home on Monday afternoon. The service in the chapel was conducted by Rev. Duncan McTavish, of Bridge Street United Church. Rev. McTavish also said the last rites in Belleville Cemetery.

The bearers were W. D. Reid, Frank Follwell, Robert Pringle, Bruce Latimer, Harry Rollins and Morley Lincott.

Dr. G. S. Cronk Honored by City For 30 Years' Service as M. O. H.

In appreciation of 30 years' work as the medical health officer for this city, Dr. G. S. Cronk was officially honored during Monday afternoon's council session, when he was presented with a cheque by Ald. Haig and cut Alderman A.M. Haig made the presentation on behalf of the city.

"This is an unique occasion," said Alderman Haig as he made the presentation. "Thirty years as medical health officer is unique, especially so in one as busy as Dr. Cronk. He retained the position not because of pecuniary benefit, but through a wish of service to the city."

The aldermen said the presentation was on behalf of His Worship the Mayor; council, the Board of Health and the citizens.

In accepting the presentation Dr. Cronk remarked that it did not seem like 30 years since he had become the M.O.H. for the city. However, he never, he said, enjoyed the work.

"I have been busy, yes," he said, "but I have tried to do the funda-mentals and throughout the entire period I had the goodwill of council."

He said that the establishment of a full time medical officer of health and health department was a "step forward."

"Again I say that I have enjoyed the work, and if I have contributed anything to the health of the city I am happy, I thank you."

Will Not Pave West Bridge Street Hill Until Fall

West Bridge Street hill from the Coleman Street intersection will not be paved this spring after all, it was stated at city council Monday afternoon.

Tests made by the city engineering department have shown that a concrete base is needed before the pavement is laid, and to result the paving will have to wait until autumn. Two weeks ago the McFarland Construction Company stated it could do the work this year if the work was commenced soon. Otherwise their equipment was being moved out of the district.

A recommendation was tabled calling for the public works department to proceed with laying of the concrete base at a cost of $3,000. However, Alderman A.M. Haig raised the question whether or not the matter was referred back.

It was pointed out there was no hurry now for the laying of the concrete base as the paving would not be done until the autumn.

650 Inquiries About District Received by C of C

Nearly 650 enquiries regarding Belleville and the Highlands of Hastings have been received and answered by the Chamber of Commerce from the 1st of January until the 27th of April, when the last count was made.

Although most of these enquiries have been made through the Ontario Department of Travel and Publicity and the Canadian Government Travel Bureau, some have been made directly to the local office.

The majority, of those wishing information are from Michigan, Ohio, and northeastern United States. However, there have been those from Iowa, New Mexico, Arizona, and California asking data on this district.

Only recently a man from Pakistan walked into the Chamber of Commerce office requesting information.

District Students Successful In Queen's Finals

Eight Belleville residents heaved sighs of relief this morning with the publication of final year examination results from Queen's University, Kingston. In addition, 14 students from Trenton, 4 from Brighton, Wellington, Napanee and Thomasburg.

From the city, in the Bachelor of Arts honors course, Donald Ross Reavis and Lois Jean Greenleaf were successful. Four more, Dorothy Elizabeth Bishop, Donald McCrimmon, Jean Mary Lois McIlraith, and Cyril Frederick Powell will be granted degrees at convocation for completing the pass course as Bachelors of Arts. The last two from the city finished the Physical and Health Education course successfully.

Those from the district who completed the pass course B.A. They were Albert Ezra Branscombe, Brighton, Howard Wesley Manchester, Wellington, Shirley Colleen Moore, Napanee, and Claude Hanna Thompson, Thomasburg.

The list of successful candidates from Queen's is the first released by any Ontario university, and will be followed by lists by Uni-

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, May 15 — (CP) — Prices dropped sharply under a wave of selling as the session progressed on the stock market today. Losses ranged from fractions to $3 as the board moved lower over a broad front.

Papers and steels led industrials downward with a wide list of issues lower. Utilities, agriculture, foods, textiles, refining oils, liquors, manufacturing companies and retail stores all shared the decline. Biggest loser was Ford A with a $3 drop.

Consolidated Smelters headed base metals lower with a loss of $2. Noranda was down $1 and the rest of the group dipped fractions. East Sullivan, International Nickel, Golden Manitou, United Keno Hill, Quemont, Waite Amulet and Labrador were the key issues down.

Western oils losses ranged from pennies to the 75-cent drops of Calgary and Edmonton and Home Oil.

Golds remained indifferent with only light trading.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Stocks Weaker On N.Y. Exchange

New York, May 15 —(AP) — Prices broke as much as $5 a share in a selling rush on the stock exchange today.

There was no immediate explanation for the fall. Brokers said it possibly was the result of an accumulation of adverse economic and political news.

The selling drive ended in about 30 minutes.

Hardest hit were oils, rails, steels and motors.

Death of Boy, 17, Ruled Accident

Napanee, May 15—A coroner's jury ruled Monday that 17-year-old Douglas Jones met death by accident May 7 when he jumped from a moving car and was crushed under the wheels of a truck. The jury was told Jones jumped when he saw a collision was inevitable.

Driver of the car, Fred Giles, 18, said he and Jones had taken the car for a joy-ride. He admitted he only held a temporary driver's permit and that Jones had no driver's permit. The accident occurred at a busy intersection.

Earl Richmond, driver of the truck, said the boy's car shot out in front of him from a side street. He said he had no chance to avoid the vehicle, or the youth who jumped.

Fanatics Try To Fire Israel's Parliament

Jerusalem, May 15 — (CP) — Religious fanatics tried to set fire to the Israel parliament while the House was in session yesterday, it was disclosed today.

Police believed the extremists belonged to an organization called Brit Hakanaain.

Police said the arson attempt was uncovered while the Knesseth (parliament) was debating a "work and rest" bill which provides for 47 hours work and a day and a half rest each week.

This has caused some criticism in religious quarters who demand that the Sabbath should be made a compulsory rest day in Israel.

Police said they had arrested 35 youthful suspects and had confiscated an arsenal of explosives and small arms.

Some of those detained are members of the Extreme Nationalist "Stern group," dissolved by the government in 1948.

TORE OFF HAND

Peoria, Ill., May 14 — (AP) — An aerial display bomb tore off an 11-year-old boy's left hand Sunday and injured less severely four other boys who were playing with it. Doctors said Roger Paul, who lost his hand, may also lose the sight of one eye and his hearing may be impaired. Police said the boys found the fireworks bomb on the grounds of an amusement park.

Travels Light

Halifax, May 14 (CP)—For S. Karkkainen, a Finnish immigrant who arrived here today, life is uncomplicated.

An astonished customs officer looked at Karkkainen's luggage and said "Is that all you have?"

The little leather bag contained a shirt, a piece of cheese, a pair of glasses and a cake of soap.

Karkkainen, en route to Port Alberni, B.C., was one of 400 immigrants who arrived aboard the liner Washington.

TOLLS MILLION YEARS OLD

Pietermaritzburg, South Africa (CP) — Tools used 1,000,000 years ago have been found along the Natal coast. The South African Archaeological Society believes that an ancient civilization may have had its origin in Eastern Rhodesia.

THE BACKBONE IS STIFFENING

From out of the muddle created when General Douglas MacArthur was dismissed there appears a ray of hope for the country that has been the basis for some of the only concrete facts which President Truman fired his general. He has so he presented since Truman fired his general. He has told the Russians in no uncertain terms that if they initiate a sneak attack they will pay heavily. At the same time he does not believe that war with the United States will come. It is, however, a very distinct possibility, and on that premise, Secretary Marshall has based his plans. When he tells the Soviet Union that she will get more than she bargained for if she provokes a Third World War.

Two years ago, Britain and her Commonwealth were fighting hard to control the menace that Hitler presented to the world. The United States had not declared war, but was rudely bumped into the fight. It found that she was inadequately protected, and her resources not deep enough to ensure absolute safety. Then the machinery went into motion; the units rolled off the lines, the men were trained, and the war was on south of the border.

In 1951, the picture is somewhat changed. Britain is not yet recovered from her exhaustive financial crises; the Commonwealth is in good shape, but Canada, in particular, is just nicely getting her defence program into working shape. The United States, the richest of all, is getting prepared to fight more and harder. She took a big step when her troops went into Korea from the start, and she has maintained her stake in that war-torn republic. She has contributed from a United States point of view, the best ground troops and air contingents in the world that she could not have considered in 1941.

Now, in the words of Secretary Marshall, Russia will "say a terrible, terrible price, absolutely and certainly," if she plunges into war and drags the western nations with her. It is heartening to see the stiffening of the backbone below the border.

A LOST CAUSE?

Much of the excitement over the theft and ultimate return of the Stone of Scone has abated, but the talk goes on. The daring and cleverness that originally caught the eye and ear of millions of the public all over the world have almost been eliminated by the commercialization of the escapade by its leader, Ian Hamilton. He has written the story in a serial story form that should serve to destroy the saga forever.

Mr. Hamilton's crowing over his party's alleged outwitting of the police does him no credit. As leader of the Scottish fourseome, he has now taken its place in the Scottish pantheon of heroes, and they took in their plot to deliberately steal an integral part of English history. They took the childish way to make their point, and now are bragging of the desecration of Westminster Abbey.

The latest move in Hamilton's direction is to try to get the Scottish Home Rule movement recognized by the parliament of Europe. In a letter to Paul-Henri Spaak of Belgium, president of the Assembly of the Council of Europe, the Stone purloiner asked for an interview, so that he could ask for recognition of his movement. Basic tenet of the movement, apparently, is the establishment of a Scottish parliament as such, and the maintenance of a British federal parliament. On that basis, his claim is that this movement is much like, and is in sympathy with, the principles of European federation.

Mr. Hamilton calls himself the honorary organizer of the movement, whatever that means. He held no "honorary" position in the theft of the Stone of Scone, if one is to believe what he has told. When he and his sympathizers captured the Stone, they also captured the imaginations of hundreds of thousands of people. When Mr. Hamilton began his bragging, much of the thrill was destroyed for the public, and it is not likely that any move he may make in legitimate circles now to advance his cause will gain any great sympathy from the world at large.

OLD ENGLISH LETTER

My English father had a way
Of letter writing time has banned.
"Dear Sir," the opening line would say,
"Today I take my pen in hand."
He spoke of "yours" and to yours he'd write
"I truly hope you are the same."
Whenever dad sat down to write
He never penned a line in vain.

Nice phrases flowed at his command,
Whene'er he took his pen in hand.

With messages the page he'd cram,
Although "yours truly" I prefer,
My father closed with this "I am
Your most obedient servant, sir."

The time it takes to be polite
Is wasted upon us

A bit too thick, I'd say, but then
That was the way of English.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

STRAY KEYS

There is something fascinating about a stray key. I never throw one away when coming across it in the street or elsewhere. I put it with others that have come to me from some source or so I now have a dozen or more. I know not the locks to none of them, but I live in hope that some day one of those keys will fit some lock!

At my summer Nova Scotia retreat, which is on an island, I never throw anything away that looks as though it might sometime come into good use, for living on an island you can't just trot off to a shore on an impulse. So if I have a dozen or so different boxes into which I put various "finds" for emergencies.

So much in life is handled this way. We meet a person of whom we have never before heard. We talk to him a bit. Casually a remark is made that strikes a responding chord in our minds. We are a few fellow collectors of something, or a follower of some writer or artist. We look and feel discovered—a friendship is born.

As human beings we are either keys or locks awaiting the moment when they are and lock open up some unexpected opportunity. Many a country boy has found that he has unlocked a way into some human heart. And as some keys can be said of many kindnesses offered with no thought of any return or reward. How wonderful it is to have done something for the pure pleasure of the act! Especially when offered to a stranger.

Each of us is endowed with a variety of ways and means of distributing ourselves. As though we were a stray key, when, lo and behold, a person appears who proves to be a likely candidate for that keyhole and is another mind and heart are unlocked. Thus throughout life we are forever fitting our keys to locks that open up new life and new worlds, and new knowledge to us.

Many a person has carried about with him one or many stray keys hoping to find the lock that each fits. With patience and courage we have all in a happy measure good time. The right key always fits the right lock!

GRAVEN ON GRANITE

Centuries ago one of the Pharaohs commanded that a great tomb be erected in which his body would later be laid and a carved portion of the stone was covered with plaster, and in the plaster the name of that Pharaoh was inscribed.

Centuries passed, and the waters of the Nile washed away the plaster and with it the name of Pharaoh; and then was revealed for the first time in many centuries the name of Seothenes, and the name was graven eternally in the stone.

Time irons out all inequities, levels all hills, raises all valleys. Men die and the memories of their fellow men, and historians in a few generations remember only such men were right and the accurate mob wrong. Let us be very

ASSORTED GOODS

I've had much pleasure from the past couple of days reading a transcript of one of England's most famous libel cases, Hulton versus Daily Express Photographer Libel Action. Seems so obvious, reading this kindred spirit, that the language of the courts—restrained logical, controlled by impartial authority—is what we need most if we're ever to have a world at peace with itself. If debate in the United Nations' or Big Four meetings were conducted within the borders of such an authority the day of global justice would be near. The essence of British justice is to present and to argue the facts and then to calmly judge the facts. If the world's court we seem to have only challenges and invective. We cannot trust the individual or even individual nation. Lawyers, who know the rules of jurisprudence best, are often among those who, beyond the courts, abuse them most. It seems strange that a philosophy of logic gets a fairer trial than the peoples of the world.

I feel the need for the most intemperate language in the world today, when I read an item about King Farouk. There is the world's most corrupt man, and he was reported to me today of an imaligrant from England's Fleet Street as the "Ascent" prevents him from landing a job. I hope Farouk isn't trying a job. The real trouble is that too many new arrivals from England are now finding employment, and can step immediately into a top position. . . Something should be done about sounds of advertising material that must be lugged door to door by newspaper deliverer I met yesterday starting out from the post office way carrying a huge bundle under a stalwart pack horse; about 90 percent of it material destined for the waste basket. I postmen, I've just learned how one of them has beaten the monotony of delivering the mail. He now wires for a supply of hamburger pellets to soothe the savage beasts. He lives in the vicinity about which town has the prettiest girls. Montreal got by far the most votes, but I'll bet Winnipeg has more pretty girls per block than any city I've ever been to. Don't tell me why.

One of my favorite ladies passes away a little each piece Evelyn Strong, called "Five-Spice" and with the remark that "sure, I'll write more for you" follow. Patience Strong there would be less misery in the world than it is. Leaning on a five-barred gate and gazing into space

You forget the cold world in such a crazy place.

Thoughts of peace into the dreyness of the mist.

For a moment you forget such things exist.

Breathing in the smell of soil fresh - turned beneath the plough,

Looking at a robin-red-breast on a frosted bough.

Conscious of the breadth and beauty of the world around.

Seems as if the earth on which you stand is holy ground.

Listening to the church-clock with its silver-throated chime,

As if the rulers of the world could spend a little time,

Leaning on a five-barred gate, and gazing their eyes would see

A vision of the kind of place God meant this world to be.

I wish the papers would give more prominence to this short invitation to balance up the picture. Story yesterday quoting the Civil Servants Association as the statistical proof that you can travel one hundred miles from Ottawa in a chesterfield airliner without a scratch, which is better odds than you get in a bath tub. But all papers buried the story back with the truss ads. . . Wonder how many readers have been as delighted as I've been with the school text books they're bring home from one of the books used in grades four and five, particularly, are beautifully edited and illustrated. Never heard a popular record that took hold up as well, after endless repetition, as Les Paul's "How High the Moon." Another that's a favorite in my memoirs is "On Top of Old Smoky," sung by the incomparable Weavers. I visited the Weavers in New York's Village Vanguard a couple of years ago, and they're the real thing. If they ever way their impression of "The Midnight Special" on a long distance express. . . Well, I guess it had to happen. A woman's magazine is running a display ad urging us to clever things with men's shirts as casual wear. Why not wear your husband, take the shirt off your back! . . Big Three Unity Much Stronger After Action

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Further consolidation of big-three unity (British, France, The United States) policies for the east and west fronts will be effected when the United Nations Sanctions Committee, which includes these countries, meets at world-wide ban on shipments of war goods to communist China.

There remain several more steps before the measure becomes effective, but the fact that it has been taken towards big three unity, which is what counts, is significant. Coincidentally, the movement of war materials to China was then a burning issue.

The new unity appeared Britain through the last World War told the Commons that cementing of the friendliest relations with the U.S. is a matter of life and death for every British man, for all western Europe. He could have been more blunt. Barring diplomatic delicacy, and said that the security of the western bloc depends on the United States.

There are no political or economic interests which begin to approach the importance of that fact:

The big three must stand together for security.

IODINE KEEPS YOU ALIVE

Chemical analyses made by Jarvis, Clough & Clark of Seattle years ago showed that canned salmon contains virtually the same amount of iodine as fresh salmon, and salmon is one of the richest food sources of iodine before spawning. As salmon approaches spawning season most of the iodine in the flesh passes into the melt and roe. Salmon for canning is taken before spawning time.

Ounce for ounce canned or fresh salmon contains as much iodine as iodized table salt, smoked herring, boiled or baked lobster, or slightly cooked cabbage. Boiling more than a few minutes leaches out most of the iodin or iodid in fruit, vegetables or other food that is cooked for long periods. Along with minerals and vitamins which are essential for good nutrition, Hence the cooking water should always be used in broth, soup, gravy and not thrown away. Also, the last water used in cooking the beet-

Medical practitioners, I think, generally are reluctant to regard iodine as a nutritive element. Their 19th century persistence that iodine is medicine sometimes stands them in good stead when about the domestic use of iodized salt. They imply that it contains too much iodine—but has any medical practitioner ever told you that it predicted that people should use sea food sparingly? Or that iodized salt in an ordinary serving more iodine that one could get in a hundred pounds of fish, assuming one could take that much salt.

The pamphlet The Iodin Italian, available on request if you enclose stamped self-addressed envelope, will tell you what I mean when I say iodine keeps you alive.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Eggs

Is it harmful for a person 50 or over to eat too many eggs? (M. W. L.)

Answer—Too many is an indelite quantity. If it is cholesterol you have on your mind, I may say there is no see evidence sufficient to make me shy of eggs in my own diet.

Corns, Warts and Calluses

Please reprint your cure for warts. (G. M.)

Answer—First paint corn, wart or callus (not bunion) once a day with a solution of 30 grains of salicylic acid in one-half fluid ounce of flexible collodion. This will (I hope) soften it so you can wipe it away, after a week or ten days. Write to me in care and stamped self-addressed envelope for booklet Cosmetic Aids, or booklet Care of the Feet if the trouble is corns or calluses.

The idea of young people submitting to medical examinations before they are married shtred up a great deal of discussion about twenty years ago. Now we tend to warn young couples of any tendencies they may have that could develop, such as tuberculosis, and ruin their married life.

But young people in love do not let warnings of any kind stand in their way. Love, you might say, is a disease that has priority over all others. The scientists did not get very far with their campaign.

There is the angle of their program that might have caught on, confident of this, that God has placed a few fools on the square, that what is soft, worthless, inferior, untrue, will be washed away. And what is true will stand out with all the firmness of granite. With our same human failings it is if our name is worthy to be there.

In God's just universe, the future always belongs not to Pharaoh, but to Soothenes.

if they had stressed it. And that is the advantage that would accrue to married couples who have had a mistaken affair. Marriage becomes a bore to a couple, one of whom has had a passionate affair with another trouble ,while the other loves pot roasts, roast goose, and highly digested diet that are anathema to anyone with hepatic disturbances. The chances of such incompatibility must be that which develops over the dining room table.

A married couple both of whom have diabetes can get along famously with their diets, with their health improved by the same features of their regimen. If a man and wife both have ulcers they can move through life at the same gait, neither being a drag on the other. Nothing could be more agreeable than that a man and woman, both confined to rice and chicken that make them a little cracked, should divert each other with conversation about the Ceylon Caln with some poor normal person.

But the eugenists would look with horror on the prospect of such people as these getting pairings. It is probably best, when love goes you, to let it go. Don't try to go Gallagher.

Council's Failure to Accept Lowest Truck Tender Criticized by City Dealers

Sharp criticism of council's failure to accept the lowest tender for a one-ton truck for the public works department, and also for ignoring a policy of passing around among local dealers, was levelled at members of city council Monday afternoon.

As spokesman for a group of local automotive dealers C. Arthur Bateman said they could not overlook the manner in which the new truck had been purchased and would be doing less than their duty if they failed to protest.

Two weeks ago council gave the public works committee and executive committee authority to purchase the new truck. Tenders were called and a new international truck was decided on by the committee.

Following is Mr. Bateman's protest to council:

Mr. Mayor and Members of the Belleville City Council:

"I am here this afternoon, not only on behalf of myself, but also on behalf of several other automobile dealers of this city, Mr. Harry Moorman, of Riggs Motor Sales, Mr. Don Lee, representing Mr. J. J. Trudeau of Trudeau Motors, Mr. Bob Boyce, of J. B. Boyce and Sons, Ltd., Mr. Harry Gourley of Harry W. Gourley Motors and Mr. Al Reynolds, of Belleville Motor Car Co.

"We dislike very much, Mr. Mayor and gentlemen, having to appear before you today, to take issue with you, or at least with a part of this council, who were on the committee which was responsible for the purchase of a new one-ton truck for this city, less than two weeks ago.

"However, it just does not seem possible for us both as automobile dealers and taxpayers of this city, to overlook the manner in which the new city truck has been purchased, and we feel we would be doing less than our duty, not only to ourselves, but also more particularly perhaps to the taxpayers of this city, if we failed to protest very strongly against the policy of purchasing in this connection.

"I know we find, and I am sure you business men find, it is only natural and necessary in our own businesses, to pass our purchasing around to those who make purchases from us and who help to maintain us in business.

Should Pass Business Around

"Similarly, therefore, it seems no more than reasonable to expect that the city should pass its purchasing around, all things being equal, to the taxpayers of this city, whose taxes help to maintain the city itself, and we would like to suggest to you that in purchasing a truck, or in purchasing anything else, that the business should be passed around, in the future, where it is possible to do so.

"I wish to say, it is perfectly clear that I have no quarrel whatever, and I am sure none of the other members of this delegation have any quarrel with the reputable firm, which obtained the order for the new truck. As a matter of fact, these people are very good friends of mine, indeed.

"At the same time, however, these people have previously received three deals from the city, whereas, most of us present today, have not had a new unit to the city in a long, long time. In my own case, I have never sold the city a new unit of any kind.

"In the case of the truck just purchased, therefore, we feel that any dealer who submitted a price comparable to the price of the one submitted for the truck that was purchased, providing of course, the specifications were as called for, should have received this business.

"When you realize, however, that in this particular case, not only were some three dealers' quotations comparable, but rather they have ranged from $192.00 to $274.00 less than the successful which was paid for the new truck, and considering that all of these trucks came up to the specifications called for, it seems to me, Mr. Mayor and gentlemen, that this situation is nothing short of ridiculous.

"If this is not a direct wastage of the taxpayers' money of this city, I do not know what would be considered as such.

Not Lowest Tender

"Here is a truck purchased by our city, where not only is the lowest tender not used, not the second lowest tender, nor the third lowest tender, nor the fourth lowest tender, but rather the highest. (There was one tender $3.00 higher, submitted).

"Yet, up to the present time, we have not been able to get one reasonable excuse for this apparent wastage of the taxpayers' money.

"We have been given what I think should be considered as three alibis:

"First—That the engineering department, advised they already had three trucks of the same make which were giving satisfactory service. There is no reason we can think of, gentlemen, why any new truck shouldn't give good service.

"Second—That the truck just purchased has some extra equipment on it—more than what was called for by tender, however. In our opinion none of this extra equipment is of any particular value to the city, but if you insist on including it in your cost would have been approximately $45 for this same equipment. This equipment included a deluxe set of shocks and helper springs. Shock absorbers may be all right when put through the ringer for a ride on Sunday.

"Third — Immediate delivery. and Mr. Mayor and gentlemen, I had promised delivery within one week, and I believe the two other dealers quoting within a very few dollars of my price, were in a position to give immediate delivery.

"On Friday of last week, I received a notice from the city treasurer's office, advising my office that I had been fined $25 days late in forwarding the first instalment of our business taxes, and that I was being charged a penalty of 43 cents, which I have now paid, but isn't it amazing the way one department of our city can look after 43 cents, while another department of our city, apparently does not worry about spending as much as $274.

"Mr. Mayor and gentlemen, I feel sure that you can appreciate our position as dealers who tendered on this truck in asking that you give this matter proper attention and then let us have a proper explanation as to why the lower tenders were not used. Otherwise we do not wish to be asked again in the future and I am also Mr. Mayor and gentlemen that you can appreciate our position as taxpayers of this city in demanding a proper explanation as to why 16 percent more of the taxpayers' money than is necessary, was spent in purchasing one truck.

Concerned About Tax Rate

"Those appearing before you today are very concerned regarding the very high tax rate in Belleville and we have had a lot of people recently ask us what is wrong that our tax rate is so high. The taxpayers of Belleville are fed up with the excessive tax rate they are being forced to pay and I am sure a lot of them feel the principle of the way the money is being spent is wrong.

"Why do you call for tenders on anything, if it is to save money, isn't it? Yet, in this case it appears to have been used to spend additional money. There is no use in calling for tenders on anything if they are going to be used for their intended purposes.

"In this particular case, I decided to quote on my truck at cost, to find out for myself what would happen, and Mr. Mayor and gentlemen, I sure found out.

"It has been suggested to me by some aldermen, that if I let you men promise by all that's holy, to practise economy when you are running for office, but that once elected, these promises just don't appear to mean a thing.

"If this incident is an example of the way our money is being spent by this council throughout the year, it not only appear ridiculous, but it is also most alarming indeed.

Entitled to Explanation

"We feel the taxpayers of Belleville, who are already overburdened with taxes, are entitled to a proper explanation through the press, regarding this matter, and I would challenge you, Mr. Mayor and gentlemen, to see that this is taken care of, but please, let's not have any more alibis regarding this matter, but rather let's have the facts as they exist.

"The Chinese have a parable which says "The journey of a thousand miles starts with a single step," and if our appearing before this council today, should prove to be the first step in putting a brake on unnecessary spending in this city, and therefore eventually give our taxpayers some relief in the form of reduced taxes, then we will feel our efforts will have been more than worth while.

"Thank you, Mr. Mayor and gentlemen, for the privilege of bringing this matter to your attention."

Cannot Satisfy Everyone

In reply Mayor R. T. Potter thanked Mr. Bateman for his interest in council matters, but pointed out that council members were doing city business at considerable loss of time to themselves.

The committee appointed decided that the truck purchased would give the best service to the city," he said.

"I must also point out that it is not possible to satisfy everyone, but we always try to do the best we can."

The Mayor said that several of the dealers represented at the meeting had sold new units to the city in recent years and noted that the lowest tenders had been accepted for the purchase of vehicles for the police department and the board of health.

In conclusion Mayor Potter noted there would be an election this fall.

council if the committee had had power to act.

The Mayor said it would be foolish for council to vote on the recommendation as it had already been dealt with by the committee. The report, it was revealed, had appeared in the recommendations through error.

Wrong Policy

Alderman Rollins also felt the time was past when a committee should be given power to act on such matters. "However," he said, "the purchase of the truck has now been made."

Alderman Haig was of the same opinion. He noted that the engineering staff had advised on the purchase of the International truck. "Whether the committee was right or wrong in accepting the advice, I don't know," he said.

Equipment purchased by the public works committee included a street cleaning cart at $1325, a 36-inch power saw at $505.95; International truck at $1,992; front end loader with two buckets and crane, $5,425; and air compressor at $6,145.64. All purchases were the recommendation had come to be made by tender.

$60,000 Debenture Will Be Issued to Assist Hospital

City council yesterday afternoon approved of a by-law to issue debentures to raise $60,000 to reimburse the hospital for capital expenditures and also to provide working capital for the institution.

Alderman Haig noted this was the amount decided upon as being needed and was approved by the city auditor. Provision of working capital at the hospital would result in a saving of purchases, it was stated. A saving of from 10 to 15 per cent would be effected if certain purchases were on a cash basis.

Tabling of a recommendation authorizing applications to be received for a qualified engineer for the city engineering staff led to a discussion as to whether it was an addition to the staff or a replacement which was meant.

Rapid Expansion

When the question was placed the answer was that one of the engineers was quitting and a replacement was needed. Aldermen Lummiss and Argue were not too sure a replacement was needed, even if one engineer did quit. They referred to the rapid expansion in this department.

Speaking for Alderman Thomas who was absent, Alderman Tice replied that in the opinion of one of the engineering staff there was sufficient work for one man for two-and-a-half years working exclusively on grades.

Alderman Lattimer pointed out that the recommendation called only for applications.

"Let's be earnest about this thing," replied Alderman Rollins. "Surely we are not going to call for applications and then not hire anyone. Those making applications will be in earnest."

Means An Addition Claim

Alderman Haig was inclined to think the recommendation was actually that an addition to the staff was intended.

He referred to the "bald" recommendations coming into council from committees which did not fully explain the reason for the recommendation. There was nothing wrong with the system under which the city was operating only that the committee minutes were not expanded sufficiently to explain the facts to other council members.

Alderman Countryman asked regarding an advertisement, which had appeared in the paper with respect to hiring help for the engineering department. He wanted to know whose authority the ad was placed. The answer he got was that no authority was given by the committee.

The recommendation with respect to the application for the placement of the engineering staff was referred back for further explanation.

More Room For Traffic

Parallel parking will be instituted immediately north of the city hall for city market stands. Parallel parking would mean more room for traffic. It was pointed out. Twenty dollars per year will be charged for the stands. Market stands now on the north side of the hall will be discontinued to make room for police cars.

Council voted against a salary increase for Gordon Legatt, switchboard operator at city hall.

City Comptroller H. D. Bateman and Assessor Leighton Thompson were authorized to attend the Ontario Association of Assessment Officials convention at Sault Ste. Marie on June 7-8-9.

Wants to Know Cost

"What will be the cost of their attending the convention?" Alderman Argue asked. "Here we go throwing away a few hundred. The question is, is it worth it?"

Alderman Haig replied he did not know what it would cost, but added it was necessary for city officials to attend the convention.

The Ontario Contracting Company was awarded the contract to build new sidewalks in the city at a cost of approximately $10,000. Plans will proceed for the proposed sewers on Stanley and Russell Streets.

A second switchboard operator for the fire department was approved with council voting to this George Bolton for the job at $100 per month starting June 1. It was pointed out that it was more economical to hire a switchboard operator at $100 per month than to pay able bodied firemen up to $3750 to do this work.

Request Granted

The request of the High School Students' Council for lease of a portion of land inside the race track at the fair grounds was granted.

The city traffic committee will take up with the Board of Transport Commissioners the need for a new car tender bridge over the railroad tracks on North Front Street. It was pointed out that a new bridge would be doubly needed with the four-lane highway north of the city materialized.

Collection of garbage from the Dominion Parasite Laboratory on Dundas Street will be discontinued immediately unless the assessment for garbage collection is paid.

Notice of Motion

Alderman Hyde introduced a notice of motion that on the next council meeting he would move that the end of Zwicky's lane be filled in to a point near the Filtration plant building. He suggested that material from the top of the island be used for this purpose.

Under general business Alderman Rollins said that he had attended a special meeting of the Metro Valley Conservation held at Tweed on Friday evening. At the meeting approval had been given to spend $2,500 in the purchase of waste land in Huntingdon township for reforestation purposes. The above amount would be duplicated by the government, he said. The city share of the $2,500 would be roughly $1,100.

Alderman Thomas raised the question of using part of the former county home barns as storage for city equipment. He noted the home is still being used by the county until the new home on Wallbridge Hill is completed and the county has sub-leased the barns.

CAMPBELLFORD

Fire Destroys Two-Storey Farm Home Near Town

Campbellford — Fire Friday evening destroyed a two-storey farm home owned by Charles Johns about a mile from the community Menie, seven miles southeast of Campbellford. The home was occupied by a French family who came to Canada from France only four months ago to work for Mr. Johns. The family speaks no English.

Majeute, his wife and two children, age 11 months and two years, have taken up temporary residence with Mr. Johns.

Majeute was working in a field near the house, when the fire was discovered. He hurried his family from the building and down the road to the home of Mr. Johns where a call was put in to the Campbellford fire department at 7 p.m. The alarm was sounded, but it was decided not to send the town fire fighting equipment because of the advanced state of the fire, the distance from the town, and the lack of available water supply.

Glen Hay, who lives across the road from the Majeute residence, rushed to the fire. He ran into the house to see if anyone was inside and with David Wallace, who also lives nearby, removed what furniture they could from the blazing home. They managed to get nearly half the furniture out of the downstairs portion before the flames forced them back.

Charles Johns, who owns the home, said it was only partly covered by insurance. Loss is estimated at close to $3,000. No one knows just how the fire started, but it began in a wood shed at the rear of the building and quickly spread throughout the structure.

The house was not wired for electricity.

WEDDINGS

PAGAE—ROOLEID

The first wedding in the new Belaws United Church took place on Saturday afternoon at 3:30 when Rev. R. Macfarlane, Frankford, united in marriage Miss Heidi Rooleid and Mr. Joseph Pagae.

The bride was charming in a navy gabardine suit with black picture hat and accessories, and carried a bouquet of cream roses. The bridesmaid was Mrs. Thompson, of Belaws, and the groomsmen, Mr. Frank Rabel, of Frankford.

Mr. Bill Gill sang "I Love You Truly," and during the signing of the register, the choir sang "O Perfect Love." Mr. Macfarlane presented the bride with a white Bible, as is the custom on the occasion of the first wedding in a new church. The presentation was on behalf of the congregation and session.

A reception was held at the home of the bride, following which they left on a wedding trip. On their return, they will reside in Belaws.

DE GENOVA—GILHOOLEY

Pink and white, snapdragons formed a lovely background in the Church of St. Michael the Archangel, Belleville for the double ring ceremony on Saturday, May 5th., at 10 a.m. when Theresa Joan Gilhooley, of Belleville daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Gilhooley, became the bride of Michael De Genova, of Belleville, son of Mr. and Mrs. James De Genova. Very Rev. Dean Garvin officiated.

Sister Mary Bibianna provided the wedding music and the soloist, Miss Carolyn Forbes sang during the ceremony "Ave Maria" and "On Such A Day, O Beautiful Mother," and during the signing of the register, "Ils Sont Beaux de Our Mother."

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was charming in her bridal gown of slipper satin fashioned with a fitted bodice buttoned down the back with off the shoulder neckline and nylon yoke. The sleeves were tight-fitting ending in points over the wrists, the fourtiert skirt falling gracefully into a train. Her full length veil was held in place by a crownet headdress. She carried a shower cascade of red roses, fern and boucardia. Her only ornament was a gold cross worn by the bride's mother and sisters on their wedding days.

The bride's attendant was Mrs. Courtland (Loyola) Hornbeck, wearing a floor-length gown of mauve nylon, fitted bodice, full skirt and three-quarter length sleeves. She carried a bouquet of roses, carnations and green peas and wore matching gloves and hats.

Mr. John De Genova, brother of the groom was best man, and the ushers were Mr. Andrew Gilhooley, brother of the bride and Mr. Dominic De Genova of Toronto, cousin of the bridegroom.

The wedding dinner for about 80 guests, was served at Tobey's Corners Gardens where the bride's mother received wearing wine crepe, with black accessories and corsage of fern, red roses and pink and white clarkia. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother who was gowned in light blue crepe with navy accessories and corsage of fern, red roses and pink and white clarkia.

The bride's table was beautifully adorned with pink and red tulips, centred by a pillared three tier wedding cake forming a tone between each tier, and topped with a bride and bridegroom underneath at the top.

A toast to the bride was proposed by Mr. Jack Murphy and responded to by the bridegroom.

Amid showers of confetti and best wishes the bride and bridegroom left for British Columbia, from where they will reside in Belleville.

The bride's travelling in a navy blue gabardine suit with pink topper coat, navy and pink accessories, and corsage of red roses.

The bridegroom's gift to the bride was a chest of silver; to his groomsman and ushers, a key chain; the bride's gift to her bridesmaid, a pearl choker.

Upon their return they will reside in Belleville.

Out-of-town guests were present from Buffalo, Hamilton, Toronto, Trenton, Kingston, Westport, Montreal.

Principal G. Anderson Honored By Queen Alexandra Assoc.

In a farewell gesture, Mr. Gordon Anderson, principal of Queen Alexandra School, was presented with a nest of tables last night by the Home and School Association of that school. Mr. Anderson will take over as principal of the new Queen Elizabeth School in the fall.

Mr. Anderson was presented with the gift by the past president, Mrs. R. D. Arnott. In acceptance, he said, "Home and school associations are a great value, and this one has proved that in no small way." He advised ex-pupils that, apart from their own family circle, there was no group with greater interest in the students than that made up of teachers and principal.

Express Thanks

"It is a great privilege to accept the care of the new Queen Elizabeth School," he said, "but I am in no means running away from Queen Alexandra." Mr. Anderson had a two-generation teaching record at the school, and said that he felt happy that many of the families with whom he was associated now would be continuing that association in the new school. "Many thanks for your gift, all of you," he said.

Mrs. Anderson was presented with a bouquet of red roses in appreciation of her association with the group.

In an election of officers, Mrs. C. L. Wallbridge was elected president, to succeed Mrs. Arnott. Her vice-presidents are Mrs. G. D. Dies, Mrs. A. F. Sherman and Mrs. C. W. Howie; recording secretary, Mrs. C. P. Wass; corresponding secretary, J. E. Buchanan; treasurer, Miss Hurtig; executive, Mrs. Gordon Robertson, Mrs. Frank Johnson, Mrs. R. W. Brown, Mrs. F. Cooley and W. N. Hurst.

Mrs. Wallbridge is believed to be the first ex-pupil of the school to become president of the Home and School Association. The first action of the new slate, which will be installed by past president Mrs. R. D. Wallbridge, was to vote $50 to the Queen Elizabeth Home and School Association, when it is formed.

Mrs. R. D. Arnott was presented with her past president's pin by Mr. R. Lennox. Before the new executive was elected, Mr. Lawrence Kells, inspector-administrator of the Board of Education, outlined the new arrangements necessary when Queen Elizabeth school is opened in September. One hundred and seventy-five children from the East Hill, presently accommodated on the West Hill, will return to Queen Alexandra. The number of children from five to seven years of age in the Queen Victoria school area was almost enough to fill that building, so it had been decided to add the grades there at Grade VI. Grade VII and VIII will be accommodated at Queen Alexandra.

May Build School

For the new school, present feelings would indicate that the boundaries will include all students on Albert Street and east of Albert Street. All those west of Albert will go to Queen Alexandra. Mr. Kells said that the Board feels that it will be necessary to consider building another school on the East Hill.

Reports were heard from the recording secretary, and the treasurer. A $10 prize was presented to Miss Daisy Young's class for having won the attendance shield the most times.

Entertainment was provided by Barbara Joan Houston, who sang two songs, accompanied by her brother John. Mrs. Kitty J. Lane now danced the "Skirt Dance". Walter Richards sang a solo, Irene Osborne danced a Scottish jig, and a playlet was presented with the characters being played by Jimmie Murphy, Margaret Arnott, Marie McFarlane, Sandy Casey, Arnold Barkely, Ann Wilkinson, Barbara Jane Fairman, Mary Farnsworth, Jack Hannah, and Melvine Grandame.

Mrs. Bradford Heads Queen Victoria Assoc.

The Queen Victoria Home and School Association last night elected Mrs. G. A. Bradford as its new president. The report of the nominating committee was accepted without change by the Association, and the complete executive will include vice presidents, V. J. White, Mrs. W. A. Van Tassel and Mrs. T. R. Colden; treasurer, H. R. Keller; recording secretary, W. F. Baldwin, corresponding secretary, Mrs. S. Riley, Mrs. G. Durno, W. St. Pierre, J. Wilson, Mrs. R. Sager and M. E. Lysechl.

After considerable discussion, the association agreed to set aside $300 for an intercommunication system for the school. Reports for the year were given by the treasurer and the convenors of committees, with indication shown that the association had a successful year.

Entertainment was provided by Patsy Luck with piano accordion solos, by kindergarten square dancing, under the direction of Miss Marilyn Kerr and Miss Enid Malcolm, and two selections by a choir formed from grades six and seven, under the direction of Allen Boots.

V. J. White led a singsong, and members of the association presented a repeat performance of a radio play "A Day in a Principal's Life". The attendance prize was awarded to Mr. Everett Fairman's class.

Council Discusses Possibilities Of Conducting Industrial Survey

Trenton (Special) — Trenton council and a delegation in full strength from the Board of Chamber of Commerce, heard T. R. Ryan, vice president of Dominion Industrial Associates Limited, of Toronto, point out the advantages of organized survey of the industrial possibilities for presentation to prospective clients last night. He quoted figures between $2,000 and $2,500 as the price the service would cost the town of Trenton.

Mr. Ryan suggested the direct mailing of approximately 2,000 pamphlets at three-month intervals to industrialists and agents interested in expansion and selecting up plants in this district of Canada. He said the area along the river, and in the proximity of the grain & atomic development at Chalk River afforded excellent opportunities for industrial development. He informed Mayor Couch that it was the practice of U.S. industries to space subsidiary factories 25 miles apart with in a radius of 100 miles of the great A-bom projects. Mayor Couch asked the industrial research chief of nearness to war installations had any bearing on industries deciding on plant sites.

Tom McNeil, president of the Chamber of Commerce, said: "I do think that it is absolutely necessary that the town has a survey made, whether it is done by an outside organization or by local parties." He made mention of the trouble the town experienced by not having necessary information at hand for industrial enquiries.

Mr. Ryan pointed out the inducement trade schools afforded industries looking for new sites. Gerald Weaver asked him if the facilities to educate machinists were an incentive for companies to build new plants.

Suggest Commission

Mr. McNeil suggested the formation of an industrial commission with the entire energy aimed at developing the town.

Mayor Couch said he was very much interested in Mr. Ryan's discussion and encouraged a meeting with the research executive to talk over price of inaugurating the survey.

The majority of the council was against deeding block on town property on Meyers Street to the community Centre. The old arena property with an addition of two other properties, was considered the most suitable location for the community project. Some of the members of the Lions Club contemplate fall time acquisition of the old wooden rink and ample property for the community centre would mean a layout of between $30,000 and $40,000. This sum, a committee member estimated, would install the ice making machinery.

Mayor Couch, who made the statement that he was wholeheartedly against the community centre locating on Meyers Street, offered to meet the present arena directors and set the location, agreer wheels in an effort to acquire the old rink site at a figure much below the quote the Lions offered. His Worship maintained that the project stand to cost close to $250,000 should be erected on the best piece of land in town.

Discuss Sub-Division

Fred Hendricks, town clerk O. W. Larry and councillor Jack Sutherland will motor to Toronto this Wednesday to discuss Mr. Hendricks' sub-division project with the planning and development branch of the Municipal Affairs Board at Queens Park. Mr. Hendricks approached council with the object of obtaining services for his property now in Murray township at the west end of the town south of Highway No. 2. The town is considering incorporating the Hendricks' property in the corporation.

Mayor Couch proclaimed June 6 as a "Civic Improvement" holiday and advocated that the townspeople paint up and clean-up so that day and make it an annual event. Roly Whitley chairman of the Board of education planning and development committee, asked the council to consider declaring a public holiday to allow truckers and town workers to draw 1,000 yards of fill to the low spot along the waterfront behind the breakwater at Bayshore Park. He told the town fathers that the land was now flooded due to high water and the Lions Club had planned to utilize the area during the club's regatta June 16.

Mayor Couch asked Mr. Whitley if the Board of Education had been influenced by his statement of a year ago when he declared: "I would resign before I would sanction a $1,000,000 expenditure for a vocational and elementary school." Mr. Couch spoke of the meeting when the Board of Education made demands of council to approve a vocational school ahead of public school expansion. He termed the school board taking one step at a time and voiced his accord in the board's decision to build an eight-roomed public school this year.

See Shirt in 1953

Mr. Couch felt that the proposed collegiate institute would be started in 1953, and instructed the town clerk to draw up an option to buy a tract of land to the west end of the town north of Highway No. 2 from the little estate. for the purpose of building the new centre.

Mr. Whitley stated that pupils asking for technical training in high school here today have to be sent to Belleville at the expense of the town.

Council unanimously favored sending a letter to the family of J. A. Sutcliffe, prominent town citizen who died here last week. In commenting on the message of sympathy Mayor Couch spoke of the late Mr. Sutcliffe's civic achievements and said the town had too few with as much public and interest in civic properties.

Ratepayer Percy Gauen was promoted action when he complained about an open ditch creating an unfortable situation for tenants of houses owned in the vicinity of the dye works. Councillor Sutherland agreed with Mr. Gauen, but said his hands were tied when his budget to right the condition was cut from $13,000 to $3,200. Mayor Couch ordered the enquiry into the cost of tile for the job and the possibility of town workmen handling the work by direct labor.

A by-law was authorized for the purpose of calling an election on January 1 of each year to elect members of the Board of Education instead of following the present practice of electing some and appointing others. It was decided that a seven member board would be a capable body.

Orville Cole, with residence on North Murray Street, was given until July 1 to pay back taxes and make a payment in full of long standing on his original purchase or accept the consequence of an eviction notice. Mr. Cole, who suffers from a heart condition now, is in default of an amount not exceeding much more than $100. He has had his property balance for over three years.

A reduction in taxation was granted the mason board, and the taxes on the rink this year of $105 will be the same as last.

Trenton Mayor Offers Reward

Trenton — (Special) — Mayor Ken J. Couch offered a reward of $50 out of his own pocket last night for information leading to the arrest and conviction or the person or persons who maliciously hurled stones through the new Chamber of Commerce signs at the east and west approaches to the town.

The signs, made out of plywood and painted in the colors of the Royal Canadian Air Force, have drawn great favorable comments from tourists and townspeople since they were erected as an improvement a few years ago.

Lighted at night, the signs carry the slogan: "Trenton the Garrison City."

To date authorities have been unable to gather any clues regarding the act of vandalism and this prompted the Mayor to offer a personal reward.

MAY HAVE TO EXPLAIN

St. Thomas, May 15—(CP)— Whoever dumped debris in the city's water storage basin in spite of a sign warning against dumping, soon may have some explaining to do in police court. The dumping, among other things, left his set of 1950 motor vehicle plates.

U.S.A.F. Planes Added to Force At Trenton Station

Trenton (Special) — Trentonians who have become accustomed to the familiar yellow Harvards streaking back and forth across the sky daily took special notice of a big formation of strange silver-blue aircraft roaring over the town, headed for the Trenton Air Station landing field Saturday.

R.C.A.F. pilots have been doing more than their share of hustling in the last few weeks ferrying into Canada a large number of Texans (T-6) United States Air Force trainers from military bases across the United States. The aircraft, which resemble the famed Harvards in almost every respect, are on loan to the R.C.A.F. until Canadian counterparts have been built and delivered.

Half of the trainer additions will remain at Trenton and the rest will be allotted to the Flying Training School at Centralia.

Suffers Burns

Suffering severe burns about the head yesterday when a quantity of hot asphalt flew up and struck him in the face, Stan Hood, of Picton, is resting comfortably in the Trenton Memorial Hospital today.

Hood was working with the H. J. McFarland Construction Company installing drains on new roads-ways in Middleton Park when the accident occurred. He was rushed to Dr. E. A. McQuade's office and given preliminary treatment.

Will Not Locate Here

Word has reached town clerk O. W. Larry from a Montreal engineering firm that the industry looking over a one hundred acre site at the western end of the town north of highway No. 33 has decided against locating here.

Better sewage facilities, less grading expense and more advantageous topography of two other available locations were the main reasons given for research company for not choosing the block of land in Trenton.

Snowblower Unloaded

The largest snowblower seen in these parts, hugs enough to fill 10 standard railway box car was unloaded at the downtown siding yesterday. The giant snow cleaning machine, destined for service next winter at the Trenton Air Station, was placed on a float and transported to the airport storage.

Workmen with tunics off and sleeves rolled up sweated in the warm sunshine unblocking the machine and readying it for removal to summer berth.

Personals

Joe Patterson, a Trenton resident who is in the employ of the H. J. McFarland Construction Company, expects to return to his work on the stone crusher in the very near future. Three months ago his ankle was broken when his foot became entangled in the pulley belt driving the big machine. He has been convalescing on crutches ever since.

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Mitton, on Victoria Avenue, on Saturday night, a reception was held for Miss Marlene Groves, daughter of Mr. Del Groves and the late Mrs. Groves, who will be married here in the near future.

Police Seek 'Patient'

Sudbury, May 14—(CP)— police today are trying to fin "patient" who wandered aboard men's ward at St. Joseph's ho tal Sunday and picked up clothes a wallet, $26 in cash and a bankrupt from genuine patients.

The man was dressed in b trousers and wore a white hos dressing gown. The gown was found stuffed under a nearby building.

Howe Indicates Defence Orders Not Obtainable

Ottawa, May 15 — (CP)—Production Minister Howe indicated Monday night that, at the moment, Canada can expect no large defence orders either from the United States or Europe.

The United States, he said, has "many times sufficient plant capacity to more than take care of its own needs."

Europe lacks dollars.

Economic production, he told a joint dinner meeting of the Canadian Industrial Preparedness Association and the Society of Automotive Engineers, "can be achieved only if we produce as well for the United States or for our overseas allies."

Barring an all-out shooting war, Mr. Howe added in a speech prepared for delivery, demand for Canadian-made defence equipment will not be as great as in the Second World War, "and we must think in terms of, say, vehicle production at the rate of about 5 a day, rather than the hundreds a day we produced last time."

Unable to Find Missing Plane With Four Aboard

Summerside, P.E.I., May 15 — (CP)—A night-long search by 13 aircraft failed to find any trace of an RCAF Dakota which disappeared yesterday with four men aboard. The twin-engined craft was on a routine navigational flight from Goose Bay, Labrador, to Summerside.

Names of the airmen were withheld pending notification of next-of-kin.

At daybreak today, 11 aircraft took off from the big base here to continue the search. Canso and Dakotas from 103 Rescue Unit at Greenwood, N.S., were to join the search later. United States Coast Guard and navy planes were also expected to take part.

The Dakota was last heard from at 2 p.m. ADT, shortly after taking off from Goose Bay. It should have landed at Summerside by seven o'clock. The plane's course was over the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

Two Suspects Were Arrested After Robbery

Linwood, Ont., May 15 — (CP) — Two suspects were arrested in police gunpoint Monday within 30 minutes of a $3,000 armed robbery of the Linwood branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia.

Police caught Philip Reardon, 40-year-old Negro, no address, and Frank Cartwright, of London, Ont., after a speeding car crashed into a hydro pole near the intersection of highways 7 and 86, four miles west of Guelph and about 20 miles east of the scene of the robbery.

Reardon was taken to the county jail in Guelph and Cartwright was held under police guard in Guelph hospital with minor injuries suffered in the crash.

Police said the wrecked car was "loaded with money."

Motion Adjourned Without Date Being Set

Toronto, May 15 — (CP) — A motion by two Oshawa farmers and a florist for an injunction to stop the City of Oshawa from polluting a stream running through their land was adjourned in court Monday without a date being set.

The plaintiffs, Lyman A. Gifford, Hiram Gifford (and James Wamsop, are asking $60,000 damages. In their claim they stated that a city sewer was constructed in 1949 running into the stream and has made the water unfit for their cattle.

The adjournment was suggested by Mr. Justice J. L. Wilson after hearing an affidavit from Wesley Dempsey, Oshawa city engineer, stating that repairs had been made this week to a sewage disposal plant and that no further pollution would take place.

100 HARVARDS LOANED

Ottawa, May 15 — (CP) — The United States Air Force has loaned the RCAF "roughly 100" Harvard training planes for use in the expanding RCAF's new air training scheme, an air force spokesman said Monday night.

"They've been loaned to us to help us get going . . . the RCAF spokesman said. "They'll be returned when we get our own production going."

Problem of Scarce Materials Discussed by Canada, U.K.

Ottawa, May 15—(CP)—Britain will emphasize to Canada next week that her defence effort may be injured if she cannot continue to get more raw materials from this country.

The problem of allocating scarce materials of which Canada is a big world supplier, will be high on the agenda of the fifth session of the Canada-United Kingdom continuing trade committee.

The session opens for three days here May 21. Deliberations will not be made public.

Sir Alexander Clutterbuck United Kingdom high commissioner to Canada, will preside. He said in an interview that getting sufficient materials is Britain's biggest headache in her drive to build a three-year, $14,000,000,000 defence program.

He made clear that Britain is prepared to pay in dollars for increased supplies for Canadian metals and other strategic items.

He also made clear that Britain is prepared to hand over to Canada next December 31 $38,000,000 as the final instalment on the repayment of the $1,183,000,000 Canadian loan made to Britain in 1946.

The loan bears two per cent interest and is to be repaid on annual payments extending over the next 50 years.

Top Men Present

Other top U. K. representatives at the meeting will be Sir John Woods, permanent secretary of the British Board of Trade; Sir Frank Lee, permanent secretary of the Ministry of Food, and R. W. B. Clarke, a senior official of the British treasury.

Canadian government representatives likely will be deputy Trade Minister Fred Bull; deputy Agricultural Minister Gordon Taggart and either deputy Finance Minister W. C. Clark or J. J. Deutsch, the Finance Department's director of International Economic Relations.

Canadian officials at the meeting likely will emphasize the need for cutting the rigid control the British government exercises over its trade.

The policy last tended to cut Canada's exports to Britain from about $700,000,000 in 1949 to less than $500,000,000 in 1950. The committee has no power but to make recommendations to the two governments.

MAYOR BREAKS TIE

Niagara Falls, May 15—(CP) A vote cast by Mayor Ernest M. Hawkins yesterday broke a tie on a resolution to take the city's application for increased remuneration to Premier Frost. Three of the council's six aldermen had voted to send the resolution to the Minister of Municipal Affairs.

BODY RECOVERED

Campbellford, May 14—(CP)—The body of Walter Fry, 22, of Oshawa, Sunday was found floating in the Trent River near Healeyville.

Two Toronto fishermen, Victor and William Burgess, found the body near the spot where the youth drowned April 8.

Problems Will Be Settled By Village Vote

Grand Bend, Ont., May 15 — (CP)—Some of the problems that beset a village with the county line running up the middle of the main street will be simplified tomorrow.

Ratepayers in this picturesque Western Ontario summer resort of 700 will vote on whether to become part of Huron County or Lambton County.

Chief issue in a bitterly-fought campaign is what liquor laws will apply to Grand Bend, a village on the east shore of Lake Huron which often has as many as 15,000 Canadian and American visitors on a summer weekend.

The part of Grand Bend north of the Grand main street is in Huron county, a municipality which has never forsaken the old Canada Temperance Act. The southern part of Grand Bend, in Lambton County, is covered by the newer Ontario Liquor Control Act.

That's where the problem begins. Under the C.T.A. sale of liquor is banned. But while a resident of Huron County cannot legally buy liquor in Huron, he can buy it outside the county, bring it in and, if he wants, drink it in the street without fear of arrest.

The Ontario Liquor Law, on the other hand, allows towns and villages to hold local option votes on whether beer and liquor is to be sold in government-licensed stores and taverns. It bans consumption in public.

Victoria Day To be Celebrated On May 24th

Ottawa, May 15 (CP) —Victoria Day will be celebrated Thursday, May 24.

The government does not plan to interfere with celebration of the holiday on its customary date. There were unofficial reports that it would pass an order-in-council fixing Monday, May 28, as the holiday.

The Commons still has on its order paper a bill sponsored by Jack MacDougall (L-Vancouver-Burrard) that would have May 24 and July —Dominion Day — celebrated on Mondays rather than on the days on which they fall.

The measure, not likely to come up again this session, would have eliminated a situation which will arise this year, when some persons will be off Thursday, work Friday, and then be off Saturday and Sunday.

Half of Crew Doomed Freighter Landed Safely

Sydney, N.S., May 14—(CP)—The battle-wrecked freighter Dufferin Bell, cradled on jagged rocks, was at the mercy of the sea near here today but her skipper and six officers stayed aboard in the hope she may be saved.

The 2,874-ton sulphur-laden vessel, aground on Cape Breton's taking water but moderating seas gave hope she may be salvaged.

Capt. Carl Kohler of Lamenburg, N.S., and the ship's officers stayed at their posts. The icebreaker Edward Cornwallis took off the other 30 crew members last night and early today.

None of the crew members was injured and those still aboard are believed in no immediate danger.

However, unofficial Halifax sources said it would be almost impossible to salvage either ship or cargo. The Halifax salvage tug Foundation Josephina went to her assistance but had made no attempt to free the vessel, trapped between two jagged rocks in 18 feet of water near Winging Point.

THE ROUGHNECKS ARE MOVING ON!

In the language of the oil fields, "roughnecks" are the men of the drilling crews who probe deep in the earth for oil. You'll find them in any oil field doing the hard tedious work that goes into the drilling of every well.

But roughnecks like it best when the going is toughest and most exciting—when they move on to search for oil where it has never been found. In Alberta the odds are against them, only one wildcat well in 20 is likely to be successful.

Working against these odds, roughnecks' drills have tapped more than a billion barrels of new oil in Alberta since 1947, bringing new prosperity and new security to all Canada. In face Canadians now produce one in every three barrels they use—but we still must depend on foreign countries for the other two. To be self-sufficient we must have three times our present reserves.

The roughnecks keep moving on in the unending search for oil. As they succeed they benefit and strengthen the entire nation.

About Canada's Oil

Before discovering the Leduc field in 1947, Imperial drilled 133 exploratory wells in western Canada—all dry—over a period of almost 30 years.

The cost of an exploratory well varies from about $100,000 to more than $1 million.

It is estimated the oil industry will spend $200 millions on exploration and development in the prairies this year.

Secretary Puts Finishing Touch On Iranian Note

London, May 15—(Reuters)—Foreign Secretary Herbert Morrison today put the final touches to a strongly-worded note to Iran on the oil crisis.

It is unlikely to be delivered in Tehran before Thursday, diplomatic quarters said. The text is being discussed with the United States officials in Washington before being sent to Sir Francis Shepherd, British Ambassador in Iran, who had a meeting today with Foreign Minister Hajhey. Learned "no question of mutual interest."

The note will adhere to the Britview that Iran is not within its rights in nationalizing the Anglo-Iranian oil company, in which the British government is chief shareholder. But it will repeat a willingness to negotiate, sources said.

The war office and defence ministry, meanwhile, announced why Britain's crack paratroop-ers of the 16th Independent Airborne Brigade, have been put on the alert.

Diplomatic circles suggested that Britain has discussed with Washington the latest designs in British lives and property in Iran and prepared the parachute men as a precautionary measure.

Officials deny reports of an "impending decision" to send them to Iran and say the question does not at present arise.

Teeter-Totter Craze Opens Silly Season

Seattle, May 15 (AP)—The teeter-totter craze at Washington colleges continued to set marks.

The third pair in eight days has terminated a marathon stint of two days and upwards riding the board.

Bob Reschteschek and Dick Priest of Yakima, at the University of Washington, called it quits yesterday after 52 hours and five minutes.

The previous mark was 30 hours and 31 minutes, set Saturday night by two Seattle University students.

Eight days ago, a pair at Washington State College started the craze, teetering 40 hours and 10 minutes.

1,600-Acre Fire Out of Control Near Sudbury

Toronto, May 15 [illegible] 1,600-acre forest fire burned out of control today in the Sudbury district, one of two forest blazes in Northern Ontario not yet checked.

The fire, on the north shore of Lake Wanapitei, 34 miles northeast of Sudbury, had spread from 800 acres which it covered yesterday. An RCAF helicopter is helping fight it.

An Ontario fire protection official said provincial police are investigating the possibility it was started when a river driver lighted a fire to dry himself after falling in a river.

The second fire out of control is also in the Sudbury area — covering 800 acres in Falconbridge township, 13 miles north of Sudbury. Three bulldozers are working on its edges to cut fire breaks.

A total of 23 other fires in Ontario, six of which were reported yesterday, are under control. Some 325 extra firefighters have been called out to deal with all the blazes.

The Lake Wanapitei fire is burning in mixed timber, and the official said a large area of valuable forest is menaced. The Falconbridge township fire did not endanger any valuable stands and the largest other fire, under control, has burned over 1,000 acres of forest reared in the 1946 Misaskaagi blaze.

Weather officials reported no rainfall in sight in the central district and the Lands Department has closed four townships in the Blind River division of the Sault Ste. Marie district to travel. No fires were burning in the townships, but the fire hazard was "extremely dangerous."

OVERTURNED BOAT

Timmins, May 15—(CP)— Two prospectors who came into fame recently with their tale of a monstrous muskellunge which overturned their boat while fishing, have returned to tow the record that the same fish has done it again. The prospectors said they encountered the "six-foot" monster on a lake which neither of them will name or locate.

Canadians Take Australian Flag To Own Lines

With the Canadians in Korea, May 15—(CP)— The Australian flag went on the loose recently—the only one the 3rd Battalion Royal Australian Regiment had in the front lines area.

It can be seen any time any day flying defiantly from the flag-pole at rear headquarters of the 2nd Battalion Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry.

Lest there be consequences, this will have to be a "no names" story—especially as a continuing action would seem to have started.

And lest there be a misunderstanding, let it be said that both battalions are taking it in the spirit of good fun.

But the sad fact is that Australia's blue flag, Union Jack in the upper left-hand corner and dotted with six white stars of assorted sizes, disappeared from the R.A. R.'s rear headquarters.

Questioned the next morning, the Aussie on guard recalled a friendly visit by a group of Canadians the night before during which the flag's whereabouts was mentioned. Curtain is for the national ensigns to be hauled down at sundown.

Simultaneously the horrified discovery was made that, flying from the latrine's mast, was another banner—white and in red letter: "ham and eggs." Clearly it also had been pinched from the nearby canteen operated by the Navy, Army and Air Force institutes, known to old soldiers as NAAFI.

15 Broken Bones Found in Body Of Beaten Child

Victoria, B.C., May 15 (CP)— A pathologist testified yesterday that post-mortem examination of a 3½-year-old girl disclosed 15 broken bones, evidence of scurvy and nearly 100 abrasions, contusions and bruises.

The testimony was given at the trial of Mrs. Ellen Hill of Fort Renfrew, B.C., on three charges of causing grievous bodily harm to her daughter, June Elizabeth Hill.

Dr. D. B. Roxburgh said pneumonia was the cause of the child's death March 6, but that the broken bones were "fractures usually produced by direct violence."

The girl suffered 11 broken ribs and fractures to both arms and collarbones.

R.C.M.P. Constable W. G. Lambert testified previously that Mrs. Hill had admitted to him that she lost her temper, picked up a piece of wood in the kitchen and beat the child.

He said he was told by William Hill, the woman's common-law husband, that the child had died following a fall from her crib.

MILLION TO GET RAISE

Detroit, May 15—(AP)—Nearly 1,000,000 C.I.O. automobile workers will get raises of six or seven cents an hour starting June 1, it appeared Monday.

Management and union spokesmen said the cost of living went up enough during the three-month period ended April 15 to give them an additional two or three cents.

In addition to this boost under escalator clauses in scores of auto industry contracts, virtually all the workers would get a guaranteed four-cent "annual improvement factor" for the first of the month. This is to compensate for technological advances and has no relation to the cost of living.

CORL MEETING

Everybody in attendance at "Paul's Motel" the other day when the mogul of the Central Ontario Baseball League sat down to brass tacks and attempted to iron out a few wrinkles, schedule, players etc.

* * *

The tribe was out in full force. Frexy Jack Carson of the Belleville Redmen was there ready for battle; Louie Yanover, Wall. Fraser of Picton were present and brought along corpulent Jack Welsh for vocal and moral support; Jimmy Twiney of the Kingston Dixieys sat it in a corner and huddled occasionally with Harry McNeill of Smith's Falls, while Bill Easton of Batawa, pins a helper battled long and loud with fiery Joe Killoran of Napanee over alleged "play- or ruling" within the loop.

* * *

Vice president Jack Devine presented a tentative schedule which ran the gamut of argument and was finally accepted with a few changes. It will be published as soon as the revise is released. The Redmen have a flock of Saturday night games, seeing as how they have the kieg system, while they will be on the road for practically all statutory holidays.

* * *

Harry McNeill, Smith's Falls boy-genie, told us at the meeting that Allan Kelleher has not definitely signed with the Montreal Canadiens but is Val D'Or, Quebec. We apparently were misinformed via telephone the other day, when we wrote told that Kelleher had signed with the Royals Apparently, it "aint so".

* * *

Host Paul Haggis took the boys on a tour of his newly-conditioned motel. Paul has newly furnished the place, redecorated it from stem to gudgeon, has a registered nurse in attendance and has one of the finest places of his kind along No. 2 Highway.

* * *

THAT MAN AGAIN!

Well, strike me pink, look 'ow's 'ere. None other than the old hardcover from down Napanee way, Alkins, from Amityville, who is said to have featured blokes in the main bout at the Arena next Friday closeing. And across the ring will be the popular Indian sensation, Chief Sissi War Cloud, a full-blooded Wapsi redskin, who has been a large fallowing since his initial appearance here this season.

A rough tackle, Atkins, who is as popular with the faithful here as the landlord at the first of the month, is the oldest trooper he's seen in the last year or so. His unorthodoxe tactics made him one of the most hated villains ever to appear in a Belleville ring, and it is quite safe in assuming that the bloke hasn't sprouted any wrestling wings since his last appearance here.

* * *

In the semi-final that bedster Natie Brown, who does a spot of shadow boxing before each bout, will oppose the popular Earl "Mouse" McCready. Earl made his 1951 debut here last Friday and he is just as popular as ever. In the preliminary Lee Hensing will meet Bowmanville's Billy Stack.

* * *

REDMEN DINE!

The Belleville Redmen, hockey, that is, went "knife and fork" last night in the Vanity Fair and not only swelled their stomachs with good food but, we are informed, their exchequers with folding lettuce, the gift of the executive gods.

* * *

It was a good party. There were not, thank heaven, any heavy eulogistic speeches. Members of the executive from President Harper McIlrath down did not clutter the atmosphere with stories of their prowess. The boys from big Vern Goyer down to the water buckaroo filled themselves with good food, enjoyed Jimmy Corrad's entertainment and relived some of the hectic struggles that marked their parade through the senior "B" group last winter.

* * *

No party of this nature would be complete without some ballyhoo. But thank heaven, McIlrath and his cohorts plus his guest speakers, of al realized the fact that while it is spering, but ale was not necessary. Whatever spoken there were and they were few and brief were cheered to the point, and did no harm, outside of the usual verbal congratulations.

* * *

The party said his piece, and so did a few others including Dr. "Pic" Ross, club physician. Coach Walter Best and Vera Goyer representing the players. The husky shipper told the boys, "I'll be out there next year, and the year after. In fact until somebody takes my place I'll always be out there for Belleville".

* * *

The boys said a reluctant farewell to Private Johnny Green, Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment. The fleet winger has donned the King's uniform and may not be around next winter. In any event the Redmen wished their pal the best of luck, as we do here, and sincerely hope the world straightens its problems and the dusky scion of a fine athletic family will be back in hockey harness next season.

As we said before it was a fine party. No arguments, no discussions, just a bunch of the boys "whooping it up" in good style with no harm done. Nothing was said about next year's plans. We presume such matters are being taken care of.

Cleveland's Al Lopez Finds Himself in Same Predicament As Boudreau, Can't Beat Lopat

By JOE REICHLER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Al Lopez knows now how Lou Boudreau felt every time he saw Ed Lopat out on the mound pitching against his Cleveland Indians.

Twice this season Lopez, who succeeded Boudreau as the new Tribe manager, has looked on helplessly as the crafty New York Yankee lefthander with the "nothing" ball tied his boys into knots.

"How does he do it?" Lopez asked before last night's Cleveland-New York game. "I just can't figure out why he beats us so regularly. He's no better than lots of pitchers in the league."

Some 2 1-2 hours later, Lopat had added another to his long string of victories over the Indians, his favorite people. The score was 11-4, and Lopez still was groping for the answer.

Steady Eddie surrendered only six hits but two of them were home runs. Other balls were hit hard and far. But always there was a Yankee to get in front of them.

On the other hand, everything the Indians did went wrong. In the first inning, Sam Chapman played a looper by Gil McDougald into an inside-the-park homer. Later Mickey Mantle got a double on a routine "single." In the seventh, Joe DiMaggio scored from first on a wild pitch, a wild throw by catcher Jim Hegan and another errant heave by centerfielder Larry Doby. That all happened in one sequence.

A crowd of 66,282, gala fans, largest of the major-league season, saw the Yankees do some hasty swatting against loser Lou Brissie and Mike Garcia. McDougald ripped in four runs with a double besides his homer, Hank Bauer homered and Gerry Coleman hit a base-clearing double.

Since coming to the big leagues Lopat has whipped the Indians 30 times. They have beaten him only six times. Last night's triumph was his 11th straight over the Indians and sixth victory all of the season against no defeats — loss in the majors.

In a day game Boston Red Sox edged the Washington Senators 5-4 in 11 innings. Fred Hatfield scored the winning run from third base with two out when leftfielder Gil Coan dropped Matt Batts' easy fly ball.

All other American League clubs and the entire National League were idle.

Pruden Wins Over Gonzales In Third Round

St. Catharines, May 15 (CP) — Frittie Pruden of St. Catharines Monday night knocked out Manuel Gonzales of New York at 1:08 in the third round of the eight-round main boxing event. It was his first professional bout in his home town.

Pruden weighed 145½; Gonzales, 146½.

Mayor R. M. Robertson presented Pruden with a silk dressing gown on behalf of the city. The fight was a benefit show for the Kinsmen Club. Pruden also got Pruden a gold wrist watch.

Pruden, who now fights in the United States, is a fourth-ranking welterweight.

Results:

Semi-final: Brian Kelly, 137 1-2, Niagara Falls, TKO over Frankie Betts, 139 1-2, Albany, N. Y., at 1:35 in first round.

Preliminaries:

Larry Cassidy, 144 3-4, Syracuse, N. Y., TKO over Harvey Shannon, 140, Toronto, Shannon unable to answer bell for third round.

Joey Leo, 134, Syracuse, TKO over Jimmy Steeves, Toronto, at 2.37 second round.

Dominic Ferons, 132 1-2, Scranton, Pa., and Rudy Pasquale, 128 Toronto, drew when bout stopped at .32 of the fifth round. Both boxers sustained cut eyes

Yanks and Cards Pull Big Deal Before Deadline

New York, [illegible] (AP) — Manager [illegible] of the Yankees shuffled his pitching corps and batting order today in a rush to get within the 23-player limit before tomorrow's midnight deadline.

Half of the 16 teams already are down to the required size but the other half have some sticky bargaining to do in the next couple of days. Chief of these are the world champion New York Yankees with three surplus men, and the St. Louis Cardinals, with four.

The Yankees are reported anxious to pull a 5-for-1 or 4-for-1 deal to land the Philadelphia Athletics' southpaw pitcher Bobby Shantz or first baseman Ferris Fain. So far the A's aren't nibbling.

The Yanks and Cards figured in yesterday's biggest manoeuvres with the aging and fire-pole Cardinals coming out of the shindig with the best-looking team.

New York sent veteran third-baseman Billy Johnson to the Cardinals for reported $18,000 in cash and first baseman Don Richmond.

The latter was excess baggage at the moment and so the world champions quickly shipped him to their Kansas City farm.

Plugging some more holes, the Cardinals also added back Virgil (Pinky) Fosse, good-hitting veteran first baseman, from Rochester and sent the Red Wings their baseman Don Richmond.

The Philadelphia Athletics and the Pittsburgh Pirates also have to get their rosters while the Philadelphia Phillies and Cleveland Indians have 27. The New York Giants and Brooklyn Dodgers have to unload one player.

Clubs already within the limit were Cincinnati, Boston and Chicago in the National League, Chicago, Boston, St. Louis and Detroit and Washington in the American.

Gair Will Coach Hamilton Tigers In Senior Series

Hamilton, May 15 — (CP) — Jack Gair will coach Hamilton Tigers of the Ontario Lacrosse Association senior series, it was announced Monday.

Gair, coach of last season's club, had previously decided to stick to the playing end of the game. He decided, however, to pressure from players and fans officials.

Harry McKenzie will be assistant coach and most of last year's team will be back, including Alvin Doyle, Jack Dorney, Alex Edmunds, Jim Bowman, Tommy Love, Elmer Lee and George Masters.

Doug Favell, who stepped into the goaltending breach for Owen Sound in last year's Minto Cup final, will be back.

Rochester Wings Within Half Game of Top

(By The Associated Press)

Jack Fazzholz, 24-year-old righthander, is a better pitcher in his sophomore year for Rochester Red Wings than he was in his rookie season.

Fazzholz won only five games and lost three and pitched five complete games for Rochester's 1950 champions. Today he is only one victory and one complete game away from matching that output.

The lanky hurler turned in his fourth victory without a loss last night as the red hot Wings defeated Springfield Cubs 4-3 for their seventh straight victory.

Fazzholz blanked the Cubs for the first inning and then permitted seven hits all told. Ed Mierkowicz drove in two runs with a homer and rookie Bud Hardin singled in the other two runs.

The victory moved the third-place Wings to within a half game of the runner-up Syracuse Chiefs and to within four of the pace-setting Montreal Royals.

Ottawa Giants moved into the Royals 3-2 scoring all their runs in the seventh inning on a pair of triples by Lorenzo Cabrera and Bill Gardner. Pitcher Ray Moore socked a two-run homer for the Royals in the eighth.

Baltimore trounced the Chiefs 11-6. The Orioles sewed it up with seven runs in the fourth inning. Bill Glynn drove in four runs on a homer and two singles.

Toronto Maple Leafs downed the Buffalo Bisons 6-5. Bud Hasiet cracked two home runs and Johnny Ostrowski and Lee Fleming one each to pace the Toronto attack.

Jack Guest Jr. Attempts to Equal Feat of Father

Toronto, May 15—(CP)—A tall, clean-cut high school student leaves here today for Henley-on-Thames, England, carrying Canada's hopes for the world's top rowing honors on the diamond sculls.

At 19, Jack Guest, Jr., will attempt to equal a feat that his father performed 21 years ago when he won the Royal Henley regatta at the age of 22.

He was the last Canadian to win the race which is to be run this year from July 4 to 7 on the historic course near London. The last time a Canadian entered the event was 16 years ago.

Already acknowledged the world's best junior oarsman, Jack is out to see if his superiority extends into senior ranks. His father and Douglas Halden, captain of the Don Rowing Club, are travelling with him.

Jack will row the race or races there could be four of them—in a boat he has not yet seen. The new shell is being custom built to his large frame by the Sims Company of Hammersmith, world-famous boating firm.

If Jack brings home the laurels in late July, he will be only the fourth Canadian to do so and easily the youngest. Lou Scholes won the event in 1904, Joe Wright, Jr., took it in 1928 and Jack's father scored his triumph in 1930.

John Cotsilini of Toronto Argonauts was the last oarsman to go from this country. He entered in 1936 and broke an oar in the preliminary. The following summer he lost out in the final to Austria's representative.

"We would have waited at least one or two more years in ordinary times," Jack's father said, explaining why his son is attempting the difficult venture at such an early age. "But the threat of war makes it the best this might be Jack's only chance."

Should he lose, he won't be too disappointed—his father made three tries before he brought home the crown.

Hope Assigned Starring Role On Opening Day

St. Andrews, Scotland, May 15 (AP)—Comedian Bob Hope today was assigned the opening day starring role in the British Amateurs Golf Championship which opens Monday at Royal Porthcawl, Wales.

The staid Royal and Ancient Golf Club, which controls amateur championship, cast one eye at the huge crowd that showed up last year to watch Hope's buddy, Bing Crosby, and decided to put on Hope at 9:36 a.m. (4:36 a.m. EST) which means a big gallery regardless of the weather.

Hope will meet Charles C. Fox, 41-year-old paint manufacturer from Brough Yorkshire, England.

Fox, co-holder of the Yorkshire foursome title, said he was "delighted at my luck. I wanted to play a member of the American Walker Cup team or somebody like Hope. I understand he is a good golfer."

Crosby drew a first-day crowd a year ago that paid £3,000 pounds ($8,400) to see him play in pouring rain. Without Crosby, R and A. officials admitted privately the first day gate would have been about one-tenth of that.

Frank Stranahan of Toledo, O., current British amateur champion, drew a first round match against Maj. Ian Keelan, Scotsman, stationed at Mombasa, Kenya.

CAST OF 2,000

Toronto, May 15—(CP)—Hollywood could call upon a board of education's annual May concert stupendous. It has a cast of nearly 2,000 this year and features a 500-voice choir, a 150-piece violin orchestra, and a 70-piece symphony orchestra.

BARNEY SENT TO MINORS

Fort Worth, Tex., May 14 (AP)—Brooklyn post Hoe Barney to the Fort Worth first club in the class-AA Texas League to work on his control. Maybe the Dodgers should leave him here for a while.

Barney broke the Texas League record for bases on balls when he gave up 16. Fort Worth lost to Houston 8-2.

The record was 14, established by Bonno of Galveston in 1899, and tied by Grodzicki of Houston in 1938.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Ribitzer

Know the good bridge rules. They tell you exactly what is best or most correct. Knowing which, you can tell just what chances you can take; just why you should avoid doing certain things.

Seldom, if ever, bid no-trump defensively. At least not until partner has told you he has high card strength. If you insist on it anyway, be aware of how much danger you are courting.

No-trump tricks are taken mostly with high cards (aces and kings and queens.) Only 15 of them are in a pack. What are not in your pair will be in the hands of your opponents. But definitely.

The opener says he has four or more high cards. Usually he has more. If his partner has two or more, your no-jump bid is not going to be in good shape. Think of this when you defend in no-trump.

Defensively, you are better off in a trump suit contract. Then the tricks you expect to take depend on small cards in trumps. You are not so dependent on the number of high cards.

So, first learn the suit lengths in your pair. Find out which suit or suits your partner has some length in. If they tell you the length of your suits your chances for tricks are better.

South opens with a diamond when you have this west hand:

♠ K Q 9 2
♥ A 9 7 3
♦ A J 4 6
♣ K 7

Prefer not to bid no-trump with your west hand. Better double for takeout. Have partner show you his longest suit, if possible. If it happens to be hearts or spades, you are safer.

The least your takeout double will do is find out from partner how weak he is. If he is weak, you do not want to be in no-trump. If he shows strength, you can still be in no-trump if desired.

For better play, a defensive no-trump bid is useful as a slam convention. Not as a desire to play at a no-trump contract. When you know this, some of your losses will be cut down.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, May 15 (AP)—This, said Paul Douglas with a grin, "is a good time not to buy a yacht."

Douglas was referring to the current plight of [illegible] More" players are [illegible] by studios every [illegible] of them are nearing bankruptcy courts.

"I've seen too many of my friends get in over their heads," he sighed. "Not me."

"But what about that shack of yours?" I asked. He and wife, Jan Sterling live in a huge mansion.

"Oh, that," he replied. "That's a deal. Fox rented it to house the YIPS (very important persons) that came to town. You know—the ones who were too important to put up at a hotel. So I'm just sub-letting it from the sudio, at less than half the rent that it usually gets. And I don't have to pay the gardener or water bill."

A Scotsman, Perhaps?

Douglas added that it has become fashionable for movie stars to say that all their money goes to taxes and expenses and they can't save a dime.

"Sure, I save some money," he said. "I've had the same business manager since 1932. I've never even seen a cheque of mine since I've been in pictures. He puts it away for me. I've got it all tied up in cash. Cash and insurance."

You may have guessed that Douglas is a pretty independent guy. He proved that when he first made a Broadway hit in "Born Yesterday." Even though he was eager to play the film version, he gave it up because he wouldn't agree to the long contract terms Columbia offered.

A few weeks ago he again demonstrated his independence when he got out of his contract with Twentieth-Century Fox because he had a better role lined up at M.G.M.

Lone Wolf

Douglas prefers to free-lance.

"It's too easy for a guy to get typed and then lost in a studio that has to put out a certain number of pictures every year. It's hard enough to find one good script a year for yourself, not to mention finding three or four."

"That's why I figured that if you are lucky enough to be in some kind of demand, you'll do much better free-lancing."

WILL CHANGE COLOR

Montreal, May 15 — (CP) — A Quebec provincial tax dress on cigaret packages will change in color shortly, it was announced Monday.

Imperial Tobacco Company of Canada, Ltd., officials said Monday the stamps would be changed from black to red on orders of the Quebec government.

This followed reports that Quebec retailers purchased their cigaret stocks in Ontario where there is less tax, and sold them in Quebec, thus keeping the extra for themselves.

FRANKFORD

Softball Team Dangling For Boyle's Service

Frankford— Considerable discussion has been going around as to what Frankford is going to have in the way of a softball team this year. To date, pitching has been the big problem.

Thursday evening, representatives of the Frankford team called on Don Boyle to try to arrange a playing agreement. Don has been a big drawing card in Frankford these past two years, and his presence on the team would be a big morale factor both to the team and the fans. This weekend will pretty will decide the issue, and at present it looks quite promising. In addition to Boyle, the club has a couple of other good prospects with whom they are negotiating at present. If these new players are added to the club, Frankford should have the strongest team they have had to date.

The league at present expects six entries, namely, Wooler, Campbellford, Stirling, Frankford, Trenton (last year's champions) and Trenton RCAF. President Bill Berecht reports that prospects for a top brand of ball look excellent.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars,

For Wednesday, May 16—

March 21 to April 20—(Aries)—Very stimulating, progressive influences. You should be your best now, eager to get ahead, pleasant co-operative, with associates, family, etc. Make good!

April 21 to May 20—(Taurus)—Excellent day for general matters, sound business and finances but some personal wishes may meet obstacles, so be understanding. Don't worry. Enjoy day's schedule, enjoy free hours, too.

May 21 to June 21—(Gemini)—You may find mental work slightly tedious or bright ideas hampered at times but day is very favorable for worthy endeavors on whole, industry, manufacturing, civics, government.

June 22 to July 23—(Cancer)—Day should be tops for you with Moon, the Sun and Jupiter among major planets favorably aspected. Speed ahead, sensibly of course, but don't have doubt or fear that you can't make good.

July 24 to August 22—(Leo)—Receptive time for bright ideas, sound business and money transactions, for speaking, granting favors; perhaps gaining promotion earned. Trades, mining, farming, other business favored generally.

August 23 to September 23—(Virgo)—You may find your quickest response and achievement for efforts through work allied to yours. Encouraging period for fresh opportunities, unexpected help or gain. Maintain humor.

September 24 to October 23—(Libra)—Your Venus stresses need for patience in private affairs, and don't expect too much personally. But day is one for attainment, cementing friendships, connections to help business.

October 24 to November 22—(Scorpio)—Mars, Sun, Saturn's favorable influences today promises happy returns from intelligent and well managed work, money, business generally. Surely your day for attainment. Smile.

November 23 to December 22—(Sagittarius)—You too, have a pleasing outlook for today's plans, program for securing gain for future interests. Your particular job can go well now, but try to improve quality of output.

December 23 to January 21—(Capricorn)—Whatever your honorable profession, trade or calling, you can garner new laurels, add to present assets and gain fresh promise for future interests. Romance, domesticity ask right care.

January 22 to February 20—(Aquarius)—Familiar activities, work for which you have training, all worthy interests are in line for some fresh gains, but think well before you launch into strenuous daring. Avoid extremes.

February 21 to March 20—(Pisces)—Strong tendencies to Aquarius now. You and they can add to business or work assets, perhaps make valuable connections, improve your status generally. But both of you must avoid restlessness.

YOU BORN TODAY are of the earthly Sign, Taurus and are especially suited to work with the soil (though this may not be your daily livelihood)—foods, forestry, chemistry. You could succeed at it trade, such as carpentry, at work requiring artistry, deftness with tools, machinery. Are creative; can improve upon others' creations. You have skill, fine mental equipment and an innate "know-how" for dealing with humanity. If true to your finer God-given traits, are dependable, honorable, loyal, artistic. Curb persistence; don't strain.

Birthdate: Wm. H. Seward, American statesman; Margaret Sullavan, actress.

SMALL GAP

Cook Strait, separating the two main islands of New Zealand, is only sixteen miles across at its narrowest part.

Wearisome Bronchial NIGHT & DAY COUGH

Can't stand the senseless Bronchial tubes full of irritating phlegm that no amount of coughing seems to clear? Get it out of your system with a bronchial cough you can't work through? Then try GOOD NEWS! Try Thompson's RAZ-MAH Compound. Quick, pleasant, economical. Simple, foolproof. If it comes away you get RAZ-MAH from your druggist.

WHY WE SAY

ALPHABET

A short form

Alphabet is actually a shortened way of saying "ABC's." The word itself is a combination of only two letters, the Greek alpha and beta and so on. They form the word alphabet.

MARMORA

Fred Matthews Honored Guest At Birthday Party

Marmora—Sponsored by Wilfred Cress and Reginald Steves and Paul Pocliujko, a birthday party was recently tendered Mr. Fred Matthews at his home in Deloro.

Mr. Matthews was born in Branford on May 2nd 1874. He has been a resident of Deloro for the past 52 years and is a pioneer of the Deloro Smelting and Refining Company, Limited. For the recent party, the company, present, numbering about 80, enjoyed an evening of dancing after which refreshments were served. Mr. Matthews received a number of nice gifts.

SIX-TEAM LEAD

Niagara Falls, May 15 (CP)—The Ontario Hockey Association major series may be a six-team league next season.

A meeting of interested parties Monday suggested that Niagara Falls, Sudbury and Sault Ste. Marie might enter the league, joining Kitchener - Waterloo, Hamilton and Toronto.

The meeting laid ground work for a final meeting in Toronto May 31.

Such cities as Kingston, Ont., and Syracuse, N.Y., it was learned will definitely not consider entering next season.

Former Calumet Colt Looks Good For Preakness

Baltimore, May 15—(AP)—The advance Preakness situation is more uncertain than ever today, fouled up by a colt that Calumet Farm sold last fall for $10,000.

Alerted, a son of Calumet's great sire Bull Lea, kicked things into the air for Saturday's Dixmond Jubilee running of the race classic by winning yesterday's prep.

He won it by a neck, but it was a neck over Brookmeade Stable's Bold Ax which, had it been a little longer, would have threatened to establish himself as a Preakness favorite.

It was a contest strictly between them as King Ranch's Sonic, the only other Preakness eligible to come out for the warmup, started poorly and never got up close.

Alerted, bought by Frank Stout's Hampton Stable from Calumet, had shown before he might be a comer, before this season he was barely whipped by Mrs. Nora Mikell's Repetoire, one of the probable Preakness starters.

Jockey Sem Boulmetis asked a couple of times to go ahead of Bold, but it wasn't until they had sped past a mile that he made it. Joe Culmone was Bold's jockey in the prep, but Eddie Arcaro will be aboard Saturday.

The $7,500 prep was Alerted's fifth first this year. He's shown track versatility by winning at Hialeah, Gulfstream, Laurel and Bow Pimlico.

In the Preakness, he'll be shooting for $75,000 and more for his owner from Maiden, Texas.

Alerted, trained by former steeplechase rider Hirsch Jacobs, ran the mile and 3-16 in 1:53 3-5, a second and 3-4 off the Pimlico record.

Six Players From 1901 Team To be Present

Boston, May 15—(AP) — Six players who figured in the American league's first box score on April 24, 1901, will be among the 30 oldtime players who reunite today to help the Boston Red Sox celebrate the league's golden anniversary.

They are Bill Hoy, Bill Sullivan and Roy Patterson of the Chicago White Stockings, and Oliver Pickering, Bill Bradley and Bill Hoffer of the Cleveland Club.

Those, and other oldtimers will give Boston fandom a nostalgic thrill by parading in an antique tallyho and 1901 vintage automobiles—some of the prize apparatus in the Boston fire department's museum.

Before and after the Red Sox-White Sox game, oldtimers will be owner Tom Yawkey's luncheon and dinner guests.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, May 15 (AP) — Johnny Bratton, who fights Kid Gavilan for the welter title here Friday, argues: "If I didn't think I could lick him, I wouldn't fight him." . . Lt.-Gen. James A. Van Fleet, who is doing a big job in Korea, is a former headfootball coach at the University of Florida. . . Another former Florida head coach, Harold L. (Tom) Sebring, is Justice of the Supreme Court of that state.

One-Minute Sports Page

The southwest conference has penalized Baylor University because an alumnus took a kid football player to a game and bought him hot dogs for dinner. . . Maybe the reasoning is that a school which can't buy steaks shouldn't go in for recruiting . Pittsburgh's Art Rooney may name one of his yearlings for Harry Greb, who never ran from anybody . The Thomaston, Conn., little league winds up its season by sending each team against a team of the players' fathers while the mothers umpire . Looks like a good business for the divorce courts.

Golf Officials Resume Talks At World Shrine

British and American golf officials, who are trying to get together on one set of rules, resumed talks Monday at the world shrine of golf—the royal and ancient club, St. Andrews, Scotland.

The meetings, which began in London last week, will continue through Wednesday.

The United States Golf Association has one set of rules which governs golf in the U. S. The royal and ancient rules compilation has another set which controls the game in most of the rest of the world. They agree in most parts.

Churchill and Princess Elizabeth watched the race.

The Netherlands and the Philippines Monday won their second-round Davis Cup tennis matches. They meet in the third round at Scheveningen, The Netherlands, June 14-16-17.

The Philippines beat Brazil 4-1 in Paris and Holland ousted Ireland 3-2 at Scheveningen.

Louisville, Ky., has been selected as the site for the first round Davis Cup match between the U. S. and Japan, July 20-21-22, it was announced Monday. It is a best-of-five series.

Plans were announced Monday for a $10,000 round robin tournament at Forest Hills next month to decide the National Professional Tennis Championship.

Promoter Bobby Riggs said the event, June 21 through July 1, has the sanction of the Professional Lawn Tennis Association.

Riggs, former king of the amateurs and pro, announced he will be among the 24 seeking the $2,300 top prize.

Bobby Locke, the crack South African golf pro, Monday filed his entry in the United States Open golf championship, to be played at the Oakland Hills Country Club Birmingham, Mich. June 14-16.

U.S. Golf Associ-tion officials announced Locke was the 714th entry received.

Negotiations for a world bantamweight title match in Quebec City between champion Vic Towsel of South Africa and Quebec's Pierre Gagnon are under way, Nat Rogers, Towsel's North American representative said Monday night.

Graziano, his manager Irving Cohen and trainer Al Silvani, left for Montreal Monday night. Rocky, the one-time golden boy of boxing now making a comeback, board a total of 40 rounds during his two weeks of training at Stillman's Gymnasium.

At Berlin, Mrs. Thelma Long of Australia Monday upset Mrs. Margaret Dupont, United States women's champion, in the finals of the Red and White Club's international tennis tournament. The score was 6-4, 6-3.

Form held in the men's final, where the favored Budge Patty of Los Angeles defeated Dick Savitt of Orange, N.J., 6-1, 6-3, 4-6, 6-3.

Savitt and Patty lost in the doubles final to the Swedish combination of Lennart Bergelin and Sven Davidson, 6-4, 6-4.

Remember When

(By The Canadian Press)

International women's basketball supremacy was retained by Percy Page's Edmonton Grads when they won their third straight game over Wichita Thurstons at Edmonton 15 years ago today. Holders of the challenge cup since 1923, Grads settled the issue with a 46-25 win in the final game.

He Came to Kill

By Adeline McElfresh

Leona felt herself begin to bed!"

breathe again as Jasper whispered hoarsely:

"Then it was murder!"

"Quite obviously," was the coroner's comment.

"Look doc," Jasper began. "Doc I—I'm in a spot. Sondra's gone and Peter. Can't we—can't you find them?"

Zimbrunsky's plump face was cold. He did not sympathize with Jasper Thorne—or quite believe him.

"The police will find them, don't worry," Zimbrunsky assured him, although Leona thought there was small comfort in that. Jasper's eyes veiled themselves. his bony jaw went hard. "My job is to sift evidence and, in this case, I'm afraid, return a verdict of murder. Jasper, I hate to say it against you."

Jasper Thorne's eyes were clear, candid, as they met his accuser's. "It won't be," he said coolly.

Dr. Zimbrunsky turned slowly, like a battlewagon circling to meet a new attack. "Miss Thorne" he said to Leona, "suppose you tell me about last night. What happened before you went to bed?"

Startled Leona caught herself in time. There was no need now to tell the whole truth—not before Jasper, Leona said, carefully: "I talked with Mart before I went upstairs. It was late. I only slept about two hours."

"Purdy tells me Mart had orders to lock you in. Did he?"

Leona flushed. "I should not! Besides, they were joking."

"Did you lock your door? Yourself?"

"Yes."

"Were the other doors locked?"

"Why, I—Why?"

Zimbrunsky scowled. "Because he said slowly, "Agatha Thorne was killed in her room. More of the bruises on her throat were made by fingers than by that cord."

Gradually the dark blue bafloon reversed its disgusting accent and became as Leona's brain stopped reeling, Dr. Carlos Zimbrunsky, Thorne county coroner. He rubbed his hands briskly.

"He went on, "Mrs. Thorne and Peter Thorne were not on the premises at the time of this murder, Only you, Jasper, and Miss Leona Thorne and the servants were here. And Deputy Preston, who seems to have fallen asleep. The shock his head, sorrowfully "Unfortunate. indeed, although understandable. Too little rest, I suppose," he switched subjects adroitly, "you both were in your rooms until the excitement awakened you?"

"I was," Leona forced the reply past cold lips.

"And I," echoed Jasper. Then he asked Leona: "Cousin, what were you doing in Aunt Agatha's room before you went to bed?"

Zimbrunsky's breathing became a little. "Were you?" he hurled at Leona. "What were you doing?"

The coroner spoke in a tone that asked: "Did you murder Agatha Thorne?" Leona was being accused of murder—not one murder, but two. The suspicions that had often been directed at her from the very start were aimed at her again.

"Nothing." As though from a long-spent horrible dream, Leona heard again Sheriff Purdy's threat to the killer. "The trap is closing!" he had said, "I just want to see if she was all right."

"And she was?" Disbelief—suspicion—was in Jasper's voice.

"You don't believe me. You think I—" Sudden anger swept aside her growing fear and Leona sprang to her feet. She thrust her small chin toward Zimbrunsky's moon-face. "You said Miss Aggie was strangled. All right, Then find Peter Thorne. Confront him with the bruises on his throat. Ask him why he killed his sister, there was no doubt. Nor was there any doubt in Leona Thorne's mind that her father's aunts had died because they were headstrong, willful old women. Miss Maggie had written her own death warrant by revealing her plans for changing the will that would have benefitted only her two nephews and Miss Aggie, while Miss Aggie—had Miss Aggie died because she, like Peter, believed she knew who the murderer was?

Leona was sitting across the kitchen table from Mart Preston, watching him wolf ham and eggs as though food had been out of his world for a long time. He ate and drank scalding black coffee in dejected silence. It was 10 o'clock; excitement had died down, taking with it the buoyant spirit that had breathed confidence. Mart Preston was discouraged.

Leona spoke, toying with the idea as she went, "suppose it was Miss Aggie who listened when Peter gave me the lavaliere. Suppose he lied about finding Miss Maggie dead when he went to kill her, and Miss Aggie knew he lied, He came back and killed her too. It had to be Peter."

"Nonsense. Poor Miss Aggie didn't weigh 90 pounds. And those rafters are mighty low. Anybody could have done it. Why—he tried a grin for size but it didn't fit—"you could have done it, honey. So could Mrs. Carstairs. Or Sondra. Dancers develop muscles like nobody's business."

"Do they?" Leona asked absently.

"Headache?..take a Disprin"

Why DISPRIN? Because DISPRIN is soluble and substantially neutral. When taken in water as recommended, it enters the stomach as a true solution and not as undissolved particles. It is therefore less liable to cause stomach discomfort.

DISPRIN is readily absorbed. Because it definitely dissolves (not merely disintegrates) DISPRIN permits speedy absorption and gives fast relief.

DISPRIN is palatable. Even children will take it readily.

Science Progresses

For 50 years we have used little white tablets—acetylsalicylic acid —for relief of pain. Today this familiar pain-killer is available in a new form without the disadvantages of acidity, insolubility and bitter taste. It is called 'DISPRIN' and is sold at druggists everywhere.

'DISPRIN' is available in Bottles of 24 tablets or Handy Pocket Folders of 6.

for Eczemas, Boils, Psoriasis, Leg Ulcers

EMINENT scientists have discovered that the lack of unsaturated fatty acids in the normal diet is one of the main causes of skin diseases, such as Eczemas, Boils, Leg Ulcers and Psoriasis. The modern type diet and the use of refined fats and oils in which these unsaturated fatty acids are often completely lacking, have brought about a deficiency in a great number of individuals.

Remarkable Discovery

A Swiss chemist, Dr. W. Schmitz, succeeded after 10 years of research work in extracting from pure vegetable oils an unsaturated fatty acid with a concentration of 99% and therefore named F "99". Thanks to this hitherto unattained high purity, F "99" is so readily absorbed into the blood stream, that it has a decisive biological activity in the treatment of skin diseases. Its remarkable efficiency has astonished even Skin Specialists of international reputation.

New, natural way to clear up skin troubles

F "99" is not a synthetic drug but a concentrate of natural nutritive substances. It is absolutely harmless and may be given even to infants without any hesitation.

As its name suggests, the F "99" Two-Way Treatment acts internally (through mouth) and externally (ointment). The F "99" Ointment treats the external symptoms. The F "99" capsules give the body the power to regenerate and cause to combat successfully Eczemas, Boils, Leg Ulcers and even Psoriasis. Thousands of skin sufferers all over the world, F "99" Two-Way Treatment has already proved its tremendous value.

How to use F "99" Two-Way Treatment

Eczema's Rosacea	F "99" Capsules and Ointment

The Case of the Silent Neighbour

I WATCHED in silence as my neighbour walked by without a greeting. He was more than a neighbour. He was my friend . . . or had been. For years we had worked side by side, but since my retirement Jim never came to see me. In fact, he deliberately avoided me.

I understood why. The sight of me taking it easy must surely depress him, for Jim was still tied to his job. No doubt he was envious of the things I was now free to do . . . and the years that lay ahead for me to do them. Worse still, my old friends at the plant told me that Jim seemed tired all the time . . . losing his grip. They even said the boss was keeping him on out of sheer charity. Jim, too, must be aware of that and, knowing him, I was sure his pride must be deeply hurt.

Years ago our insurance man had suggested we both take out a proper amount of retirement insurance. But Jim had neglected his advice. Now he was forced to carry on at his job, but the day would come when that job would end. What then?

Think. Could this happen to you?

RED FORCES OPEN ATTACKS ON EAST FRONT

Bolivian Govt. Seized by Army, President Flees

Political Color of Upheaval Not Immediately Clear

La Paz, Bolivia, May 16 (AP).—The army seized the government of Bolivia today. President Mamerto Urriolagoitia left the country and Gen. Hugo Ballivian was installed as president and defense minister by a military junta.

The country immediately was placed under a state of siege — modified martial law. Strikes were declared illegal and the army command was given authority to restrict circulation of both soldiers and civilians to maintain public order.

The political color of the upheaval in this turbulent, tin-rich country was not immediately clear.

Issue Manifesto

The military junta, however, issued a manifesto saying the new government would control the mineral resources of the country.

The manifesto would be used "for the benefit of the public and to projects for the progress and development of the nation."

The upheaval took place in an atmosphere of tension after the May 6 election, which rejector Paz Estenssoro, exiled leader of the Nationalist Revolutionary movement, votes but not enough to gain a clear majority which would entitle him, automatically to the presidency.

(Paz Estenssoro is now a statement in Buenos Aires saying the coup was an attempt to prevent him from entering office as president. He said his first impression was that the president's resignation was "a flight from the country was "part of a deal with the army" to keep the National Revolutionary Movement, which Paz Estenssoro heads, out of power.)

Stroke Against Communism

The junta's manifesto said "certain political quarters" had been trying to "sow confusion" in Bolivia and cause bloodshed. It did not say outright that the communists were behind the plot, but declared that communism was a danger to the peace and human dignity." It indicated that a drive against communist plans was in the offing in the upheaval.

"The utmost severity has been used to punish on Sovietizing attempts which destroy the structure of our institutions and dirigism the peace of our neighbors and the entire hemisphere," said the manifesto.

NEW INDIAN ACT NEARLY READY FOR ENACTMENT

110 of 124 Clauses In Act Approved

Ottawa, May. 16 (CP)—The Commons yesterday neared the end of the road in a five-year search for a new bill of rights for Canada's 125,000 Indians.

It approved 110 of the 124 clauses in the new Indian Act, which had its beginnings in 1946 when a parliamentary committee opened study on means to give the red man more control over his own affairs.

Yesterday several committees and a half-dozen parliamentary sessions have been devoted to study of the remodelled Indian Act. The legislation still has to go before the senate, which participated in the earlier committee examinations.

John Diefenbaker (PC—Lake Centre) urged the establishment of a Royal Commission to investigate grievances of the Indian people, for whom, he said, he felt that treaty promises made to them had not been carried out.

George Drew (PC—Carleton), Conservative leader, felt that the legislation did nothing more than improve an unsatisfactory situation. Basic rights of the Indians should be protected and they should be given opportunities for full citizenship.

Citizenship Minister Harris, discussing the legislation, said he did not depend upon it as a conference of Indian representatives within the next few months to study the effects of the legislation.

Post Amendments

The chamber voted down several amendments which opposition members suggested would improve the legislation.

The chamber also took the first step towards accepting two gifts to Canada by Norway. Prime Minister Mackenzie King, who died July 22 last.

It gave first reading to bills providing for the administration of property surrendered by Germany to the King. His Ottawa home, Kingsmere, is to be made available to students for historical study and research, while Laurier House, another memento, will become a public park and the Liberal governor and summer home for prime ministers.

In the four set aside for study of foreign publications, the U.S. and other members continued a filibuster against a bill to increase rates of divorce bills from those in Newfoundland. Only three of 130 divorces granted on the order paper were passed.

TWO FLEAD GUILTY

Kitchener, May 16—CP—Floyd Klinck, 32, of Galt, and Philip Reardon, 30, of Preston, in southwestern Ontario's Aylmer district, today pleaded guilty to a robbery charge in connection with Monday's $3,000 holdup of a bank at Port Rowan branch at nearby Linwood. They were remanded to Friday.

Jebb Promises U.K. Will Stand Whole-Heartedly With U.S. In Fight Against Red Aggression

New York, May 16. (CP)—Sir Gladwyn Jebb, chief British delegate to the United Nations, pledged last night that Britain will stand "whole-heartedly with the United States in the general struggle against communist-inspired aggression."

Jeff defended Britain's record in the Korean war and her trade policy toward communist China in a speech before the New York City Bar Association.

"Everything we can do, short of fatally weakening our main position, to assist the general effort, we shall do, even if that results in a fairly well result, in some lowering of the standard of living in Great Britain itself, which has already been severely curtailed by the war," he said. Britain early in the war had halted exports of strategic materials to communist China, particularly petroleum products, but not rubber. Now, rubber shipments also were embargoed.

The British diplomat predicted that the U.N. General Assembly will adopt new embargo recommendations later this week. The 60-member assembly political committee now is debating to open debate on the embargo plan.

Four General Principles

Jebb urged that Britain and the United States get together on four general principles to end the Korean conflict and avert a third world war. They are:

1. "We should not take any action which conceivably might result in a quick ending of the war, but which might equally well, if not more probably, result . . . in a wide extension of the conflict."

2. ". . . a world war, even though it may be forced upon us, should not be allowed to occur through any deliberate action on our part."

3. ". . . the word appeasement should be avoided. . . . since it can be interpreted as entailing any kind of negotiations—even for a cease-fire."

4. ". . . we should, by resolute and determined action in Korea, seek to bring the Chinese to a conference table at which, first of all, a Korean settlement, in accord with the declared principles of the United Nations and involving the withdrawal of all foreign forces, will be negotiated and, this having been done, other subjects of obvious importance will be debated."

Jebb said he had "often heard it alleged that we had subordinated our support for the United Nations to our own commercial interests in Hong Kong."

Nothing could be further from the truth," he declared.

Destroyer Athabaskan on Way To Home Port and Big Welcome After Landing an Ill Sailor

Prince Rupert, B. C., May 16—(CP)—The destroyer Athabaskan was back in coastal waters, continuing her interrupted journey homeward after landing an ill sailor here.

The warship, en route to Esquimalt, B. C., after nearly 10 months' service in Korea, arrived here last night to disembark AB. Raymond Dean of Toronto, stricken two days previously by acute appendicitis.

An hour after the Athabaskan docked, Dean was safely operating table at Prince Rupert General Hospital. Doctors today said he doing well.

The Athabaskan was nine days out of Korean waters when Dean was taken ill. At that time, the warship was 1,100 miles from her home base at Esquimalt and 600 from Prince Rupert.

Hundreds of residents from this port 400 miles north of Vancouver lined the waterfront to welcome the destroyer back to Canada. It was the first naval vessel to call in here direct from action.

"We hadn't expected to find a run full speed into Victoria," said Cmdr. Rosco Welland of Toronto, The Athabaskan's captain, "so we headed for Prince Rupert."

Now Scotia brandy at nearby Linwood. They were remanded to Friday.

"As soon as I smelled those pines and the stink of fish, I was back to Canada, and was I good," said AB. Ken MacKay of New Westminster, B.C.

Prince Rupert's a lot of bombardment but all our wounds were self-inflicted," said Cmdr. Welland laconically as he glanced at the broken plaster in the wardroom.

"That was caused by the firing of the gun on the deck just above."

"The naval war in Korea was very quiet," Welland continued. he said. "The North Korean navy was sunk by then and our job was to patrol the coast of Korea and nothing more than a routine sampan could then get through."

The 600-mile coastline was blocked by the United States naval vessels, 40 British, as well as Australian, Dutch, Australian, Pakistani, Siamese and Canadian.

"There wasn't much excitement," said Welland. "Bombarding was the strong point but the enemy was overwhelmed before we got there. He was on the back."

The enemy, however, had laid a lot of mines. They were the biggest hazard in shallow water. Five United Nations minesweepers struck mines and sank. The Athabaskan blew up 13 mines.

SCRATCH SHEET AID TO ILLEGAL BETTING VERDICT

Operators Given Term In Jail and Fined

Hamilton, May 16—(CP)—A racing scratch sheet published in Hamilton and distributed in several western Ontario cities was described yesterday as an aid to illegal betting.

The building, where the sheet, Sporting News, is published "comes within the definition of a common betting house," said magistrate Peter Hopkins.

He convicted the publisher, William H. Shaver, on six counts of keeping a common betting house, publishing information and disseminating information for use in betting.

Arthur G. Taylor, telegraph operator for the paper, charged jointly with Shaver, was found guilty on three counts—keeping common betting house, supplying betting information and receiving and publishing information relating to betting.

Shaver was sentenced to three months in jail and to fines and costs amounting to $300. Taylor received a two-month sentence.

Defence counsel Harry Filion said an appeal likely will be entered.

The trial of the two men was held at the same time as sittings of the Ontario legislature crime committee in Toronto.

Committee Criticized

Mr. Hazell criticized the committee for its procedure. Inspector William Tomlinson, head of the Ontario Provincial Police anti-gambling squad in charge of the Toronto probe, since he was one of the chief Crown witnesses in the Hamilton gambling case.

Magistrate Hopkins replied that he had been carefully restrained from listening to, or reading about, the committee's proceedings.

In explaining his decision, he said Sporting News was "outlawed" and supplied to assist in betting on racing in the United States and other places outside Canada.

"It had telegraph service and a telegraph operator, Taylor, for assembling of racing results and it had 2,000 subscribers," he said.

Television, on the paper, which numbered in the thousands each week, were not for amusement purposes, magistrate Hopkins said, but for illegal betting. He estimated that there were 1,099 calls in one day.

"People would find the scratch sheet useful in calling bets and it would be useful to bookies, too," he said.

Enemy Offensive Likely to Begin In Next Few Days

Increasing Numbers Red Prisoners Being Brought In

Tokyo, May. 17—(Thursday)—(AP)—Communist troops poured forth out of the hills in attacks all along the eastern front of Korea Wednesday night.

It was too early to tell whether it was the start of the expected red offensive.

The reds struck from Chunchon, 45 miles northeast of Seoul, eastward to the Sea of Japan.

The attacks came not long after Maj.-Gen. William Hoge, commander of the United States 9th corps, predicted the red offensive would open Friday.

190, 000 In Force

The general said if the Chinese follow their usual pattern of attacking on the full moon, the blow should come soon. The moon comes full on the 18th of the month. That gives him two days.

Allied intelligence officers said a strong force of 190,000 reds were ready for the signal to begin their biggest offensive of the war.

Allied patrols reaching across the 10-mile-wide no-man's land have probed cautiously for Chinese build-ups. Deeper penetrations were held artillery fire from self-propelled guns.

A divisional spokesman said increasing numbers of red prisoners were being brought back, indicating heavy thickening of communist morale. . . . ap.

Feigning Preparedness

Feigning radio sought to bolster Chinese troops by assuring them they have shown that the "United States is nothing but a paper tiger." Te broadcast said war will continue until "we drive the mad, shameless American invaders completely out of Korea."

Allied troops have had time in a 5-day lull to build strongly to bolster their defences. A division spokesman said the allied forces are probably in the best positions they have manned yet. He said the troops are confident and in good spirits.

HIGH TAX RATE

Kirkland Lake, May 17—(CP)—Boosted by substantial increases in both high and public school rates, the Kirkland Lake township was set Tuesday night at 52.5 mills, an increase of 13.5 mills over the 1950 rate. Total jump in school rates accounts for 8.25 mills of the increase while education costs account for 37.25 mills of the total rate.

Tank Patrol Into Enemy Territory Eerie Experience for Princess Pats

By BILL ROSS

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Somewhere in Korea, May 17— (Delayed) — (CP) — Tanks again today drove far into territory that nominally is Chinese-held.

The force included Patton tanks, artillery and mortars.

"We probably made a lot of fire power," said the force commander as his bristling convoy sallied forth from its position early today.

Though the force bit deep into the enemy's area as did similar patrols working forward elsewhere on the United Nations front, there was no more commanding positions and held dominating more than heights he has been the case, the soldiers developed into fairly keen map readers, learning the art as a risky area.

It was a unique experience being perched astride a gun on the command tank leading the tanks and trucks into battle country—one side which a fortnight ago bustled with enemy traffic and now was altogether silent.

Only once in a while did the force pass a peasant family still tilling the fields, its children hiding at the roadside in small returning United Nations troops.

One soldier marching alongside commented: "This is a better way of going to war than I thought it would be. I'm not walking."

His platoon the longest march up the highest mountain — 2,000 feet — before bouncing into the position.

Many young soldiers in the platoon had their first sight of enemy dead as they made their way to the foot of the mountain. They passed 35 Chinese, felled by artillery shrapnel, apparently by an air strike.

In weather the hottest it has been for days, it was a long climb for troops who had been living at lower altitudes for the last fortnight. Many were barely at the top when another platoon of the force, which reported hearing Chinese commands over its walkie-talkie.

Indeed, it was not long before later that another patrol operating to the west struck the enemy and a brisk fight developed.

It was an all-round relief when the commander agreed with a suggestion that the platoon take a short cut down the mountain to meet the transport on the road and be carried back to the tank harbor.

Again astride the gun of a tank, whose crew provided a beautiful suspension rode the bumps like a limousine," as one man observed, it was like a train ride home to re-enter the defence perimeter—and swim out of the Fire Destroys Storage Shed Of Lumber Co.

Peterborough, May 16 (CP)—A fire shortly after midnight destroyed the large wooden storage shed of the Moldaver Lumber Company here containing four box-car loads of kiln-dried lumber. Two large trucks were also destroyed along with another carload of lumber.

Total loss is estimated at $25,000. Cause of the blaze is not known.

Firemen were handicapped by a low water head caused by the hose about three-quarters of a mile to Crebar's Creek before the large hosehline could be brought into action.

The fire followed on $10,000 blaze earlier Tuesday which destroyed a sawmill and several acres of pine woods at Apsley, 40 miles north of Peterborough. The fire was started by a flying spark from a steam engine drawing a pile of sawdust and wood shavings.

Women Feature English News

London, May 16. (AP)—The faint stirrings of spring and few showers shook up this English man's world today.

The horrified Bond Street optician opened his shop, gingerly client and found a pair of false teeth in the window. The lady said she wanted her artificial dentures to match the color of her clothes.

Lords, the exclusive stretch of lawn where men—but no women—have played cricket since 1814, was taken over for practice today by a visiting team of 16 Australian women. Fellow newspapers called it "in an unbridled moment" and "the last stronghold.

But there were reassuring signs. The BBC cut comedian Tommy Trinder's program—one of the BBC's most popular attractions—off the air last night because he referred to nude women.

Navy Finds Danger to Human Beings From Cosmic Rays at High Altitudes

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
(Associated Press Science Editor)

Denver, Colo., May 16—(AP)—Discovery of danger to humans in cosmic rays at high altitudes was reported today by the United States Navy to the Aero Medical Association.

This hazard begins at about 20 miles above the earth, where rays are expected to fly. This harm is similar to the effects of radioactivity.

The report was by Dr. Hermann J. Schaefer of the Naval School of Aviation Medicine. The work for years has been one of the chief problems. Investigation of these rays with emphasis on their possible effects on man.

Cosmic rays are atoms which fall at tremendous speeds into the upper atmosphere coming from the sun and stars. At a little above 20 miles they becoming atoms strike the thin air and break up into fragments. Below 20 miles all the rays are fragments.

There is no harm in these fragment rays, Dr. Schaefer reported. But up where the cosmic rays hit atoms hit there is danger. Some are heavy. The heaviest thing identified is iron. Photographs were taken in the upper altitudes where the collisions made marks resembling scratches on the film.

An atom of silver was broken into 70 pieces which showed on the film, and that number was only a small percentage of the total pieces. The cosmic particle which struck had the energy of 6,000,000,000,000 electron volts, a power far beyond anything known on the earth.

Dr. Schaefer said that the heavier cosmic atoms drive completely through a human body, leaving a trail of smashed tissue atoms all the way. He said other bright flights through these days would do any harm but that daily flights for a long time would be dangerous.

These same rays may be a serious health problem for interplanetary travel.

Port Dalhousie Gets Regatta Until 1970

St. Catharines, Ont., May 16—(CP)—The Royal Canadian Henley Regatta, reputed the largest rowing regatta in the world, will continue to be held at Port Dalhousie until at least 1970.

A new agreement signed yesterday in Toronto between the Canadian National Exhibition Amateur Oarsmen and the Henley Aquatic Association provides for keeping the regatta at Port Dalhousie. It calls for the aquatic association to pay the oarsmen's association $1,000 a year for first five years, $1,250 for the next five years and $1,500 for the rest of the period of the contract. In the past the payment has been $1,000 a year.

40 RCAF Planes Join in Search For Missing Craft

Summerside, P. E. I., May 16 - (CP) — More than 40 RCAF planes from bases in Central Canada to Newfoundland took off today in the second day's intensive search for an aircraft and crew that vanished with four aboard.

Handling of the operation was split into two parts today — one being directed from this base — home of the missing Dakota—and the other from Goose Bay, Labrador. The Newfoundland craft was last reported Monday night over Goose Bay on a navigational training hop.

The air force — assisted by American planes from Newfoundland bases — now has covered some 120,000 square miles of Labrador, Gaspe, Anticosti Island and

Enemy Defenses Number 1 Problem

Ridgway Says Reds Have Strong Positions

Tokyo, May 17—(Thursday)—(AP)—Lt.-Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, United Nations commander in Korea, said today the enemy's defenses are the biggest problem facing the United Nations forces.

Ridgway told a press conference that the Communists have strong positions and are fighting hard to hold them.

He said the enemy has a lot of artillery and mortars.

Ridgway said he has no intention of changing the present battle line.

He said he has no plans for a new offensive.

Cheese Exchange To be Organized At Next Meeting

After many years of operation the Belleville Cheese Board became just a name Tuesday evening following its opening meeting of the year. At the next meeting on May 29th, according to new cheese marketing regulations, a Belleville Cheese Exchange will be organized.

This follows as result of the Ontario Cheese Producers Marketing Board taking over the marketing of Ontario cheese. Under the new regulations in the province will be closed and all cheese will be sold on call or auction basis. Where organized, Belleville will be one of the points where an exchange will be organized.

C. E. Harkness of Iroquois, President of the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association, said the reason for the change was that cheese superintendents of the Dominion Department of Agriculture were changing their methods of grading under the new marketing set-up.

Licences Are Fixed

Under the marketing scheme there will be a producer's and cheese board licence fee paid to the marketing board for all cheese sold for the season of 1951. This three cents per pound will be used to bring up the price for cheese for those of all factories will be paid an equalized price. Minimum inspection fee for cheese will be 36 cents per pound, while the export price is 30 cents per pound for the two years' inspection charges. All cheese made after May 10 will come under the new plan.

Cheese for the domestic market will be sold as better—for the highest bidder. If the minimum price of 36 cents is not offered the cheese will go for export. If all cheese is sold off the exchange for the domestic market factories declaring would have to be designating for export cheese.

To effect savings in freight it was hoped that no cheese from Belleville went would be exported.

Entirely New Set-Up

Mr. Harkness said the marketing board was most anxious that the new marketing scheme be understood by the producers, but noted that it was an entirely new set-up and mistakes were almost certain to be made.

"We are bound to make some errors but remember that last year the price received for cheese was 28 cents. This year the average price to be paid to farmers will be around 34 cents," he said.

Under the new system of marketing there would be more work for the cheese exchange secretary as factories from a distance would report their cheese to the local exchange.

Pay Usual Premium

To a question from the floor Mr. Harkness said that the usual premium for quality cheese would be paid this year. Every buyer would pay the market board for cheese, which in turn would pay the factory.

"Do all cheese have to be boxed?" another voice from the floor asked.

"Yes, at the moment," replied Mr. Harkness, "but there may possibly be a change. The marketing board has the power to exempt factories making special type cheese, but even so these factories will still have the three cents licence fee."

A total of 304 colored and 62 white cheese were offered on the board. All sold for 33 3-4 cents per pound.

Factories offering cheese were as follows: Colored—Brenty 70; Bidgood 20; Clovercrest 80; Melrose 32; Beulah 38; Eastern Ontario 30; Lonsdale 36; Lakeside 30; Ameliasburgh 30; Consecon 30; Wellington 30; Hillcrest 30; Cherry Valley

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, May 16 (CP)—Prices edged slightly higher in extremely quiet trading as the session progressed on the stock market today.

In industrials papers and liquor showed a majority of gains. Steels, constructions, banks and refining oils were lower and the rest of the board was about evenly balanced. Price changes were mostly in small fractions and many issues were unchanged.

Base metals tended a little higher as most leaders added fractions. United Keno Hill, Steep Rock, Sherritt Gordon, Golden Manitou, International Nickel, Consolidated Smelters and Falconbridge were ahead. Hudson Bay was an exception as it bucked the trend for a $1.75 loss and Noranda was down ½.

Western oils were mixed.

Golds attracted little interest.

Brown's Drugs, Bowling Champs Given Awards

Brown's Drugs bowling team were presented with the Guay League championship trophy at the mens' major bowling league banquet held at the Queensway Hotel last night. They were also presented with the Allore Company Play-off Trophy, a new trophy this year, symbolic of play-off supremacy.

Members of the team included Lou Furata, George Brown, Cec Tyler, Bob Cretney, Herm Chambers, "Red" Greenough and Charlie Stain.

Allore's Timbertoppers and Walt's Insurance teams were presented with second and third place money in the 1st division race. House's Screwballs and Korkers, winners of the 2nd division and Gray's V S's of the 3rd were also presented with their winnings.

An average of 240 for 77 games was sufficient to win for Eddie Moore a cup presented by Guay's Bowling Alley. Similar cups were presented to Ernie Crenshaw and Bill Milne for high single of 441 and triple of 968.

Winners Congratulated

Charlie Allore spoke on behalf of the league and congratulated the winning teams and the individual prize winners. He thanked the executives executive for the manner in which the league had operated during the past year. In his address Mr. Allore stated that he felt there was not enough publicity given to bowling in a check of the town's two bowling alleys made by himself, he found that there were approximately 750 participants in the sports during the year just passed. He pointed out that this was a much larger number than hockey or baseball, two of the so-called more popular sports, could boast.

A new executive comprising five members was elected including Les Carruthers, Norm McCoy, Howard Aziz, Peter Robert, and Charlie Allore.

A very enjoyable hour of entertainment was provided by Alex Read of Niagara Falls.

Mac Smith Pres. Of Optimist Club

Mac Smith, popular young businessman was named president of the Optimist Club of Belleville at their regular dinner meeting held on Monday evening. A charter member of the local club, president-elect Mac will serve as sixth president, a post he has earned for his tireless effort since joining the service club. A typical Belleville boy he enlisted in the Royal Canadian Artillery at the age of seventeen and served overseas for four and one-half years. Upon discharge he enrolled at the Ontario Business College and on graduation established himself in business at the east end of Dundas Street with his Texaco Service Station. Associating himself with military life Mac is at present second in command of the 36th Battery (SP) RCA playing a prominent part in the local reserve army setup.

Also named on the secondary ballot as a Board of Governors were Donald Boyce, Jo Agnew, Wm. Lynch, Howard Kokesh and John Ryan. The entire dinner meeting was devoted to business with delegates planned to attend the annual convention of district 28 being held in Quebec City on April 18 and 19.

Zwick's Island Supervisor

It was reported by the chairman of Zwick's Island project that a full-time supervisor has been engaged with duties to commence on June 1st. Extensive plans were revealed with the Optimist Club to co-operate fully with the Parks Board to develop the island into one of the finest parks in the district. Plans are being formulated for the revival of the across-the-bay swim from Rednersville dock to Zwick's Island with more details to be available at a later date, a suitable engraved cup and a substantial cash prize having already been promised for the event.

DID NOT HIT DOGS

Huntingdon, Ind., May 16 (AP) Farmer Ronald Norwood fired his rifle seven several times yesterday at a pack of dogs in his hog lot. When he went to survey his marksmanship he found four dead dogs and four others wounded so badly he had to destroy them. The dogs had disappeared.

Officers Praise Cadet Corps For Fine Showing

Bancroft — The army cadet corps of Worth Hastings High School was praised highly by the inspecting officers, Major D. C. Darton of Oakville, Central Command Headquarters and Captain L. Len Hyslop of Kingston, Area Cadet Training Officer on Monday. Speaking at the conclusion of the corps' first annual ceremonial parade and exhibition of training methods they complimented all for their fine display on their first public appearance.

Outstanding was the work of the student cadet officers and the general knowledge of infantry weapons that was shown by all ranks. Cadet officers, non-commissioned officers and men had demonstrations with the rifle, Bren gun, 3-inch mortar and hand grenade. There were also practical classes in first aid, map reading, physical training and target shooting.

With Major Darton and Captain Hyslop at the reviewing post were Major C. E. Broad, Captain S. R. Walker, Lieutenant A. R. Towle, 2nd Lieutenant Murray Cooney, Sergeant Major Don Russell and Sergeant Jack Miller of 'A' Company, Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, and W. R. Robinson, principal of North Hastings High School and officer in charge of the cadet corps. A small number of parents and other adults were present on the high school grounds to witness the results of eight months' training by Principal Robinson, Laurence Davidson and Henry Smith of the school staff, and CSM Russell and Sgt. Miller of the local company of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

In charge of the parade was Cadet Major Fred Avery, with Cadet Captain Jack Hutton as second-in-command and Gary Maxwell as Company Sergeant-Major. The platoon commanders were Cadet Lieutenants William Davidson, Wayne Coe and Walter Higgins. With the boys marched two platoons of girls under the command of Company Sergeant-Major Pat Hutton and Sergeants Ruth Fleeger and Norma Hay.

At the conclusion of the program crests for proficiency in marksmanship were present to Cadet Lieut. William Delyea, Corporal Desmond Fleeger and Cadets Ernie Brown and Joe Vance by Major C. H. Broad. Cadet Major Fred Avery and Corporal Lionel Towle won the trophies for the best cadet and the best N.C.O. in parade, annual competitive awards that are given by the officers and NCOs of 'A' Company Hastings and Prince Regiment. These presentations were made by Major Darton.

TRENTON

Store Majority Votes For May 23 Closing

Trenton — (Special) — Indications are that the majority of Trenton stores will be closed Wednesday afternoon, May 23, despite the full holiday on May 24.

A questionnaire circulated by the retail merchants committee of the Trenton Chamber of Commerce showed that 34 of 52 merchants interviewed were in favor of closing. In two or the categories, merchants voted 100 per cent against remaining open. The two were the shoe stores and hardware. Grocers and butchers voted seven to four for staying open, clothing stores voted "no" eight to six, electrical and furniture men voted against, ten to one, and the miscellaneous category showed five to four against.

The vote does not mean that it is compulsory for storekeepers to close, but the committee has made a recommendation to its members that they do so.

DESIRE EARLY PEACE

Tokyo, May 16 — (AP)—The Japanese people were told today in a report approved by Gen. Ridgway that the United States desires an early peace treaty giving Japan full autonomy and an expanding economy. The statement was contained in a long report by Maj.-Gen. William F. Marquat, chief of the occupation's economic and scientific section.

MEET IN JERUSALEM

Tel Aviv, Israel, May 16—(AP) —Eliahu Dobkin, a member of the Jewish Agency Executive, said yesterday the next World Zionist Congress will open Aug. 14 in Jerusalem. The convention will be devoted mainly to relations between the Zionist World Organization and the state of Israel and the dovetailing of immigration plans.

Religious Film Library Considered by Council

The theme of the meeting of the Belleville and District Film Council which was held last week was strictly business. Among the items of business which were discussed was a proposition which was advanced by the Eastern Ontario Film Federation of which this council is a member. The proposition spoke concerning the advisability of the foundation of a religious film library, and, of course, the question then arose as to what support the various churches would give. Those who desire to participate would of necessity have to let the council know. So at the next meeting of the council, which will be held in the month of June, the results of the inquiry concerning this matter which a committee is making at the present time will be discussed. All who are interested in having their views aired please let one of the members of the council know.

Also on the agenda was an item of current interest. At Queen's University is to be held on the days of the 4th through to the 8th of August a film institute which will give training in the use of audio-visual aids. This item was discussed at some length as to the advisibility of the sending of a delegate to it, as it is an all province wide drive to get the people of the province more conscious of the work which can be done with films. After the discussion was finished it was decided that someone who was greatly interested should go and the final decision would be given at the next meeting.

10 ADOPTED CHILDREN

Rotterdam, May 16 (Reuters)—Sixteen hundred new settlers will arrive in Quebec May 24 on the Dutch liner Volendam.

The ship, which sailed last night, carries 40 babies and about 500 children under 12. Mr. and Mrs. Veerman of Apeldoorn, who will start farming in Canada, have 10 adopted children with them some of whom were orphaned during the German bombardment of Rotetrdam in 1940.

Spring Seeding Near Completion In South Ontario

Toronto, May 16 (CP) —Spring seeding is nearing completion in southern Ontario and is well along in the northern part of the province as well.

The weekly crop report of the Ontario Department of Agriculture says that in some counties seeding is completed. In others it was delayed by heavy rains last week. A concentrated effort pushed the job along. The Haldimand county agricultural representative reported that in one night he saw eight tractors operating with lights while driving along a 10-mile stretch of highway.

Frost damage was reported to garden crops in the north, especially in Timiskaming.

THREW STONES AT SOLDIERS

Tokyo, May 16—(Reuters)—The American provost court today passed six-month prison sentences on three Koreans convicted of throwing stones at American soldiers. All three pleaded guilty to participating in a brawl March 21 when a mixed Korean-Japanese mob assailed six soldiers killing one and wounding two.

Officials Forced To Adopt Tough Policy in Steel

New York, May 16 (AP) —Inflated requests for metal from military and so-called essential users is forcing United States defence officials to adopt a get-tough policy in handling the Controlled Materials Plan The Iron Age says today.

Such requests for steel, aluminum and copper total far more than available production of some items, the national metal-working weekly reports.

"Officials in charge of dividing available output among various factors in the economy know these requests must be squeezed down to realistic size if C.M.P. is to work."

The Iron Age estimates scheduled steel production in the United States this week at 104 per cent of rated capacity, unchanged from the last two weeks, and says the industry is well on the way to another record for steel produced in a single month.

WEDDINGS

BELLINGER—FIRTH

A lovely May wedding was solemnized on Saturday, the 12th., at high noon in Tabernacle United Church, Belleville, by the Rev. Frank B. Herbeck, pastor of the church, when Grace Marion Firth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Firth, of Belleville, became the bride of Antony Michael Bellinger, also of Belleville, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Bellinger. Apple blossoms and yellow daffodils formed a most attractive setting.

Mr. Herold McNish, church organist, rendered the wedding music, and the soloist, Miss Beverley Buck, sang before the ceremony, "The Lord's Prayer", and during the signing of the register, "Because".

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a charming bridal gown of white lace over satin, featuring a molded bodice buttoned down the back, with bolero effect, bouffant skirt falling into a medium train. Her matching Juliet cap of lace held her fingertip veil of tulle illusion, and she carried a cascade bouquet of white gardenias, white sweet peas and bouvardia.

Miss Joyce Firth, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, gowned in pale green net over taffeta, fashioned with right-fitting bolero, shoulder cape with Peter Pan collar, and bouffant skirt.

Miss Marion Bertram, of Belleville, and Miss Noreen Callaghan, also of Belleville, were bridesmaids. They dressed respectively in yellow and yellow net, over taffeta, made on similiar lines to that of the maid of honor. All wore matching headdresses and carried bouquets of assorted summer flowers.

Mr. Rouclef Coleman, of Belleville, was groomsman, and the ushers were Mr. Robert Flindall and Mr. Ken Bellinger, both of Belleville.

The wedding reception was held in the ladies' parlors of the church, where the bride's mother received in navy blue shade with navy accessories and corsage of pink carnations, received the guests.

For the wedding trip to Belleville and New York City, the bride chose an ensemble of gold-colored gabardine, with navy blue accessories. Upon their return, Mr. and Mrs. Bellinger will reside in Toronto, Ontario.

Out-of-town guests were present from Rochester, Woodstock and Toronto.

Previous to her marriage, the bride was honored at a trousseau tea given by her mother, Mrs. Arthur Firth; at a crystal shower given by Miss Marion Bertram; at a presentation held by the Keen Age Club of Tabernacle United Church; at a miscellaneous shower given by Miss Noreen Callaghan, and at a mixed bridge party at the home of Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Forrester.

VAN NORMAN — CRONKRIGHT

A quiet, but pretty wedding took place at St. Michael's rectory in Belleville, on May 2, when in a double ring ceremony, the Rev. Father Handley united in marriage, Barbara Jean Cronkright, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Cronkright, of Plainfield, and Lawrence John Van Norman, only son of Mr. and Mrs. John Van Norman, of Belleville.

The bride was smartly attired in a French blue gabardine suit with navy accessories, and corsage of red American Beauty roses.

She was attended by her sister-in-law, Mrs. Rose Cronkright, of Belleville, who wore a steel grey gabardine suit with navy accessories and corsage of pink carnations. Mr. William Brooks, of Belleville, was groomsman.

Amid showers of confetti and good wishes, the happy couple left for a motor trip to western points. Upon their return they will reside in Belleville.

STONEHOUSE — FORREST

Rev. Bruce G. Grey officiated at the marriage of Lois Marie Forrest, daughter of Mrs. Forrest, and the late Mr. Forrest, to John Morton Stonehouse, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Stonehouse, of Windsor, in Kew Beach United Church, Toronto.

Given in marriage by her brother, Fred Forrest, the bride wore a floor-length taffeta gown, displaying a slight train. Her matching Juliet cap, ornamented with feathers, held her fingertip veil, and she carried a bouquet of red roses and baby's breath.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Lee Tupling, and bridesmaid, Peggy Saxworth, were waffle green net over taffeta, with matching bolero and flowered headdresses and carried bouquets of mixed flowers.

Len Begley of Marmora, was best man, and the ushers were Robert Forrest and George Babcock.

The bride's mother received in light blue crepe and lace, with navy accessories and corsage of pink sweetpeas, assisted by the bridegroom's mother in powder blue sheer, grey and pink accessories and corsage of roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Stonehouse will reside in Marmora.

JOHNSTOWN W.A.

The Johnstown W.A. held their May meeting at Mrs. McKinnon's home. Mrs. Glen Shields, president, opened the meeting.

The Scripture reading was given by Mrs. McKinnon and the explanation by Mrs. McKinnon.

A reading was given by Mrs. Alva Meyers, "The Lack of a True Portrait of Jesus". Mrs. C. Curtis sang a solo, "My Mother's Prayers".

A contest was won by Mrs. McClean and Mrs. Meyers.

A social half hour was enjoyed by all.

devotional period, the Scripture lesson was read by Kathleen Teats, the meditation by Ruth MacMillan.

During the business period, the Club accepted the invitation of Maida and Jack Griffin to hold the picnic at their cottage in July.

A feature of the evening was a group picture taken of the club, followed by a social program. Helen Ackerman favored with two solos and two violin numbers were played by Archie MacMillan, revealing hidden talent in one of the members.

The program varied decorated boxes, ranging from a large flower to a boy's pail were "auctioned" off by the auctioneers, Archie MacMillan and Bill Townson, dessert to fit the occasion.

The social hour brought to a close the regular meetings until September.

Girl Students Take Honors In Law Course

Vancouver, May 16. (CP)—Two girls have licked the labels on red veal of more than 100 male graduates in University of British Columbia's law faculty.

And another has won the Governor-General's gold medal for Forrest to John Morton Stonehouse of Marmora, son of Mr. and Mrs. O. Meredith Stonehouse, of Windsor, in Kew Beach United Church, Toronto.

Lady Fletcher To Speak Here

Lady Fletcher, who will address the Women's Canadian Club in St. Andrew's Church Hall on Thursday afternoon next, on the topic "The Voice of East Africa" is an eloquent speaker and well-versed in the various phases of her subject.

Following the outbreak of war in 1939, Lady Fletcher worked in conjunction with the Polish Relief Fund as chairman of the Case Committee, and in 1941 was asked by the Ministry of Information as a speaker, becoming one year later one of the 12 national speakers of the ministry, with 1,011 lectures to her credit.

In 1944 she did a welfare course with the government and in that present out to Germany as an UNNRA welfare officer, working in Belsen concentration camp and in other camps for two years. Upon her return to London in 1947, was engaged in looking after displaced persons.

In 1949 she spent seven months of intensive study in East Africa, returning, toured England speaking on East Africa under the auspices of the Central Office of Information.

Women's Activities

KINGSTON ROAD W.A.

The regular May meeting of the Women's Association of the Kingston Road church was held at the home of Mrs. R. J. [illegible] with a good attendance.

The program was in charge of Mrs. F. Conboy [illegible] was president; conducted the business of the afternoon. Mrs. Percy Parrott was chosen as delegate to attend the annual W.A. convention at Holloway Road church. Current events variety program was also planned for May 30th at the church.

The report of the Flower fund showed a balance on hand of $7.27.

Mrs. Conboy called on Mrs. M. Ryan, Miss Thelma Shaw, Mrs. D. Way, Mrs. M. Reid and Mrs. H. Walkom to read poems, some humorous and some serious, but all had "Mother" in their theme.

Mrs. F. Parrott gave a helpful and interesting outline of a W.A. member's obligations to her church.

Mrs. Porter read a splendid poem "The Tale of a Brooch".

Mrs. J. Haig favored with a solo.

Great Mothers

Mrs. Farnsworth gave an inspiring address on the topic of "Mother" and said Anna Jarvis first set a special day in which to honor mother. It was first called "Mothering Day". She spoke of the mothers of great men such as Abraham Lincoln, St. Augustine and John Wesley, pointing out the wonderful influence they had on their early lives and drawing attention to the fact that mothers must set children a good example and pray for them constantly.

Mrs. J. Parrott sang an appropriate solo "Mother".

The collection was $4.80 and the flower fund $1.35.

Mrs. Garbutt and her conveners served refreshments and a social half hour was spent, bringing to a close a pleasant afternoon.

MOUNT PLEASANT-RAWDON W.M.S.

The regular meeting of the Mount Pleasant-Rawdon Woman's Missionary Society was held last Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Will Hubble, with 14 members, five visitors and two Baby Band members in attendance.

The president, Mrs. Rose Hoard, read a poem "God is in Every Tomorrow", and Mrs. Kenneth Weaver prayed quiet minutes. Thanks were extended to the hostess for her hospitality. The June meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. John Hay, and the July meeting will be held at the church hall when the Baby Band and Mission Band leaders and mothers will be entertained.

Mrs. Will Potts read "The Stewardship of Prayer", from the Missionary Monthly.

Comprehensive Summary

Mrs. Percy MacMullen gave a comprehensive summary of the study chapter, "Life Begins at 3000" in which she told of Japan's land reform, of five million acres being partitioned to farmers; of the salt, tobacco and camphor mines now being available to small investors; of the rich coal deposits; the many charitable organizations that had done much to do away with class distinctions, and of how Japan was recognizing the value of recreation and is preparing for entertaining people for the Olympics. She also mentioned that the railroads were still under government control, and that the Sun Rising flag might now be used, but that not many were taking advantage of this permission. Also that 39 women had been elected to the Diet in 1946, "Japan's defeat had in reality been her victory." As a nation Japan is dedicated to peace and compulsory education.

Following the summary, Mrs. Will Hubble rendered a violin selection accompanied at the piano by the president.

Two-thirds Undernourished

The special program was based on, "How we can work for peace through helping to feed the hungry". Two-thirds of the world is undernourished. A special leaflet, prepared by Mrs. R. Long and Miss Annie Bishop pointed out the Christians' responsibility of aiding food to the hungry, and in the question and answer parts taken by Mrs. Roy Thrasher and Mrs. Frank Jeffs, it was shown that the majority of hungry people live in Africa, India, China, South America, and the East Indies.

Some nations have too much food; coffee is dumped in Brazil; potatoes destroyed in the United States, and in Canada, 15 million bushels of grain goes into liquor and beer. The Food and Agriculture Organization was formed in 1945, and 63 nations are now working for peace through feeding from hunger.

The United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund has aided 30 million children. Already Canada has spent 80 million dollars to combat aggression, and has pledged herself to 6 million dollars in a three-year defence project.

Feeding of Refugees

Some of the thing actually being done through the World Council of Churches was the feeding of refugees and the distribution of clothing, the distribution of thousands of pounds of powdered milk to orphanages by Dr. Bott, United Church missionary.

The Canadian Church Relief Abroad is a co-operative, undenominational undertaking uniting in the Canadian Council of Churches. Means and addresses of needy families will be forwarded to any desiring to send food parcels direct, and individual parcels may be forwarded through "Canadian CARE", 73 Albert St., Ottawa, Ontario.

Last year the Supply department of Mount Pleasant Auxiliary forwarded three bales valued at $187 and $5 in cash for overseas relief.

The president asked all the ladies to be prepared to contribute something for a bale at a later date when plans will be made for "salvage sewing."

Mrs. Gordon Linn, supply secretary, presented last year's outline of the need.

Club Activities

KIWANIS LADIES' AUXILIARY

The Kiwanis Ladies' Auxiliary met at the centre on Thursday for their regular monthly meeting. Mrs. C. Mott presided. Twelve members of the Keyette Club were guests for the evening. Miss Jean Doig, their president, expressed her thanks for the invitation. In addition, Miss Doig gave an excellent resume of the aims and projects of the recently formed Keyette Club. They sponsored the Rudolph Hop, a Christmas dance and the "March of Dimes", at the Belleville Collegiate. They also attended the Key Club convention at Peterborough at Easter.

Mrs. H. Craig reported that the proceeds of the April Bridge were $65, also that her committee were planning three rummage sales in the near future.

Mrs. Duffy, as convener of the Hobbycraft committee, suggested more welfare be undertaken in the fall and members should form groups to help with the project.

It was agreed to hold a pot-luck supper in Kiwanis Centre for the June meeting.

Mrs. R. Rimbs and Mrs. W. Slade arranged for an interesting game, which was enjoyed by all.

Refreshments, served by Mrs. C. Hyde's and her committee, brought the evening to a successful close.

BELLEVILLE ARTS-CRAFTS

The Belleville Arts and Crafts Club held its May meeting at the home of Mrs. H. R. Gibson, Foster Avenue, with Mrs. J. G. Hornsby, president, in the chair.

Following a preliminary business session, Mrs. Dorothy Howard addressed the club on the basic principles of picture composition as applicable to both photography and painting and the remainder of the evening was given over to viewing color transparencies taken by Mrs. Howard.

Miss Helen Sulgan thanked the speaker and refreshments were served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. A. Wilkes and Mrs. H. S. Rabbins. Paintings were exhibited by Edna Gibson, Ida Hornsby, Margaret Robbins and Gladys Simpson.

Women's Institute

UNIONDALE W.I.

The May meeting of Uniondale Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. George Bird and Mrs. Morris Bird, with 20 members present.

An invitation was accepted from the Wooler Quinte Institute, with 15 members partaking of this enjoyable evening at the home of Mrs. Glenn Myers.

An invitation to Wooler Town Hall for June 15, was accepted, where a demonstration will be put on. It is hoped members will be there in goodly numbers.

It was decided to pay $5 toward the broadcast of Fed. Agriculture, which will be on the air later in the season.

Delegates Chosen

Delegates for the District Annual at Wallbridge are as follows: Mrs. Sine, Mrs. Bird, Mrs. Grills and Mrs. Bush. This will be held at Stone Church, June 7. Also decided that the money to further educate a home boy, will not be sent from Uniondale. The majority thought there were openings in the summer months for boys to work and thus save for their education through fall and winter, for education is even the hard way, one is more liable to appreciate it.

The meeting at this point was handed over to Mrs. George Striker, who was responsible for an "Empire Day" program.

Mrs. George Burkitt gave a reading followed by a paper on "Our Flag", by Mrs. Gerald Herrington. Mrs. K. Fox favored with a piano solo, "Clayton's Grand March", which was enjoyed by all.

Mrs. H. Frost and Mrs. Vera Sine read short patriotic readings.

Mrs. Kenneth Faul gave an interesting talk on the "Fiftieth Anniversary", which she attended at Stone Church, dress parade being her main topic.

Mrs. George Striker gave a talk on "Census for 1951", why they are taken and hints to help along with filling out the numerous questions.

Next meeting will be held a week early on May 31, on account of District Annual being the W.I.'s meeting day. This will be held at Mrs. Harold Morrow's, 4th concession of Sidney.

It was also decided at this pest meeting that members pay their amount for the upkeep of the W.I. room at Trenton Hospital.

The May 21st meeting at Mrs. Morrow's will be a sale of potted and stripped plants, as funds for the treasury.

CHATTERTON W.I.

The May meeting of Chatterton W.I. was held at the home of Mrs. George Rose and Mrs. Don Rose at Holloway, with the president, Mrs. Gerald Irvine, presiding. There was an attendance of 19 adults and six children.

As it was in remembrance of "Mother's Day", the home was strewed as being made and not "built". Each child is a part of that home and what goes in that home has the most influence on that child, what you say, what you do, and how you manage that home will show in the life of the child.

Miss B. Corbett told of the office work of the Children's Aid, of the board of directors, how the funds are raised, the allowance given for each child, how they become wards of the society, and of the court procedure, and adoption of children, also some interesting information about the children, who will form part of the coming generation.

Two delegates to the district annual to be held on June 7, at the Stone church, were appointed with Mrs. Earl Soldier, of Holloway and Mrs. Ed. Emmerson, of Holloway, as alternates.

The subjects chosen from the co-operative program included "Psychology for the Home" or "Cultural Activities in Home and Community."

The remainder of the program consisted in readings by Mrs. Carson, Mrs. Ed. Emmerson, Mrs. MacInnis and Mrs. Rhesicky, and solos by Frances Rose, "John Brown", and "The Teddy Bear's Picnic".

Mrs. Harry Reid was appointed to look after the flower beds in the school yard.

Following community singing, the hostesses served refreshments.

MEMORIAL LIBRARY OPENED

Hamilton, May 14—(CP)—The $500,000 Mills Memorial Library was opened on the McMaster University's campus today by Dr. E. C. Fox, chancellor of the university, and a tablet in memory of its benefactor, David R. Mills was unveiled by Paul W. Hudson, president of the Mills foundation whose contribution made the building possible.

The library now houses 72,000 volumes and a music collection with provision for more books and a fine arts collection.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Engagement rings aren't the most important

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am going steady with a Marine and he has asked me to marry him. I told him I thought we should be engaged for a while before we get married, and he said that was all right.

The trouble is, he hasn't said anything about sending me an engagement ring. I want one badly, and it would make me very happy to have it. But I don't like how to go about getting it. I can't ask him for it because that wouldn't be right. Besides, I'm not a girl with that kind of nerve. What would you advise me to do?

B.M.

Dear B.M.:

The best advice you to do is to let things ride. Your Marine boy may not have the money to get you an engagement ring at this time, or he might even feel that it is best to wait until he gets himself out definitely. Even though he has suggested marriage, young men who are in the service are apt to be very unsettled in their minds, and sometimes act impulsively about their romances, then afterwards, feel a bit unsettled.

Your best plan is just to go along as you have been doing for awhile and let events developments. If he is serious about marriage, he will make it known to you in time soon. And, anyhow, remember that if you really love him, and he loves you, while an engagement ring is a nice thing to have, it's not really that important. There are lots of wives whose husbands never were able to afford engagement rings and it's never interfered with their happiness one bit. To keep your head in their right perspective is the recipe for a happy life.

Your mother is right, Jane

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I used to go out a few times every week with my girl friend in our neighborhood, candy store. But now my mother won't let me go out even on weekends. She reads in the newspapers about girls of my age being kidnapped and is afraid that something like that will happen to me. She knows I don't talk to strangers on the street or talk with people I don't know.

I am 14 and my girl friend is 15. Her mother doesn't think of those things and she can go out practically every night. Please tell me what to do.

Jane

Dear Jane:

I don't blame your mother at all for not wanting you to be hanging around in a neighborhood candy store several nights a week.

While perhaps her fears of your being kidnapped are a little exaggerated, it's not at all impossible that a girl of 14 who is constantly seen spending her time that way might have some unpleasant experience some time.

Fourteen and fifteen-year-old girls shouldn't be out on the streets at night anyhow. If you were to take some of your friends for your good times in the evenings, or to an early movie and then come right home, I don't think your mother would object. Try talking this over with her and see if you can't come to such a compromise.

MARIO ...is his distinctive feature about FOOD . . . What's Cooking?

Cabbage is not only a vegetable. It is also a butterfly, a game and a rose. The cabbage rose is the fragrant flower from which rose water is made.

The fragrance of cabbage, the vegetable, becomes unpleasant only when the vegetable is overcooked. If the pot is watched from the fire as soon as the cabbage is tender, the strong aroma never gets a chance to develop.

Cabbage remains mild tasting and without an odor, also, when it is slowly baked with tomatoes. It is in today's stuffed cabbage recipe. The sauce must be held below the boiling point, however.

Ground veal and rice are used for the stuffing. If your recipe calls for raw meat, any ground cooked leftover meat may be used. A sweet, sour flavor is developed in the sauce with brown sugar and vinegar. The quantities of these two ingredients may be varied to suit individual tastes.

Stuffed Cabbage—Serves 4.

1 medium size head of cabbage
1 medium size onion chopped fine
1 clove of garlic chopped fine
3 tablespoons vegetable fat
1-2 lb. chopped veal
1 cup cooked rice
1-4 cup grated cheese
1-4 teaspoon chopped thyme
1-4 teaspoon salt
Salt—pepper
No. 3 can tomatoes
1-2 cups can of tomato paste
1-4 cup vinegar
1-4 cup brown sugar

Remove core from cabbage. Remove spotted outer leaves. Scrape leaves of cabbage. Put in boiling water 2 to 3 minutes or until leaves are pliable. Drain cabbage.

Put the onions, garlic and vegetable fat in a saucepan. Saute until onions are yellow, not brown. Add the veal and continue to cook until veal loses red color.

Combine the meat, rice, cheese, thyme and beaten egg. Add 1 teaspoon salt and 1-8 teaspoon pepper.

Divide the mixture into 4 parts. Put each in a large cabbage leaf. Roll up, using more leaves if necessary to cover meat. Tie with thread. Fasten the roll with several toothpicks. Put the rolls in a saucepan.

Chop the tomato meat fine. Mix tomatoes and juice, tomato paste, vinegar, sugar and 1 teaspoon salt. Pour over stuffed cabbage.

Cook, covered, over a small flame or in a moderate oven, 1 hour. Add salt and pepper to sauce if necessary.

MADOC JUNCTION

Friends, Neighbors Honor Young Couple

Madoc Junction—On Wednesday evening, over 40 friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ritbon Wannamaker to spend an evening with Mr. and Mrs. Jervis, who were recently married.

Community Singing

Rev. M. Clarke was chairman and also led in a round of community singing, with guitar accompaniment.

Mrs. Alfred Lake gave a reading: Misses Donna Stapley and Grace Clarke sang a duet "Blood by Bird Hill"; Mrs. Maurice Clancy sang a solo with guitar accompaniment; Miss Mary Chambers and Mrs. Harry Clarke each gave a reading.

Address Read

An address, signed on behalf of the community, was then read by Mrs. Maurice Clancy, extending congratulations and best wishes to Mr. and Mrs. Jervis for many years of happiness.

The address and wrapped parcels were then opened disclosing many useful and lovely gifts.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Jervis expressed their thanks for the gifts and good wishes.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECHMAN

A child old enough to write is old enough to write thank-you notes

Dear Mrs. Beechman:

My little daughter has written a combination of writing and printing as taught in her school . . . but so far I have always written her thank-you notes for her, notes for Christmas presents and so forth. Very soon she is to have a birthday, and I had intended to write her notes to thank for her birthday presents. But yesterday, as I was talking over my self with my sister, who has a boy about my daughter's age, she said that she was "horrified" at my not letting my child write her own notes of thanks. What's so wrong about that?

Georgiana W.

You are so wrong about this, dear lady. You are doing your child a great injustice by not starting her in this wonderful and rewarding habit of writing a note for every gift she receives. Since your child is old enough to write, she is old enough to write a thank-you note, even though a very short, very simple note.

Children love to write letters, and it is a simple matter to guide them to write letters in the early years of their lives. It is too bad when a mother doesn't take the time and does not make the effort to guide, direct, her child about this. . . and I'm glad your sister has set a particular to her suggestions.

A child should have some charming little-notes paper (and there are so many delightful designs today in this type of paper) —a comfortable pen—other accessories at hand (blotter, and so forth), and the gift directly in front of her so that she can write a sentence or two about some pleasant feature of the gift. "It is such a nice color, my favorite color"; or "How did you know that I wanted a white summer purse! It's lovely, and just the right size."

How to address envelopes of wedding invitations

Dear Mrs. Beechman:

1. What is the correct way to address wedding invitations?

2. Should there be any name written on the inner envelope?

3. How do you handle the situation if there are four children in the family, and you want only the mother to attend the wedding and reception?

4. Should a return address be written on the flap of the envelope?

R. R.

1. Here is the correct form for the address on the outer envelope: Mr. and Mrs. John Alan Clarke

123 Pleasant Street
Haverville 13
New York

2. Yes—on the inner envelope write the title and surname:

Mr. and Mrs. Clark

3. On the outside and inside envelope write the name of the person whom you are inviting. On the outside envelope: Mrs. John Paul Hill; on the inside envelope: Mrs. Hill. (However, it is taken for granted that if you are inviting a wife, your invitation includes her husband also—although it need not include any daughter or son.)

4. It is best form, of course, to be as absolutely accurate in the names and address of such formal items as envelopes of wedding invitations that it will not be necessary to write the return address on the flap of the envelope. However, if there is any doubt of an address, it is the way of wisdom to write the return address on the back of the envelope.

SING FAMOUS MUSIC

London — (CP) — A festival of sacred music will be held in the Roman Catholic Cathedral at Westminster May 13 to May 20. Works of composers from the 13th century to the present will be played and sung daily. The emphasis will be on Palestrina, but compositions by foreign composers will also be heard.

BEAUTY

Vast sums of money are spent every year by women who would be lovely to the eye—and what woman wouldn't? During the last quarter of a century the beauty industry has increased by leaps and bounds, as the expression goes. Beauty shops are flourishing in even the smallest villages. Millions of dollars are spent each year on face powder alone.

Fads come and go.

Fads come and go, and all have an influence on business in general. Time was when the false hair trade was going like a house afire. Grannie will tell you how she paid sixty dollars for what was called an inside compadour, and a corsatine braid thirty-six inches long and that weighed three ounces. It was the era of the Merry Widow hat.

Suddenly the customers lost interest in blanketing their heads with demountable tresses, and factory hair disappeared almost overnight. Some beauty shops with large stocks of hair goods, went into bankruptcy. Whole wigs closed their doors.

When the chemise frock appeared—designed like a pillow case and requiring only three yards of material—there were wails from textile manufacturers. They must be happy now, with the full skirts the girls are wearing when they fare forth for the gala evening.

The bakers protested during the period of the reducing mania, when even the calories counted. They give support, conceal figure defects, and are recommended as a health help by the medical profession. But for a time the corset makers were scared out of their wits, fearing their industry was about to go on the rocks.

World Conference Sees Canadian Plan for Sharing Food Supplies

Mexico City, (CP)— ... plan for organization ... wide distribution of ... at ... advanced two years ago, will again be one of the leading topics at the fifth annual conference of the International Federation of Agricultural Producers.

The federation is an international farmers' organization with membership in 26 countries. It will meet here May 20. It acts in an advisory capacity to the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations.

In 1949 the federation met at Guelph Ont., and elected H. H. Hannam of Ottawa, as president. Mr. Hannam, president of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, still holds the post.

At that 1949 conference, Canada's delegation suggested that food distribution be organized under an international agency which would strive to see that needy nations were fed at prices they could afford.

There was also a plea for increased production at that time. This year again, Mr. Hannam says, the plan for orderly distribution will be discussed by the federation.

Another subject important to Canadians will be the International movement of farm workers. Delegates have been seeking a method of moving workers across international boundaries to do farm work, both on a seasonal and year-round basis. Such a system, it is felt, would provide labor in areas where and when needed.

The federation will hear a report from the United Nations on the status of plans to relieve and reconstruct devastated areas, and will discuss practical steps which it might take to aid such work.

Leading speakers include Dr. Hugh Keenleyside, former Canadian Deputy Minister of Mines and Resources, now director of the Technical Assistance Division of the U.N., and Nelson Rockefeller, chairman of the U.S. Advisory committee.

Canada's delegation will number about 30 and will be led by W. J. Barker, vice-president of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture and president of the Manitoba Pool Elevators, and J. A. Marion, second vice-president of the federation, who is president of Quebec's French-language farm organization.

Milk Producers Of Owen Sound Want Increase

Toronto, May 16—(CP)—Ontario dairy farmers have been forced to use unpaid family labor to continue operating, Roy Lick, secretary of the Ontario Whole Milk Producers' League, told the Ontario Milk Control Board Tuesday.

Mr. Lick was presenting the case for Owen Sound district milk producers seeking an increase from $4.12½ to $5.50 a hundredweight for milk sold to four dairies in the Georgian Bay city of 18,000. The retail price of milk sold by the dairies is 19 cents a quart.

The last increase granted milk producers in the Owen Sound area, in 1950, failed to cover existing production costs, Mr. Lick said. It now costs the farmer $5.12 a hundredweight to produce milk.

Producers sympathized with low-income groups in urban centres, he said, but "we strongly reject any argument that the question of raising our price should be decided on the basis of the lowest income group."

The hearing is continuing.

Ballot Recount Upsets Election Of Minister

Charlottetown, May 16—(CP)—A ballot recount Tuesday night upset the election of Education Minister R. R. Large, given a majority of two in the April 26 provincial election.

Mr. Large was defeated on the basis of a recount of votes cast in first Queen's ... His Progressive Conservative opponent Frank Myers had a majority of four when Judge C. St. Clair Trainor completed the recount.

The revised figures gave Myers a total of 1,493 votes and Large 1,489. On election night Large had been credited with two of a majority.

Today a recount will be held of the ballots cast in second Queen's where Progressive Conservative leader R. E. Bell has a majority of five over his Liberal opponent, W. R. Lepage.

The standing in the 30-member house now is: Liberal 24; Progressive Conservatives six.

Child Crushed Beneath Tractor, Brother Driving

Dorchester, May 16 — (CP) — Nine - year - old Ronnie Tanner, died near here Tuesday, crushed beneath a tractor, when his brother, Wayne, 10, swerved to save the life of a stray dog that the children had adopted as a pet.

Wayne and two other children Marlene, 8, and Lorne, 6, were walking seconds before the tractor toppled over and plunged down the side of a six-foot culvert. Ronnie was thrown forward over the tractor and as he landed the farm machine dropped on top of him.

Dorchester is 12 miles southeast of London.

Provincial police said the four children were delivering the tractor to the farm of Clark Zimmer, en route to school at S. S. No. 11, Dorchester, about a mile from their home. Wayne was driving, with Ronnie seated up front beside him. The two younger children were behind them. The road turns sharply and a steep incline leads down to the culvert.

Wayne said: "We were going down the hill when a rabbit ran out from the right. Bowser had followed me and dashed around after the rabbit. I tried to miss the dog and put on the brakes. We started sliding. I yelled and we jumped. I guess Ronnie didn't jump."

ETHIOPIANS TRAIN IN WAR AREA

Most recent of the U.N. nations to join the U.N. forces on the Korean front is Ethiopia. But its soldiers have little knowledge of the modern weapons of war. Here, one of the Ethiopian soldiers, who had never before seen or handled a carbine, is introduced to this type of weapon by two U.S. soldiers. — Central Press Canadian.

Apsley Sawmill Burned to Ground, Loss is $10,000

Peterborough, May 16 — (CP) — A flying spark from a steam engine caused a sawmill at near by Apsley owned by Hugh McColl, to burn to the ground Tuesday at an estimated loss of $10,000. The flames then spread through the underbrush and leaped over a 2,000 yard area to break out in the dry pine woods.

They spread out of control and burned over several hundred acres, but district forestry headquarters at Apsley reported the bush fire under control. Nobody was injured.

All available villagers and school pupils joined the firefighting forces. About 30 bushmen were trucked in from Bancroft, 19 miles northeast of the village. At the height of the blaze there were about 300 people fighting it.

Sales of Cars Hit Record During March

Ottawa, May 16 (CP)—Despite increased prices, sales of new motor vehicles in Canada hit a record during March.

The bureau of statistics reported Tuesday that 49,404 units were sold in that month to set a record - monthly volume of sales. This record was achieved despite the fact that the average purchase price for a car climbed to $2,353 from $2,005 in March, 1950.

March sales had a retail value of $116,345,475, compared with 35,324 units with a value of $70,816,689 sold in the corresponding month a year ago.

Sales of new passenger cars climbed to a peak with 37,885 units retailing at $89,537,155, compared with 27,636 units at $54,330,828 in March, 1950. Sales of new commercial vehicles increased to 11,519 units from 7,696, and the value to $26,706,320 from $16,685,861.

All but Two Of 40 Forest Fires Under Control

Toronto, May 16 — (CP) — All but two of 40 forest fires burning in Ontario were under control today.

The largest blaze of the season, which burned through 1,600 acres of mixed timber on the north shore of Lake Wanapitei, 24 miles north of Sudbury, was still unchecked.

Extra fire - fighters, an RCAF helicopter, bulldozers and a tank pumper truck were rushed in to fight the fire. Valuable virgin pine further north near Lake Chiniguchi was threatened.

Two woodsmen have been charged in Sudbury court with starting the blaze. Police said it spread from a fire they lit, to dry their socks.

The second uncrecked fire by nightfall had covered 500 acres in Falconbridge township, 12 miles north of Sudbury. Fire prevention officials said it did not threaten valuable timber.

Fire also remains high throughout most of the province, officials of the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests said. Four townships in the Blind River district were ordered closed to travel. Occasional showers forecast along the front of cool air moving south from James Bay promised some measure of relief.

One fire brought under control yesterday was in 300 acres of the Missinagi forest, 75 miles north of Lake Huron. In all, seven new forest fires were reported yesterday — all are under control.

Fires by districts: Sault Ste. Marie, nine; North Bay, seven; Sudbury, six; White River and Parry Sound, three each; Sioux Lookout, Geraldton and Timiskaming, two each; and Kenora, Port Arthur, Gogama, Trent and Quinte, one each.

PICTON

Don Baxter Addresses W.T.F. Pr. Ed. County

Picton—The women teachers' ... ociation of Prince Edward County, held their annual meet- ... ing at Allisonville hall on Wed- ... esday afternoon, May 2nd. ... The ladies of Burr's W.A. served a delectable dinner at seven p.m. This was followed by a short program con- ... sisting of a quartet of Bloom- ... field and vicinity teachers gave two well received numbers; Mrs. Arthur Jackson sang a solo and encore and Miss Walt gave two humorous readings.

Guest Speaker

Mrs. James Gough introduced the guest speaker of the evening Mr. Don Baxter M.L.A., who gave an interesting and comprehensive review of the report of the Hope Commission on education.

The speaker expressed the view that the findings of this commis- ... sion would influence education for perhaps as much as the next 50 years. A copy of the report has been placed in the public libraries in neighboring towns and cities.

Miss V. Valleau, of Welling- ... ton, president of the Federation ably presided at the meeting. She is retiring this year as president and will be succeeded by Mrs. Meda Hart.

Rummage Sale

The splendid sum of $101 was realized at the rummage sale held in the Parish Hall on Sat- ... urday morning by the Evening Branch of the W.A. of St. Mary Magdalene's Church. On Tues- ... day May 15, this group conclude their activities for the season with a pot-luck supper and social evening in the Parish House. Mrs. C./G. Rutter convened the rum- ... mage sale, and Mrs. Jack LeRoup and Mrs. Hugh Nicholas will convene the pot-luck supper.

Film Council

Members of Picton Film Coun- ... cil will journey to Wellington on Tuesday evening, May 15, for their May meeting. Mr. J. de B. Arnaud will lead a discussion based upon the film "Newfound- ... land, Atlantic Province". Other films will be shown.

MADOC

A. Y. P. A. Holds First Leadership Training School

Madoc—On Friday night the first meeting of the Leadership Training School of the Anglican Young People's Association was held in Madoc town hall, with a fine representation of young people from the different parishes in Madoc district.

Rev. Mr. Secker, of St. John's Church, Stirling, was chairman for the evening, and Mr. J. Wright of Stirling, acted as treasurer and registrar for the meeting. Previous to the opening, Miss Wurm conducted a song service with all heartily joining in the singing.

Opens Service

Canon J. B. Creegan, of Christ Church, Belleville, opened the service, after which Rev. H. Good, of St. John's Church, Madoc, extended greetings to the mem- ... bers and visitors, on behalf of the leaders of Madoc A.Y.P.A.

He spoke of work of their own group and said much credit was due to its leaders, Miss Wurm, Miss Desford, Miss Lou Phillips, Miss McCurdy and Miss Lessard, for their interest and work among the young people of St. John's, in Madoc.

The theme of these meetings is "Leadership in Work, Worship, Fellowship and Edification". The first speaker was Canon Creegan, who gave an interesting address on "Worship", which, he said, "is a comprehensive thing as it takes in all of our lives, our vocations, our prayers and should become part of all we do. It was up to us to enlist and train members in devotion to God. There are so many ways we can do our service and duty to God. Plan to teach and take part in the worship service of the A.Y.P.A."

Leadership In Work

A discussion period followed led by Rev. S. Secker and summing up was led by Canon Creegan and Miss Wurm.

The second speaker was Mr. F. Beeby, warden of Christ Church, Belleville, who spoke on "Leader- ... ship in Work". He outlined a work program for girls' work, boys' work and group work, suggesting many projects that could be followed out. Being a former A.Y.P.A. worker, Mr. Beeby had many timely suggestions to present to the young people.

Roll call showed members from Christ Church, Belleville, St. Thomas' Church, Belleville; St. John's, Stirling, and St. John's Madoc.

Rectors from the parishes present were: Canon J. B. Creegan, Rev. Henry Hill, Rev. S. Secker, Rev. Mr. Page and Rev. H. Good.

Two more meetings will be held one on the coming Friday evening and a week later with special speakers for each, which should provide much food for thought among A.Y.P.A. workers.

INCREASED POWER

Stockholm. (CP)— Rural electrification is proceeding rapidly in Sweden. Of the total of about 1,000,000 rural homes only 50,- 000 or five per cent were still without electricity this spring.

SHORT STAY

Blackpool, England. (CP)—Sid- ney Gee was given leave the day after he reported to his army reserve camp for training. As soon as he had left for camp thieves stole $3,000 from his jewelry store.

STIRLING

Calf Club Elects New Officers

Stirling—Last Thursday even- ing at the Agricultural Board room, about 18 boys enrolled in the calf club. The meeting was presided over by Mr. Frank P. Stone assistant agricultural representative.

Mr. Stone explained all the rules and regulations outlining the duties of the members and the basis of awards which will be given at the achievement day.

After a discussion on club pro- jects, the meeting opened for election of officers which re- sulted as follows: president, Carl Reid, Stirling; vice president, Robert Chambers, Stirling; sec- retary treasurer, Basil Moore, Springbrook.

Mr. Carl Bateman is again leader and Merle Moore of Springbrook the assistant leader.

St. Andrew's Church Observes 'Mother's Day'

Marmora—Mother's Day was observed at St. Andrew's United Church with morning and even- ing services. At the morning ser- vice, the Sunday School joined with the regular congregation to constitute a family service. The church was decorated with a choice variety of spring blooms, potted plants and blossoms, in- cluding flowers in memory of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Sanderson and Mrs. George Jones.

The congregation included a number of visitors who were former members of St. Andrew's. The order of worship was that as issued by the Ontario Council of Christian Education and a ladies' choir of 13 voices led in the sing- ing and rendered the anthem "I Think When I Read That Sweet Story of Old."

Rite of Baptism

Early in the service the pastor, Rev. G. D. Young, B.A., B.D., baptized Robert Paul, son of Mr. and Mrs. Costas Paranulk; Brian Paul, son of Mr. and Mrs. Heath Jones; Kenneth Gordon and Rob- ert Victor, sons of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Hunter, and John Lee, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Davidson.

The pastor delivered an ap- propriate discourse from the text "If ye love me, keep my com- mandments" and referred to the fuller significance of Mother's Day, with its new name "Christ- ian Family Day." He touched upon the saying that "Home is the first school where you learn what God is like."

W.M.S. Conduct Service

The evening's service was con- ducted by the Women's Mission- ary Society. The Girls of Ex- plorer and C.G.I.T. groups, with Mrs. E. C. Prentice, W.M.S. pres- ident in charge. The scripture les- son was taken by Mrs. H. W. Sales.

In the affiliation service, the candle lighting ceremony was performed by the girls. Prayers were taken by the past president, Mrs. H. C. Barlow, followed by the reading, "Mother's Day" by Mrs. T. J. Bateman. The junior choir then rendered as the anthem, "I Am Wearing the Flowers For You, Mother Dear."

Flowers Presented

After the reading of the poem "To My Mother" by Judith Fraser, a flower was presented to each mother present by members of the girls' groups. This was followed by the solo, "Mother", by Mrs. Bruce MacKenzie.

Mrs. D. G. Young told the story of "The Happiest Woman in the World." Mrs. Russell Long sang "The Holy City."

WHITE'S DISTRICT

White's District—Quite a num- ber from this district attended the Music Festival on Monday evening in Belleville in which four schools, Quinte View, Bay- side, Avondale and Belcrest par- ticipated. Much credit for the fine performance go to the music instructress, Miss Grace Pitman, and the respective teachers.

Many attended the funeral on Tuesday afternoon at the Wesley Funeral Home, Trenton of the late Mrs. C. Nugent, a former re- sident of this district. Interment was in White's Cemetery, Bay- side.

The funeral service for the late Lois Reddon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Reddon of Bay- side, who died suddenly on Sun- day was held at the Wesley Fu- neral Home, Trenton, on Wednes- day afternoon. The bearers were school friends of the deceased. The Rev. A. C. McCallum, pastor of Bayside Church officiated.

The Rev. A. C. McCallum has been making a number of pastor- al calls in this vicinity lately.

Mrs. Morrey Lafferty of Aik- en's District was a Thursday cal- ler of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. Bush.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Young were Monday visitors of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Young.

Alma Copeland, Floyd Klein- steuber, are ill with the measles Cathy Dale, Sylvia Belham and Marilyn Bowers are able to be out again.

There was a good attendance of members and friends at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Glen Meyers on Wednesday evening at the regular meeting of the Bay of Quinte Women's Institute when Unionville Institute members were guests. Guest speakers were Miss Helen Salmon, Miss Shirley Herman, Mrs. Clarence Holmes and Mrs. C. Paul. A delightful time was enjoyed by all.

Mother's Day Service

Mother's Day Service was held at White's Church on Sunday ev- ening with the junior choir as- sisting the pastor, the Rev. A. C. McCallum and the superin- tendent, Mr. W. A. Jeffery. The organist was Mrs. Donald Bow- ers.

The service the theme of which was "Christian Family Day" op- ened by all singing "All Things Bright and Beautiful."

Miss Joan Myers gave a read- ing "The Story of Peter Shu," a story of a Christian Chinese who brought up two boys as Chris- tians instead of having them pun- ished for a misdemeanor.

Master Donald Bowers and Mas- ter Gary Jackson gave the scrip- ture readings. "Praise Him, Praise Him" was given as an an- them by the junior choir.

Mrs. Glen Meyers read "Sun- day Afternoon at Home", a story of a mother's experience that all were happy when mother was at home.

Mr. McCallum gave a talk on "Christian Family Day." The singing of "Faithful and Me Day by Day" closed the service fol- lowed by the benediction and quiet music.

TAX ON TALL DOGS

Pietermaritzburg, South Africa — (CP) — A tax of £5 ($15) is to be levied on all dogs over 18 inches at the shoulder in sheep- breeding areas of Natal. This ends a five-year search for a legal definition of a dog that can kill sheep.

Old Sweats' Roll in Graves New War 'Buck' Has Servant

By BILL [illegible] (Canadian Press Staff Writer)

With the Canadians in Korea, May 16 (CP)—There's one way to make soldiering in Korea easy: Get a houseboy.

A good one's worth every cent he earns: Usually $5 a month.

A poor one is no trouble at all. Simply turn him loose and pick another in a country full of candidates.

The houseboy is the one touch about this theatre which makes one wish armies always campaigned in countries like Korea. There's nothing at all to soldiering—except the actual fighting—when there's someone to polish your boots, wash your clothes, make your bed, clean your tent (if you have one), brew tea or coffee at intervals during the day, and generally anticipate most of your personal needs. Hot water for shaving in the morning, for instance.

And when he cleans your weapon or keeps your vehicle spick-and-span and maintained—including greased and checked regularly—you've got a gem.

What No Hemorrhoids?

And all for 30,000 Won ($5) a month.

There are many who don't get even that. Happy to come along as part of a unit, working their passage in return for food, clothing and a "home" in time of war, they would be embarrassed at accepting money from men for whom they now are accorded the status of fellow soldiers.

Individual riflemen, naturally, haven't their own houseboys — whose ages, incidentally, run from 15 to 50. But usually there's one to each platoon and three in each company kitchen.

More self-contained parts of a battalion, however, like the intelligence section, the headquarters staff, the doctor, machine gun and pioneer platoons, the pay office and the signals office, do keep their own.

As do a few favored individuals such as RSM. Les Grimes of the 2nd Battalion Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, who comes from Edmonton.

Food Plentiful

The battalion brews no extra rations for the boys, but army food is plentiful in the theatre and their presence is no embarrassment. But real scrounging is needed to equip the lads with army gear—and the resulting turn-outs are a cross between Canadian, American and Korean army uniforms.

But the boys appreciate anything that differentiates them from "civilians" and helps them to feel they "belong." They aren't allowed to wear regimental badges or flashes but anything else their "masters" can get for them is allowed.

Distinct among the Patricias' boys is 16-year-old Cho Nam-Soon, special pride of a section at battalion headquarters led by Cpl. Garvin (Bud) Smith of Vancouver. Cho, a neglected refugee from the Chosin area, first appeared in the battalion area as a conscripted "ricebunter" or bearer. Sgt. Smith's section decided he was too small for hill-climbing with heavy loads and adopted him as houseboy.

"Cho is the Boy"

Cho "conscripted" himself by his industry and willingness that Smith decided to make a little Canadian of him. He wrote his mother in Vancouver to get him a complete outfit for the boy, and today Cho swaggers about battalion headquarters in a suit of blue denim overalls touched off with a scarlet neckerchief, Canadian running shoes and has a whole range of underwear, socks and shirts.

When not working, Cho, in straw hat and overalls, follows the C.O. around as his "armed guard," a U.S. army carbine over his shoulder—but without a magazine.

Pte. Mal Canfield of New Westminister, B.C., is completing Cho's getup by having a couple of cowboy-type six-shooters sent from home for him.

A more warlike role is discharged by the other, older, boys, such as Yong Sang-Rock, known as "Pete", 24, and Moon (Joe) Pyong-Hee, 17. They also started off as ricebunters, but after pulling around with the machine-gunners under Capt. Andy Foulds of Vancouver were taken on as platoon houseboys.

Pete and Joe would not tolerate being left behind whenever the unit went into the line. They got together their own equipment, went forward with the platoon, regularly dug their own allotments and manned them.

And when the Patricias were surrounded April 24 and fought the Chinese spring offensive to a standstill in the west central sector, Pete and Joe between them killed 10 of the enemy.

Said Pte. Pete Boldt of Simcoe, Ont., afterward: "They're part of us now. We wouldn't lose them for the world."

Grateful Elephant

(Manchester Guardian)

In Southern Rhodesia elephants are increasing and crossing something of a problem for water supplies since the average elephant drinks fifty gallons of water a day and a big bull can drink 150 gallons at one time. One day a small calf-elephant splashed into a drinking trough and could not climb out; nor could all the efforts of its mother help it out.

The game warden himself was away and a native reported the infant's plight to the warden's wife. With two natives carrying shotguns the warden's wife went down to the scene of the trouble. The agitated mother elephant was driven away by shots fired into the air and then the two humane ministracted the baby elephant without difficulty.

They then attempted to retire before the anxious mother returned, but to their consternation the little elephant refused to leave them and followed them squealing wherever they went.

This created an embarrassing problem for the rescuers. But one of the natives then thrust the boy affectionate—or curious—elephant's child into a patch of thick bush where his mother

"UNDESIRABLE ALIEN"

The Hague, May 15 (AP)—The Netherlands today classed Dr. Hewlett Johnson, the Dean of Canterbury, as an "undesirable alien" and barred him from entering the country. The Dean noted for his pro-Soviet views, had been scheduled to address a "peace committee meeting here tonight.

TRAIN NATIVES

Port Elizabeth, South Africa.—(CP)—Classes for training African natives in the footwear industry will be established here, at the suggestion of employers. The Port Elizabeth Technical College has approved the proposal.

BAYSIDE

Church Windows Dedicated by Pastor

Bayside—The Sunday devotional service at the Church, held in the form of a special dedication service, when two windows recently installed in the church.

Members and former members and visitors were present to participate in the service and to hear the inspiring message delivered by the present pastor, the Rev. C. Clarke Gallagher.

The arrangement of the flowers was effective, a great deal to the beauty of the church.

Guest Singer

The dedication service was conducted by the Rev. A. C. Mosher, who briefly made reference to the newly installed windows.

Following the service of dedication Mrs. Rose Hall of Belleville, sang "Bless This House". The rendition of this song was appropriate for the occasion. Mrs. Bell was accompanied at the piano by Mrs. A. E. Downer, who also provided the music for the entire service.

The junior choir under the direction of Mrs. Frank Leach, sang an anthem in keeping with the service and suitable hymns were also used throughout.

Mr. McCallum based his sermon on "The Light of the Divine Principle", a subject most suitable for the occasion, well given.

This was a special day in the lives of Wesley Church members and one to long be remembered.

All are hereby indebted to Mr. Harold Cooling and Mr. John L. Stewart for the many tedious hours of work which they so generously gave in order to prepare the sash for the windows. These gentlemen have been most generous with their time and their able support is much appreciated.

The project of installing the windows was taken over last year by the Wesley Women's Association and the money was raised and set aside at this time. The president, Mrs. Fred Denyes and the executive and members of 1950 are to be highly praised in making this generous gift to the church, and all are proud of time and work to raise funds for this project.

Splendid co-operation was also received from Mrs. A. Fox and Mrs. A. Calnan in taking care of the church especially during the installation of windows.

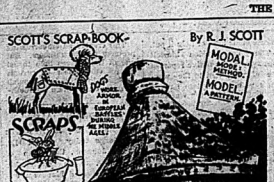
SCOTT'S SCRAP-BOOK—

By R. J. SCOTT



French Authority Urges Necessity Of Balanced Diet

Paris (Reuters)—A leading French nutrition expert is waging a campaign against "wasteful eating for purse and stomachs."

Professor Hughes Gounelle, president of the French Clinical and Biological Research Unit on nutrition, a Rockefeller foundation set up in 1940, believes that the majority of people, irrespective of income, are still unable to eat sensibly.

He says that the average Frenchman who is obliged to spend 37 percent of his earnings —the highest in western Europe —on food still does not eat to the best advantage for his health. By organizing his meals on a rational balanced basis, the average Frenchman could eat more healthily for less money, he says.

Gounelle had these comments on:

French kitchens: Among the worst in the world. They provide varied palatable dishes which allow for digestion. The American kitchen comes after the French. There is no such thing as an English kitchen, Tasteless food is one of the unfortunate results of English cooking. Many valuable salts and vitamins are lost through overcooking.

"Milkshakith" meats: Whale, goat, reindeer and beaver may not suit everyone's taste but they provide a much nutritive value as pork, beef or mutton.

Cafeteries, particularly the kind in the United States: "The nutritive value of the meal is wastefully offset by the atmosphere of noise, haste and nervous tension in these rapid self-service restaurants."

Sugar: Sugar is one of the greatest enemies of healthy nourishment. In 1822, the average American consumed eight pounds of sugar a year; by 1945, it had risen to 101 pounds. Too much sugar, by unbalancing a body-building diet, is a common cause of rickets among children and early tooth decay. Children are given too much candy.

Opposed equally to over eating and eating too little, he frowns upon the American habit of eating a large quantity of meat before the night rest. But the afternoon dinner, the American's main meal of the day, eaten in tranquillity after the day's work.

WILY THIEVES

London, (CP)—Thieves who stole hundreds of cases of tinned ham from a Woolwich warehouse threw them from the second floor to the ground, which they had previously covered with cork chalices to deaden the noise.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was walking along with Puds Simkins just walking along, and Puds said, hey boy, talk about dum looking kids, look at that one.

Meaning some little kid sitting on his frunt steps with his mouth open and no other expression on his face, and I said, Jimminies, he probably believes everything he hears, no matter who tells him, and you cant get any dumber than that no matter how you try.

Let's make an experiment and find out, Puds said.

Which we started to do, going up to the kid and Puds saying, Hay kid, where does Mrs. Clatchybatchy live?

I dont know, the kid said.

Saying it without even closing his mouth all the ways, and I said, Well even if you dont know her you must of noticed her. She always walks around eating a half a watermelon and spitting the seeds out at people, I said, and Puds said, And she's a mean monkey on a string, and the munkey walks backwards playing a mouth organ.

I didn't see her, the kid said, and I said, But you must of heard her, cause I described how she's got a big cowbell on her head instead of hair.

I dont remember, the kid said, and we kept on going laffing like a couple of nuts and the kid called after us, Hay, why dont you ask the lady in the corner house? Her name is Mrs. Poodlehoodle and she talks out of her eyebrows and her mouth is stuck together with toothpicks, he said.

And he got up and went in his house before we had time to sneer back even if we could of thort of anything good enough.

Which we probably couldn't of, he had received at the tolome of

He Came to Kill

By Adeline McElfresh

"Only it couldn't have been Mrs." Mart went on. "She was with Peter. That lets both of them out.

"Oh, but it doesn't. Peter said he went up to Miss Maggie's room."

Leeana lifted her eyes to meet Mart's intense gaze. It was somewhat wounded within her.

"You Leo." Mart's voice was too low. It thought Leeana were hearing beneath that cool exterior.

"Go on."

But Leeana shook her head. She didn't want to discuss it, not even with Martin Lee Hin figure who—let him say Sondra had perjured herself to save Peter Preston who had lied . . .

It was Mart Preston's business anyhow. Wasn't he a deputy sheriff?

Finally, though, when it became obvious that Mart intended to outwait her, she said. "I'm right back to Peter, Mart."

Deputy Preston turned his empty coffee cup thoughtfully in its saucer. When he did look up it was frowning.

"I don't know, honey," he said gently. "It looks to me as though only thing we're sure of is that Sondra stuck her pretty neck out every far and very dangerous widely."

"You mean Peter may have killed Miss Maggie?"

"Possibly. If she knew how much he needed an alibi, it certainly would be to Peter's advantage if she did not go on living. An alternative—in the exact opposite or what we have just said.

"Sondra?" Leeana gasped.

"Why not? If she would lie for Peter, why shouldn't Peter lie for her?"

He made it sound so—so possible! So right. Except that if Peter had left Sondra in the living room when he went upstairs, she couldn't very well have gone back of him to Miss Maggie's room. She couldn't have killed her. No, Leeana argued within herself, it had to be Peter. Of course, if Sondra followed him into Miss Maggie's room—and suggested that she alone could save him. . . she could see Sondra doing that, snuggled up and smiling sweetly, telling Peter that he'd have to play it her way—had to now. And she could see Peter agreeing, until the murder was charged and was blown far away from him.

"You're not mad, Mart?"

"Oh, sure." His voice brittle, he looked at her. "The whole police force is looking for Peter. Purdy has men all over the grounds like flies on spilled honey. Will you want me to find Sondra, Listen, Leeana your head is filled with honey ideas that had better stay there!" If you pull anything now, I'll spank you in front of him, sure as I'm born! I'm afraid for you—you wouldn't look good swinging from a rafter by your toes."

"Change your face Mart, that funnyman stuff doesn't look good on you." Leeana forced a thin smile to match his own. "I'm not stiff, at least I'm not brave. If poor Miss Aggie—" A swift sob caught at her throat.

The stern shell in which she had encased her feeling crumbled and long shaking sobs tore at her. "There, there," Mart whispered. Lifting her to her feet, he buried his face in her short-cropped brown curls. "We'll get out of here soon. Won't we?"

Numbly, Leeana nodded.

"We'll go where there's sunshine and no one but us. Maybe Bermuda, maybe, Or the seashore." He held her away from him. "Would you like that for a honeymoon, Leeana?"

"Wh—what a f-funny proposal" Leeana choked on a sob.

"And what a f-funny way of asking you." Mart brushed his lips against her cheek. "It's a good thing I can read your mind, honey."

Leeana gave him a rather tearful smile. "Darling! Oh Mart, I do love you—so much!"

Neither of them heard the timid wishes as a police car driven fast in the front yard or the excited babble that rose immediately. Then there were hurried footsteps, an opening door.

"Hey Mart!" Sheriff Clem Purdy bawled. "Look who's here!"

And Sondra Thorne purred beatifully, "Well, well. This is where I came in."

"Hey I told her," Sheriff Purdy hastened to explain, "at the old Lick Williams place over the ridges. Looked like Doctor he'd agreed to be. Windows boarded Williams's gone to Miami to spend the winter with his daughter, like he does every year, so when Johnny-at-the-gate kept mumblin'. . ." His voice trailed off, caught again: "But she says she ain't seen Peter."

"No!" Leeana held her breath as the sheriff edged Mart's voice. Then he said. "She lied

she told her story, hoping against hope that it would be enough. That the sun would shine again on Thorne Hill. Would it belong to Pops, now? No, of course not. Miss Maggie died before her husband, Devens, could come. Peter would inherit, share and share alike, now. Jasper and Sondra would live in luxury. . . But it had not been jasper with whom Sondra had gone away. She had gone with Peter, even though he had abandoned her at the old Williams place. Left her, she had said, until he could go to town for a train and a bus ticket so they would not be seen leaving Thorne City, together.

And yet Peter had hated Sondra enough to write that letter to Miss Maggie. . .He must have lied.

She stopped talking, looked straight at Mart Preston without seeing him. It wasn't true. . . it was possible, too! Gradually Mart's questioning face came into focus.

"Okay, Leeana," he ordered gently. "Out with it!"

"They lasted each other, Mart. Sondra and Peter."

"So what?"

"So they wouldn't have gone away together. Why should Sondra leave Thorne Hill with a man she hated—when Jasper will have just as much money now as Peter?"

"Sondra doesn't exactly worship Jasper, or I miss my guess," Mart observed dryly.

"Maybe not. But Jasper is comfortable. Like an old shoe. Sondra could wipe her feet on him. She likes that even if Thorne Hill is pretty dull. It gives her a sense of power—security she doesn't want to lose. Sondra lived hard before she became Mrs. Jasper Thorne. Miss Maggie knew it. She didn't want a — a showgirl in the family. Bad for the prestige, you know."

"Just what are you trying to say?" Mart asked.

Leeana took a deep breath. "Sondra killed Miss Maggie and Miss Aggie. And Peter is dead, too."

Canadian Patrol Bites Deep Into Enemy Territory to Aid Abandoned Koreans in Area

OPERATION BIBLE

By BILL BOSS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

With the Canadians in Korea, May 16 (CP) —Forays into no man's land are routine business for battalion patrols.

They're something of a novelty in a less fluid battle zone, especially when the distance covered is three miles ahead of the United Nations line.

Yet one recently was accomplished by a Canadian quintet which probed forward of the lines under Cpl. Ross Anderson of New Westminster, B.C., medical assistant-with one of the rifle companies.

A patrol sent out by the company—commanded by Maj. Vince Lilley of Hamilton—had reported clashing with remnants of an enemy patrol in the area but that apart from civilians still occupying small hamlets dotting it, the locality was clear.

At the time the battalion occupied strong defensive positions on the north bank of the Han River east of Seoul. The initial onslaught of the Chinese spring offensive had been held, and the position had been prepared to take care of any resumption.

When Anderson heard of the abandoned Koreans' plight he asked permission to go forward and treat them.

Lilley assigned Anderson, a Victoria Cross winner in 1945, Pte. John Hoskins of New Westminster, and detailed Cpl. Don Regua, secretary of the RCMP at Regina, as guard.

Private Joseph Gendron, of Montreal, completed the party.

"We'd set one hour and a leg, dressed three severe head wounds—two women and an old man—and had a different job piecing together the badly scarred face of one woman.

"All had been wounded at least a week earlier and their injuries were suppurating. It was a messy piece of work cleaning them out, let alone bandaging them.

"We used up all our penicillin and were almost out of dressings by the time we had finished."

Referred to by Lilley as his "good Samaritans," the group passed word back about its activities so that other army agencies could take over the work.

Often in the course of this campaign Canadian medical units have come across Korean civilians who impassively carry on their simple lives, farming and toiling, today under communist occupation, tomorrow under United Nations. Curiously, few seem ever to get hurt by the fighting that carries the front to and fro over their land.

During the celebration in New York of the American Bible Society's 125th anniversary, Mrs. Joan-Smith helps pack copies of Scriptures which will be shipped to Russia from Soviet Union allows them to enter. Meanwhile they are being sold to satisfy nations in small quantities. The Bible Society elected Gen. Douglas MacArthur honorary life membership. — Central Press Canadian.

Implement Part Of Will of Former Prime Minister

Ottawa, May 16—(CP)—The commons Tuesday took preliminary steps to implement part of the will of Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, prime minister of Canada for more than 21 years.

Members adopted resolutions to bills providing for the maintenance and administration of property bequeathed to the state by Mr. King, who died July 22 last.

One bill provides for the upkeep and administration of Laurier House, Ottawa home of Mr. King and his predecessor, Sir Wilfrid Laurier. The home will be administered by the dominion archivist and historical research.

Mr. King's wishes, will be available for use by students engaged in historical study and research.

Mr. King left $225,000 to assist in the maintenance and care of Laurier House.

In reply to a question Prime Minister St. Laurent said it was not expected that the amount would cover everything. The public works department will be responsible for the upkeep and heating of the property and the federal district commission will maintain the grounds.

The second bill provides for the upkeep and administration of Mr. King's property at Kingsmere, Que., about 15 miles north of Ottawa. Mr. King expressed the hope that his simple home and part of the Kingsmere property would be set aside as a summer home for Canadian prime ministers.

The legislation authorizes the government to establish a summer home for prime ministers on the property. No indication was given as to when such action might be taken.

New Uniforms For Women Are Displayed

Ottawa, May 16—(CP)—A brass band and a backdrop of a modified North Star aircraft against the blue Gatineau Hills Tuesday ushered in one segment of the re-entry of women into the armed forces—the clothes.

The air force, soon to announce terms and conditions for its "WDs," erected a dais in the middle of the Rockcliffe airport and held a fashion show.

Professional models pirouetted across the raised platform, displaying an array of wardrobe more streamlined varied and practical than used by the women's division of the Second World War.

Chief attraction, from the purely feminine viewpoint, seemed to be nylon stockings, khaki shirts and tailored, navy hat. The blue hat is a modified wedge

EVEN FISHERMEN CAUGHT IN WAR'S NET

Caught far offshore in the troubled waters around Wonsan, these fishermen stand up in their boat with hands aloft as they are questioned by a party from the U.S. light cruiser Manchester. This cruiser is a member of the United Nations blockading air escort force that sees to it that the communists set up no supply lines by water. The force blockaded Wonsan, on Korea's northeast coast since February of this year. — Central Press Canadian.

University of N.B. Enriched By Donation of Library Wing

Fredericton, May 16—(CP) — The University of New Brunswick's war riches today by a new building, the Bonar Law-Bennet library wing, latest gift of the university's long-time benefactor, U.N.B. Chancellor Lord Beaverbrook.

The wing is in memory of two famous New Brunswickers, Rt. Hon. Andrew Bonar Law and Viscount Bennett, Prime Minister of Canada from 1930 to 1935. Its priceless reference material will include the personal papers of these statesmen.

Rt. Hon. Richard Law, Conservative member of the British parliament and son of the only Canadian to become prime minister of Great Britain, made the presentation yesterday on behalf of Lord Beaverbrook.

He said the closest co-operation between a strengthened British empire and the United States is the only security for mankind.

Later, at a dinner given by Lord Beaverbrook, tribute to the host as a pioneer and leader was paid by John Bassett, president and publisher of the Montreal Gazette and chancellor of Bishop's University, Lennoxville, Que.

Other distinguished guests at the functions included Lady Lloyd George, who presented to U.N.B. a portrait of the late Earl Lloyd George, Prime Minister of Great Britain in the First World War.

In his presentation address, Mr. Law said that a strong British Empire could become a guardian of peace, order and justice in the world. The empire had been weakened by the good intentions of its friends on both sides of the Atlantic.

"We have preferred to concentrate on raising our standards of life, upon material security, upon the easy passage from the cradle to the grave," the British parliamentarian.

"The end of it all is that we stand in danger of losing everything, not only our empire but comfort and security and safety, the very things for which we thought to trade the empire."

At the dinner later Mr. Bassett emphasized the importance of improvisation as compared with rigid planning. He referred to Lord Beaverbrook as an outstanding example of the ability to improvise in achieving goals. Lord Beaverbrook had shown what could be accomplished by self-reliance, courage and facing reality.

"It is such qualities as these, now so frowned upon by the little planners who beset our ways, that we, who still believe in the enterprise of freedom, need to exalt and to honor," Mr. Bassett said.

The success of Lord Beaverbrook, especially as wartime Minister of Aircraft Production, was due in large measure to his ability "to improve before he known and the unpredicted."

KILLED BY CAR

Brampton, May 16 (CP)—Five-year-old David Sparling was killed by an automobile Tuesday while his nine-year-old brother watched from the side of the road. Mrs. Leslie Currie of Malton, who police said was driving the car, was seriously hurt when her automobile rolled over while she tried to avoid the lad.

Rental Control Committee Will Meet in City

Toronto, May 16 (CP)—A rent-fixing formula on self-contained accommodation was suggested Tuesday by Attorney-General Porter.

The proposal was placed before the Ontario legislature's rent control committee for consideration.

Mr. Porter suggested that the monthly rent of self-contained accommodation without heat or services and unfurnished be fixed at 1 1-2 percent of the assessed value, plus the tenant's share of local improvement rates.

For new tenancies in heated accommodation, Mr. Porter suggested the rent be two percent of the assessed value, plus the cost of other services and the tenant's share of local improvements.

Mr. Porter said he believed premises now controlled should be left alone. Tenants would still retain their right to appeal before the rentals board.

The committee, studying tables based on rentals of controlled accommodated houses and apartments, found in many cases controls had been lifted and rent now charged was higher than the federal ceiling allows.

The Ontario committee will hold the first of a series of province-wide hearings in Windsor, May 24.

Tentative plans are to provide hearings in Sarnia May 29; London, May 30; Hamilton May 31 and in Ottawa, Sudbury, Kitchener, Peterborough, Brantford, Fort William, Kingston, St. Thomas, Belleville, Cornwall, Kenora, Timmins and Toronto.

HAS 56-50 CHANCE

Edmonton, May 16—(CP)—Lt.-Col. J. R. Stone said Tuesday his two-year-old daughter, Moira, now has a "50-percent chance of survival" and partial vision of one eye.

The commander of the 2nd Battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, said the eye will be treated by radiation. Moira's other eye was removed last Thursday because of cancer.

Lt.-Colonel Stone flew home from Korea at the weekend, said the radiation treatment now planned likely will take 3½ or four months, if Moira lives.

He said his possible return to Korea "won't be discussed now."

Norway Has Big Defence Budget But Admirals Think Navy is Being Neglected

Oslo, May 16—(Reuters)—Norway is to spend nearly 700,000,000 kroner (about $100,000,000) on defence this year. But her admirals complain the navy is being neglected.

As chief of staff in the admiralty, Commodore G. Hovdenak has officially protested that the navy's share of the defence budget is too small. In a survey of Norway's defence problems, he argued that the main weight of any invasion attempt would come by sea.

But the defence ministry has decided the main emphasis will be on building up land and air forces.

Gen. Ole Berg, chief of the defence staff, has explained that under the Atlantic Pact plans, Britain and the United States will bear the main burdens of naval defence because it is considered too expensive for a small country such as Norway to build, equip and man big naval units.

Norway, with only 3,000,000 inhabitants, has a large territory to defend. From south cape to the southern-most point of Norway is nearly 1,100 miles and in the far north, Norway overlaps neutral Sweden and has a common frontier with Russia.

Norway's defence tasks, as discussed with Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower on his recent visit, are concentrated on two main points:

1. The 150-mile frontier with Russia in the north which stretches from the Atlantic Ocean near Petsamo down the wider part of the Finnish border.

2. The southern flank, the outpost of which is regarded as being in Germany.

Norway has declared she will not permit the establishment of foreign military bases on her territory in peace time. The main task of her forces in the event of an attack will therefore be to hold up the invaders until help can reach her from the Atlantic Pact allies.

APPEAL DISMISSED

Toronto, May 6 (CP)—The Ontario Court of Appeal Tuesday dismissed the appeals of Richard Miller, 18, of Niagara Falls and Donald Stanley, 16, of Toronto against sentences of 18 months definite and five months indefinite for automobile theft.

Britain and Iran Urged by U.S. To Settle Issue

London, May 16 (Reuters) — Diplomatic quarters today said the United States has urged Britain and Iran to go to "extreme limits of compromise" in an effort to negotiate a settlement in their dispute over the proposed nationalization of the Anglo-Iranian Oil Company.

At the same time the United States is believed to have conceded Britain's right to protect British lives and property if these are endangered.

Willow Harvest Means Hard C... In Indian Jeans

Kitchener, Ont. — (CP) — The Caledonia Indians come again are going to the post. And the posts are piled high outside the stores of this village that borders the highway about 30 miles south of Kitchener.

The Indians are harvesting willow for sale as fence posts. They've done it every year since 1911.

It's big business. Some years they've shipped out as millions of posts ranging from two to four feet apiece. Farming districts are the principal market.

When the Ladue oil fields in Kansas about 30 miles north of Caledonia Hobbema's willow post business. In the first years of the boom the oil commuter took thousands of the sharpened willow posts.

Exploration crews have since been probing around Hobbema to find out whether they find oil here or elsewhere, the Indians figure they are part of the game Father Jeb.

The Indians spend the winters cutting and sharpening the willows. At this time of year, they haul them to the village where they are bought by the storekeeper for re-sale.

Sometimes the poles are piled behind Hobbema's stores as high as a two-storey building and for about a block in length.

Naturally, the area is getting a little thin in willows. But it still is a lucrative business for the Indians.

However, it is not their only means of livelihood.

They also cut cattle and have shipped up to 200,000 bushels of grain a year. Mixedy per cent of the commerce of the village — which you can drive through so quickly that you hardly notice it — comes from the money bills of the Indians.

CONFINED TO HOUSE

Kitchener, May 16 (CP) — A fire threatened the Knollwood cemetery housing unit Tuesday but firemen confined it to a single building which is being torn apart for salvage. Firemen believe children playing with matches were responsible. Two families were moved from adjoining buildings when their roofs began to smoulder.

AT THE CAPITOL — Bette Davi... Rod Cameron goes into action against the warring Reds in an air-ground support from the Republic "F" Cavalry film, "Operation Pacific" which will be the Capitol Theatre's next offering Thursday. Moscow's Story Offensive Was Counter-Attack

Washington, May 16 — (AP)— Moscow's story is that the latest communist offensive in Korea was really a counter - attack which resulted in a disastrous defeat for the Chinese "volunteers" and North Koreans.

State Department officials today said that is the propaganda line being followed also by red China to explain away the failure of the offensive to make much headway against United Nations forces.

The outcome appears also to have made the Chinese communists more cautious. Officials told a reporter the communists now are chary of predictions that the attack now building up will drive the U. S. Eighth Army into the sea.

Sharp, Lengthy Quake Shocks Felt in Italy

Milan, Italy, May 16 (AP) — Sharp and lengthy earthquake shocks shook northern Italy last night and early today. Residents panicked, but there were no reports of casualties.

The tremors this morning followed a strong quake of unusually long duration which frightened inhabitants of more than 20 northern provinces shortly before midnight. The initial shock was reported to have caused some damage to buildings.

Available reports placed the brunt of the quakes around Lake Garda and Lake Como.

One report said the initial shock lasted from 30 to 35 seconds in the area of Genoa.

ODDS LOWERED

Seattle, May 16—(AP)—Lloyds of London has set 19-to-1 odds against big-enough war developments to stop a June convention. Last December Lloyds quoted 80 to 1 against world war before September, 1951. Dr. Frank Wood of Seattle, president of the Pacific Coast Dental Conference, said yesterday the organization is paying $536 premium on a $10,000 policy taken out to cover advance costs and commitments for the June 25-28 conference.

HOUSE BLEW UP

Brussels, May 16—(Reuters)—M. FOXBORO

Foxboro—Quite a number attended the film show on Friday evening at the public school house.

Mother's Day services were largely attended on Sunday morning. The front of the church was pretty with blooming plants and flowers which were arranged by Miss McCullough and her Sunday School class. The scripture lessons were given by Donna Priest and Marie Hollinger, while Miss Joan McCurdy rendered a lovely solo. Everyone welcomed the guest speaker, Mrs. Wanda Sine of Belleville, who spoke on "What constitutes the home and the share we have in it." The many friends of Mr. Percy Priest of Kingston, were pleased to have him attend this service.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Casey were Friday afternoon callers at Mrs Shaw's home.

Mrs. Harry Phillips of Belleville, spent over Sunday with Mrs. Ferne Spencer.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Parks, Bay Bay, were Sunday guests of Mrs. J. G. Sills and Mr. and Mrs. Eris Denyes and Mr. Drury Denyes, Belleville, were afternoon callers.

A number of W. A. ladies attended the convention in Belleville on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Campbell and family of Kingston, were Sunday guests of Mrs. S. McCurdy and Miss Joan and Mr. Don McCurdy.

Mrs. D. Ketcheson of Stirling and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lidder were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Ketcheson.

Mrs. Don McKeown and infant son returned home recently from the hospital.

Mr. Richard Yorke and Mrs. A. Shaw spent Mother's Day at Mr. Fred Prindle's, Plainfield.

The school pupils with their teachers, were conveyed by bus to Stirling on Monday evening when they contributed to the program of the Music Festival.

Sympathy is extended to the family of the late Mr. Everette Sills who passed away on Tuesday at his late residence. Mr. Sills was an aged and respected citizen having lived in Foxboro for a number of years and when health permitted was a faithful attendant at church service.

North Koreans Tell Weird Story To the Papers

London, May 16 — (AP)—Moscow radio today quoted a visiting North Korean delegation as saying American "failures of the fronts."

"They caught Yan U Sant, secretary of the primary organization of the party of labor, skinned him alive, chopped off his legs and forced his wife to eat his flesh," the broadcast said.

The propaganda broadcast said the Koreans told a Moscow press conference that thousands of their countrymen are being shot to cover American "failures of the fronts."

"They caught Yan U Sant, secretary of the primary organization of the party of labor, skinned him alive, chopped off his legs and forced his wife to eat his flesh," the broadcast said.

Why do we contour plow?

By plowing around a hill rather than up and down, small dams between furrows are created by the furrows. These hold the topsoil back during rains and spring thaws. Crop increases of 10 to 30% have been recorded the first year after contour plowing. It takes almost 1000 years for nature to produce one inch of topsoil.

Hollywood, May 16 — (AP) — If Roy Rogers and Gene Autry can do it, so can Carmen Miranda. I don't mean that the Brazilian bombshell is going to horse pluto and host chuckwagon suppers; my concern is with the comedy pokes in their business ventures.

Already there is a Carmen Miranda coloring book for kids. Plans were underway for a Carmen Miranda doll, but got sidetracked. Other merchandising may be reaching the juice counters. At any rate, Carmen says she is ready for them.

"People have made enough money from things I have dressed up," she remarked. "So why shouldn't Carmen make something, too?"

All Big Hits

Among the Miranda inventions which others have capitalized on are platform shoes, fancy turbans and heavy costume jewelry.

"These things made a tremendous hit when I first came to this country," she recalled. "All over New York they were copying my styles. They had big windows in the stores with my picture in them.

Tall Men

I asked her how she conceived her famed trade marks.

"The platform shoes came about because I liked tall men," she replied. "In Brazil, I always liked the big boys from the beaches. But whenever I danced with them, I couldn't see over their shoulders. I couldn't tell if they were flirting with another girl while they were dancing with me.

"One day I saw a woman walking in the street. She had a short-

No. 6 Repair Depot Defeats ANAF 5-0 In Soccer Game

No 6 Repair Depot soccerists defeated a below-strength ANAF eleven at the air force field last night by a 5-0 score in a scheduled Bay or Quinte Football League fixture.

Eagan scored the first goal for the airmen after five minutes of play when he took a rebound from Fletcher's hard drive on goal. Midway through the first half, Macauley tallied the second counter after a scramble in front of the veterans' goal. Loutit accounted for two more goals with the first half ending 4-0 for the homesters.

The second half was productive of more even play although the veterans seldom threatened the winners' goal. Whyte got the Airmen's fifth goal from a free kick but outside the penalty area.

PAT WILSON WILL JOIN REDMEN!

Pat Wilson, formerly of Peterborough football fame and more recently of the Toronto St. Michael's senior team which won the right to defend the Ontario Rugby title from the Hamilton Tigers, will join the Belleville Redmen baseball club as in the playing roster, President Jack Carson announced today. Wilson will report for duty with the team on Monday night when the Peterborough native will make his debut in the city as one of the outstanding outfielders of this district and his arrival here should be a distinct asset to the club.

* * *

DEAN WILL PLAY HERE!

It seems that C. H. Evans, president of the Picton Baseball Club was a little premature in his release to the press the other day regarding the status of Johnny Dean, coloured outfielder signed with the Belleville Baldmen. District dailies carried a press announcement to the effect that since Dean had not secured his release from the Picton club he was still their property and would not play for any other team.

* * *

Evans' statement went further to say that Dean was given back to Picton at the meeting of the Central Ontario Baseball League executive held here last Sunday. Unless we were misinformed by the meeting, in fact President Jack Carson of the club held the meeting in no uncertain terms that Dean was Belleville property and would remain as such.

* * *

It was revealed that the matter of American imports status was discussed at a previous meeting but nothing definite was laid down on the matter nor was anything affecting their status placed on the record. So it seems that Dean will play for the Redmen this season since he has signed a Belleville certificate and the fact that he told us personally that he would do his baseballing this season in a Redmen uniform.

* * *

It is understood that the Picton crew is getting a pitcher in to assist Frankie Dyer. Laverne Wright, who managed the squad two years ago will again be at the helm according to a report out of "Doddsville" today.

GOLF TOURNEY JULY 4-7

The Canadian Open Golf Championship is set for July 4-7 over Toronto's Dinnetarra course — which brings up the international question as to whether this might be the year a Canadian breaks a string of 38 lean years by keeping this country's top golfing honors on Canadian soil.

* * *

The question won't get a final answer until July 7, but in the meantime the season of somewhat wistful speculation is on. The Canadian championship hasn't stayed in Canada since 1914 — more than 30 years before the Spearman field chose Oak Hammond the symbol of victory and the prize money which rides with it helped raise the Canadian Open into the big time.

* * *

The failure of Canadian golfers to take honors in their own Open springs from the fact that the event nowadays attracts some of the best competitive golfers from the big-money U.S. tournament circuit. This year has been even in the past when the prize money was $15,000; it will probably be even more from now that the Devon of Seagram has raised the ante to $25,000.

* * *

Fred Atkins, the flinty Australian, will meet Chief Suni War Cloud, the sensational Indian wrestler of the Wasak tribe, in the main wrestling event in the Memorial Arena on Friday night. Both men are solid, experienced wrestlers. From there in, however, their similarity ceases.

* * *

Atkins is one of the roughest, most rugged and unprincipled matmen in the game. War Cloud is one of the fastest, most scientific and most sportsmanlike grapplers in the sport. War Cloud is not disturbed at such prospects, as his fighting deathlock specialty has often brought victory in the past, even against rivals of Atkins ilk.

* * *

In the semi-final, Earl McCready, the Regina ace, will oppose Nette Brown, the former boxer who went 10 rounds with Joe Louis. Lee Henning, the Irish Iowan, will wrestle Bill Stack, of Oshawa, in the first event.

* * *

Williams Hits 300th Homer, Blackwell Pitches One-Hitter; Both Shaded by Hurling Switch

BY JOE KEISERMAN
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Ted Williams crashed his 300th home run Friday nine others had accomplished that feat.

Darrell Blackwell and Vern Bickford hooked up in a brilliant pitching duel that produced only three hits. Only twice before in the last 50 years had there been games in which fewer hits were made.

Yet, these dazzling exploits were forced to take a back seat yesterday to a bizarre stunt pulled by rookie manager Paul Rapier of Richards of Chicago White Sox.

With his team leading Boston Red Sox 7-6 and southpaw-swinging Williams leading off in the last half of the ninth, he replaced third baseman Floyd Baker with Lefty Billy Pierce. But Dorish did not go to the bench. Instead, Rapier benched third-baseman Orestes Minoso and moved pitcher Pierce there.

Pierce got Williams on a high pop fly to the shortstop behind second and then returned Dorish to the mound. Pierce back to the bench and sent Floyd Baker to third.

The Red Sox got their tying run anyway, but the White Sox won in the 11th when Nelson Fox poled a two-run homer off a 3-2 offering. It was the first of Fox' big league career. Williams' 300th homer and seventh of the season came in the fourth.

In one of the tightest pitching battles of the year, Blackwell threw a one-hitter as Cincinnati earned a 1-0 victory over Boston Braves. Vern Bickford, the loser, allowed only two hits. The two sightless aces, shooting for their second big-league no-hitters, went into the fifth before Bob Elliott doubled off Blackwell for the first hit of the game.

Bickford surrendered his first hit in the sixth—a double by Connie Ryan. Cincinnati's second hit won the game for him as Bob Addis drove in Ted Kluszewski with the winning run in the seventh.

Reds Out of Cellar

The victory moved the Reds out of the cellar into sixth place, back again into the basement fell the New York Giants, who dropped a 6-4 decision to Bill Werle and the Pirates in Pittsburgh. Two homers, good for five runs, featured the Pirates' 10-hit attack.

Brooklyn strengthened its first-place hold with an 8-4 victory over the Cubs in Chicago. Two homers by Gil Hodges, a grand-slammer by Duke Snider and another round-tripper by Jackie Robinson accounted for all but one of Brooklyn's runs.

A pinch single by Bill Nicholson with the bases loaded in the ninth gave Philadelphia Phils a two run and a 5-4 victory over the Cards in St. Louis. The win moved the Phils into a third-place tie with Pittsburgh.

Detroit handed Sandy Consuegra his first loss as the Tigers pounded out 14 hits for a 12-4 victory over Washington. Hal Newhouser spaced nine hits for his third win. Pat Mullin and

Ottawa Giants Right in Thick Of Pennant Scrap

(By The Associated Press)

Ottawa Giants, newest entry in the International League, are right in the thick of the pennant scrap today. The Giants got off to a poor start but are moving at a fast pace at the moment with six victories in their last seven starts.

George Bamberger, down from the parent New York Giants, pitched the Giants into a second-place tie with Syracuse Chiefs last night.

Bemberger turned back the league leading Montreal Royals 8-2 while the Chiefs suffered a 2-0 setback at the hands of Baltimore Orioles.

The Giants scored all of their runs in the second inning on four hits, two walks and an error. Bamberger allowed only four hits and held Montreal hitless after the third inning.

Steve Ridzik blanked Syracuse on five hits. The Orioles got only four hits but two Syracuse errors allowed them to score two unearned runs.

Springfield Cubs ended Rochester's seven game winning streak by trouncing the Red Wings 12-2. Frank Lamanna scattered eight Rochester hits. Lamanna aided his own cause with a three - run homer in the second inning. Two batters also homered for the Cubs and Charley Krews whacked one for Rochester.

Buffalo smeared Toronto Maple Leafs 16-3. The Bisons pounded out 22 hits including home runs by George Moskovich and Frank Carswell. Rookie Acker and Al Carrasquel checked Toronto on five blows including home runs by Charley Grant and Lew Morton.

Remember When

Homes Will Be Refuge for Former Ball Players

(By The Canadian Press)

A haven for destitute former baseball players, at least with both winter and summer homes, is planned by the Christian Athletes Foundation, Rev. Sidney Jackson, a minister of the Christian Church, announced two sites have selected and that baseball will be asked to send the project on its way.

Mr. Jackson said the locations were Tullahoma, Tenn., and Lake Worth, Fla., the former serving as a summer home and the latter for winter.

The home will be known as "Christ's Haven" and will be a refuge for former athletes and will so homeless boys, particularly the sons of former professional athletes.

Preston Baseball Association has signed 14 players for the 1951 season the players, some of whom are from Brantford and Galt as well as Preston, will line up with Intermediate Junior A or Juvenile clubs.

Players signed include Bernard Tonner, Terry Jogan and Joseph Fejes of Galt and Hilt Dott, Donald King of Brantford.

Representatives of the Maritimes' two major hockey leagues will meet at Halifax next Wednesday to discuss the future of their circuits. Two proposals are likely to be discussed, officials said. One is for amalgamation of the Maritime and the Cape Breton Leagues and the other is for an inter-locking schedule.

American-owned Turco II and Chinese-owned Ki Ming remained joint favorites at 10 to 1 for the English Derby as a bookmakers call-over on the race Tuesday night.

The mile and a half classic is scheduled for Epsom Downs May 30.

Baseball Commissioner A. B. (Happy) Chandler said Tuesday night he would not enter the Governor's race in Kentucky in August. Some political observers had speculated that he might do so if his baseball post to run in Kentucky's primary.

Boston Red Sox Slugger Ted Williams poled the 300th home run of his major league career in the fourth inning of Tuesday's game against Chicago White Sox. Williams is the 10th player to reach the charmed 300-homer total, the third among still-active players. The other two active players are Joe DiMaggio and Johnny Mize, both of New York Yankees.

Jackie Keogh of Cleveland was signed Tuesday to meet Sandeep Turpin, British and European welterweight champion, in a 10-round bout at White City Stadium, June 5.

Col. John V. Grombach, American manager of French middleweight boxer Laurent Dauthuille, Tuesday told reporters he has refused an offer of Paris matchmakers for a title fight between Dauthuille and middleweight champion, Ray Sugar) Robinson of New York.

Robinson will fight the French champion, Kid Marcel, in a 10-round non-title bout in Paris May 31.

NEW MICROSCOPE DISPLAYED

Chicago, May 16 (AP)—A new field of electron microscope, so powerful that it shows individual molecules on a screen, was demonstrated at the University of Chicago yesterday. The microscope, the invention of Erwin Mueller, a German scientist, is a simple apparatus that requires only a few dollars of special equipment, yet it is the most powerful microscope known to science.

Alerted, Repetoire Likely Favorites For Preakness

Baltimore, May 16 (AP) —Two modest racing stables with conservatively-unknown trainers are on the threshold of possibly knocking each other out of fame and fortune in the $75,000 Preakness.

Crossing each other in Saturday's big Pimlico race will be Hampton Stables Alerted and Mrs. Nora Mikell's Repetoire.

The two are just as likely to be favorites come Saturday as any other entries. Which points up not only the wide-open aspect of the 76th Preakness but the whole three-year-old situation as well.

Neither Alerted nor Repetoire was thought well enough of at birth to be nominated for $10 by their owners. But they have been sold and their new masters made them supplementary eligibles for $2,250.

Repetoire and Alerted are by far the best colts ever owned by Frank Stout of Malden, Mass., and Mrs. Mikell of Dover, Del. Repetoire is only the fifth horse owned by Mrs. Mikell, while Stout has been in the turf sport only three years.

Stout bought Alerted last Sept. 18 at Belmont for $10,000 from Calumet Farm, which failed to come up with a Preakness this year. Stout got the advice of Jimmy Penrod, who was promptly hired as trainer. Penrod, 42-year-old former steeplechase rider, has virtually lived with Alerted, ever since.

Repetoire was purchased by Mrs. Mikell for $4,000 at the Saratoga yearling sales. His trainer, 45-year-old Al Jensen from Denmark, used to train show horses and, like Penrod, does everything but brush Repetoire's teeth.

A friendly feud has grown up between the two outfits after three meetings this spring in which Repetoire twice beat Alerted by a head and once by 1-1 lengths.

"We're going to catch him one of these days," declares Penrod, and without trying to hide it, thinks it should happen Saturday.

Altered took the measure of two of the other Preakness probables Brookmeade's Bold and King Ranch's Sonic, in Monday's prep. Repetoire has been resting here since being 12th in the Kentucky Derby. Six of the Preakness probables are on deck, Greentree's Big Stretch and Hall of Fame pulling in yesterday. Three more are expected to be put into the entry box Friday.

Yonkers, N.Y., May 16 (AP) — Hi Bert and Virtuous Abbey took halves of the Yonkers Raceway both halves of the Yonkers Raceway split the $1,500 feature last night in the Sunnyside Trot.

Hi Bert, driven by Joseph Bolduc, defeated S.S.M., and Princess Scotland in 2:09 4-5 to pay $26.50, $9.30, and $8. Virtuous Abbey, off at 3-5, finished strong in 2:08 to return $3.30, $3 and $2.80. Dick Williams was the winning driver.

The third largest daily double in Yonkers Raceway history, $522.50, turned up as Day Marine and Mr. McKillop triumphed. There were 82 returning $2 tickets and one $10 ticket sold.

FRANKFORD

Trent Valley Softball League Six-Team Loop

Softball Executive

Frankford—A meeting of the league executive of the Trent Valley Softball League was held in the office of Canadian Canners, Monday evening, with six teams represented. President Bill Berscht assumed the chair. The executive for the current season is as follows: president, Bill Berscht, Frankford; secretary, Gene Lohnes, Frankford; R.C.A.F. representatives, Sgt. R. Samals, Sqdn. Ldr. L. Butherland; Campbellford representatives, G. Frelick, K. Hoard; Trenton representatives, J. Dean, Wesse; Frankford representatives, R. Rankin, R. Rowe; Stirling representatives, Don Rogers, Jim Wright; Wooler representatives, Kazi Austin, B. McColl. The president shall cast the odd vote in event of a tie.

The duties of the secretary were defined these including the mailing of detailed standing and report on games to each team every two weeks, also keeping the papers and radio posted.

The subject of umpires was discussed, and each team is to furnish one umpire, the visiting umpire taking home plate.

Double Schedule

The league schedule is to be a double home and home series (30 games). Games are to be played Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings, two games per week. The games had to be planned on Wednesday nights for some teams, rather than Friday and vice versa. In event of postponement, games are to be made up, on mutual agreement, on the spare night of that week. Each team is allowed to sign a maximum of fifteen players, not including a non-playing coach and manager. Lists are to be in the hands of the secretary not later than June 15. From then on, any change in player lists must be passed by a majority vote of the league executive.

The subject of team imports was also discussed, and it was decided that each team would be allowed three imports, but these must be released by any town in the T.V.L. who would have a priority on an import, because of his residence closer to that town.

The executive then voted on the possibility of affiliation with the O.A.S.A., and it was unanimously decided that the league would not affiliate this year. On a second vote, it was also decided that no member of the T.V.L. would enter the O.A.S.A. as an individual team. The reason for this was the fact that in preceding years, the T.V.L. playoffs have been badly disrupted by O.A.S.A. playoffs. Gate receipts have suffered badly through this factor.

CAMPBELLFORD

Rabbi Describes Three Essentials Of Jewish Religion

Campbellford—Rabbi J. Mayer of the Peterborough Synagogue was the guest speaker on Monday noon luncheon of the Campbellford Rotary Club. "What is hateful to you, do not do unto your fellow," said the Rabbi, and this sums up the essential principle of the Jewish teaching.

The Rabbi spoke on Judaism and the three main essentials it demanded. First is belief in God and His revelation. Second is living the Jewish life and third is acceptance of God, as Lord of the universe and his accessibility to every one of His creatures. God has inspired men in all ages. Moses among these was Moses, whose writings constitute the five books of the Torah, which contain the six hundred odd precepts of the Jewish religion.

Pow in General Use

Some of the precepts are obviously obsolete now but more than a hundred are in general practise now. These that are in use at the present time are chiefly concerned with festivals, food and prayer. The Jew's life from day to day is much like that of his Christian neighbor. The synagogue is free to all. The fundamental principle of Judaism is a belief in the world to come with future reward and punishment. The Jew is not ashamed because of other faiths are found in his synagogue and Rabbi welcomes them, and that God creates individuals is different models. Non-Jews are welcome to join the Jewish faith, but are not solicited to do so. The only demand of the religion is the belief in God and the spiritual equality of all.

Three Main Branches

Today, Judaism has three main branches, the orthodox, the conservative and the liberal Jews, depending on the adherence from the original religion, the congregation or the individual has wandered. The vernacular is being used more and more in liberal congregations and the Hebrew tongue is being abandoned to some extent.

Rabbi Mayer outlined the historical development of the synagogue. The chief pillars of the Jewish custom today relate to the observance of the Sabbath and dietary laws. By these two factors, family life and religious are bound together and the wisdom of the centuries incorporated into the religious and personal life of the Jew.

The speaker was introduced by Roterian E. L. Sackville, a visitor to the Campbellford club from Peterborough. He said Rabbi Mayer had been imprisoned in Germany during the war and had

Porker Makes Tour of Town Before Capture

Campbellford — Campbellford citizens, especially those who frequent the corner of Front st. thought Campbellford was vieing with the city of Toronto for the right of the title "Pig Town" on Monday morning.

Pedestrians and motorists rubbed their eyes and took a second look when they saw a 250 pound now conclusively strolling up Front Street, stopping here and there to gaze into store windows. The porker never tried to get into the local bank. Women and children scattered in all directions and squealed with fear at the sight of what they considered a mate discharge. After cycling in vain to get into a local shoe store, dry goods store, a pool room and several other local establishments, the porker, unable to understand the unfriendly attitude of the store keepers, picked up a lamppost behind a department store and was finally cornered and tied up much against her will.

The pig was owned by Charles Little of Seymour Township, and had been left in a truck parked on Front St. It somehow managed to lift the tail gate of the truck and get off to see the sights of the town. Charles Little and Len Little, together with the help of Manley Grills, finally loaded the protesting porker back on the truck and left for the community livestock exchange at Board's Station, where the animal no doubt brought a good price under the auctioneer's hammer.

GRADUATION WILL BURT

Kingston, May 16 — (CP) — Graduation will cut sharply into the ranks of Queen's University football team this year.

The university stands to lose as many as 21 athletes, either through graduation or departure from Queen's.

The graduating army includes Hal McCarney, Pete Salari, Hank Simola, Doug Woolley, Rod Montrose, Bill Burgess, Murray Bulger, Moe Richardson, Bob Cole, Dee Clements and Bobo Penner. Captain Jim Charters will be in his final year of medicine and probably will not participate in sport.

Budget Demands Of School Board Told to Council

Campbellford — All members, except Mayor Ayrhart, were present at the special meeting of the town council on Saturday afternoon.

Dr. W. W. Baker, chairman, and Sid Hopping, vice-chairman of the P.S. Board were present and explained the budget demands of the public school.

The cash on hand at the beginning of the year, it was explained, will be largely used up in addition to all costs. The increase in the levy asked is $8,007 over last year. Increased grants estimated at $1,100 or 8 total increase in revenues for 1951 of $3,197. Increased expenses will include salary increases of $4,700 plus the purchase of all text books for the pupils, plus whatever the cost of surfacing the playground will be. Thus, the $6,600 cash surplus at the beginning of the year will be largely eaten up.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday falls, and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

For Thursday, May 17

March 21 to April 20—(Aries)—In propositions, deals of which you know little, move warily. Do things safely, take no foolish chances with earnings, assets. But don't hesitate in wise aggressiveness. Avoid controversies.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—You will feel better with direct attack in honest, straightforward way. Have the desire to gain, despite obstacles and you have most of battle won. In all effort, employ tact.

May 21 to June 21—(Gemini)—Some uncertainties about procedures. Be cautious, especially in domestic and financial matters. Don't hurry or refuse assistance. It may be just the medium of success you wished.

June 22 to July 23—(Cancer)—Probably few openings, maybe some real opposition you don't deserve. Bridge all with philosophy, without hampering details. Heart interests need more guidance now.

July 24 to August 22—(Leo)—Pep up, many a battered ship has made port in worse weather than you may ever face. Be the shrewd, silent one to reap where others hastily fall. Allow your imagination some useful leeway.

August 23 to September 22—(Virgo)—Suppose you don't look for much today, and find you won't be disappointed if it is an ordinary day, and agreeably surprised if favors come. Develop your natural talents, intuitive gifts.

September 24 to October 23—(Libra)—Personal attainment indicated over financial or business matters. Poor judgement, rushed decisions can be big obstacles to true progress; watch this. News likely of interest in p.m.; study it.

October 24 to November 22—(Scorpio)—May have to encounter "rough" situation early part of day. Don't be discouraged or take it lying down. The true you will find a way and come through with gain. Smile.

November 23 to December 22—(Sagittarius)— Fifty-fifty opportunities—some fine, some to shun. And success will depend a great deal on how you try and operate. Be open to suggestions, seek advice, and be thankful when things click.

December 23 to January 21 — (Capricorn) — Like Sagittarius now, you have a fine chance of advancing if you function properly. P.M. offers brighter outlook, especially for money, business matters. But tact!

January 22 to February 20—(Aquarius)— Be prudent in finances lest you find yourself in too deep to pull out unharmed. Keep trying, but knowing also what you are about. P.M. rates social and heart interests high.

February 21 to March 20 — (Pisces)—Cannot say day points up all encouragingly, but we can advise that with soundness and ambition you can build opportunity, prevent errors. P.M. careful. Don't try too many irons in fire.

YOU BORN TODAY: Practical, energetic; often persistent. You may also often play down your capability. Executive, managerial bent handled with sympathy, kindness—dislike force. Fine memory. Should protect health from overdoing; avoid stubbornness.

Birthdate: Edward Jenner, English physician, discoverer of vaccination; Maureen O'Sullivan, actress.

CHINESE REDS FAIL TO CRACK ALLIED LINES

5 Youths Charged With Attack On Girl

Toronto, May 17 (CP) — Five youths appeared in juvenile court today charged with rape, and a five-year-old boy was charged as a material witness, in connection with Tuesday night's attack on a 15-year-old schoolgirl. They were remanded for one week.

They appeared before Juvenile Court Judge Rawley S. Mott who said he felt they all should be tried before one magistrate. Judge Mott said he would set a date for the hearing of the case in order to enter any juvenile over 16 to be tried before an adult court.

The 16, three 15 and the other 14.

The girl told police she was stripped and raped by 11 youths in west-end Willowdale Park.

Police combed the area at the end of the city for at least five other suspects.

Britons Promised 10 More Years Of Austerity

London, May 17—(AP)— Britons today were promised 10 more years of austerity over the meat counter.

Not until 1961, Food Minister Maurice Webb said, can Britons expect as much meat, even, as they were able to buy before the Second World War.

Webb explained:

Britain's normal meat sources—mainly in South America—cannot send all that is needed and "there is no magic wand to provide a sudden increase."

The promise of continued austerity was coupled with new doses of restrictions for the British housewife.

She was told:

Milk may have to be rationed again.

Eggs may not come off the ration as expected this summer.

Coffee and clothing prices are going up—clothing as much as 20 per cent.

There was one slightly-bright item. The tea ration will be increased next Sunday from four to five ounces a week.

Train Hits Car Mother Injured, Child Not Hurt

Mrs. Beatrice Huggins, Roslin, and her 15-months old baby, escaped serious injury today at noon when their car stalled on the CNR railway tracks at Corbyville and was struck by a northbound freight.

The car was rolled 25 feet up the track and came to rest on its top while the freight ground to a halt in the first open space beside.

Mrs. Huggins, whose injuries did not prove serious, was driving south on Highway No. 37 and is believed to have seen the approaching train as she neared the crossing. Her car stalled on the tracks and the locomotive crashed into the side of the vehicle.

The 15-month old baby riding with its mother apparently was uninjured and according to those who assisted in rescuing the pair from the overturned car, did not even cry. They were taken to hospital by passing motorists.

The freight which struck the Huggins vehicle was proceeding from Belleville to the Fuller gravel pit with 10 empty cars.

Detroit Jeweler Shot and Killed From Ambush

Detroit, May 17 (AP) —Albert Swartz, 43-year-old Detroit jewelry store federal criminal indictment, was shot and killed from ambush at his home today.

It was the second shooting involving principals in a federal case against two Chicago jewelers and the Detroiter.

Police gave no theory for the slaying.

Earlier this week John Mundo, 56, was sentenced to a 15-to-30 year prisonterm in the shooting last Nov. 30 of James I. Marshall, 39, a Detroit jeweler.

Marshall is a witness in the federal case against Swartz and Kenneth C. Gordon and Kenneth McLeod, Chicago jewelers.

The trio was indicted for possession of $12,000 in stolen photographic film.

Mother Convicted Of Causing Injury

Victoria, B. C., May 17—(CP)— Mrs. Rose Cole Tuesday was sentenced to three years in prison when convicted on a charge of causing grievous bodily harm to her three-month-old daughter June. The child died March 6.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, May 17 (CP) Synopsis: Ontario's heat wave ended Wednesday and this morning made temperatures ranging from the low 50s in Southern Ontario to the mid 30s in Northern Ontario. Friday will bring warmer air to the southern with the mercury rising to the 70s in most sections.

18 VALUABLE RACE HORSES PERISH IN FIRE

Blaze Guts Barn At Blue Bonnets

Montreal, May 17 — (CP) Eighteen valuable race horses were burned to death or had to be destroyed when fire swept through the barn at Blue Bonnets racetrack last night. Two persons suffered slight burns.

Only four of the 22 horses stabled in the structure were saved. Fifteen horses died in the flames. Three had to be shot later because of extreme burns.

The horses were valued at around $50,000 and the barn at about $15,000.

Fire broke out late in the evening and there was general confusion for a time.

It was feared for a time that the flames might spread to adjoining barns, and hundreds of horses were evacuated and led to the 1 1/4-mile oval.

The animals were frightened by thousands of spectators and by automobiles that sped back and forth along lanes surrounding the track. Some broke out of the hands of keepers and trotted off the grounds.

Passengers in a streetcar running alongside Blue Bonnets started a wild stampede after peering at them the head of a horse galloping abreast of the car.

Round up Stray Horses

Two days after the fire began, track officials and handlers still rounded up stray animals as much as five miles away in the city's northwest district.

Among dead horses were said to be Bonnie Jean, Tetzo, Prijmus and Indian Barney.

The entertainment officials said the barn was razed in a matter of minutes. Cause was unknown, but Fire Chief Percy Lay ignited spontaneously.

Ko Nagase, a Canadian jockey, Hiromi Uyeyama, 19, of Vancouver, suffered minor burns to the face when the barn was razed and ed while he was fleeing from the flames. Also slightly burned was Mr. Smith, who helped grooms lead frightened animals to safety.

Flames were visible for miles around and cars raced Decarie Boulevard, a main highway leading into the city. The boulevard is lined with small restaurants and clubs, two of which suffered extensive damage within the last few weeks in arson-menacing fires.

BAIL GRANTED

Whitby, May 17 (CP) —Property bail of $5,000 was granted yesterday to Alphonse Martin, also known as Ivan Sopchuk, charged with arson in connection with with a lumber mill fire here. Bail has been refused twice before.

Crews Flying Ace U.S. Atom-Bomb Planes Given Intensive Training

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
(Associated Press Science Editor)

Denver, Colo., May 17—AP)— The B-36 crews who fly the six United States atom-bomb plane receive the most intensive training in the history of aviation.

This training was described at the Aero Medical Association by Col. Otto Flickinger, chief surgeon for the Eighth Air Force. Each plane carries a crew of 12 or more. They go on training flights lasting 24 to 34 hours, non-stop. They frequently spend a week time flying at 40,000 feet and higher.

These men are the highest age group of military flyers, many with years of previous experience. Yet even the most experienced has to spend a year or more to reach the efficient, and added duties.

Movement of U.S. Arms To Canada Starts in Few Days, Will Move in Secrecy

Ottawa, May 17. (CP)—Movement of United States arms to Canada will start in a matter of days, even though the government hasn't decided how many types of U.S. weapons the army should adopt and hasn't announced those already adopted.

The secret movement of freight trains loaded with the historic first shipments is to be conducted with as much secrecy as possible, army officials say, because of the possibility of sabotage.

But the secrecy goes beyond that, they are silent on other details because officials say they don't even want the scales in telling the Russians about the scope and pace of the army's shift from British-type U.S. arms.

They aren't saying how many weapons there will be, or when they will go, what they are and who will receive them. Some sort of statement may be made public soon, however, about what types Canada has already adopted.

These first shipments are believed to involve largely rifles and machine-guns—small arms. They are the 30-calibre weapons which are replacing the traditional British .303-calibre rifles and machine-guns Canadian soldiers used in the last war.

Tanks Come Later

Heavier equipment, including tanks, won't come later. The army will replace the British-type weapons Canada has sent to European units.

Defence Minister Claxton announced the decision to shift to U.S. arms months ago. Recently in the Commons he said it would not mean entire acceptance of American weapons, and cited the Sten sub-machine gun, light and cheap, as one weapon Canada is considering keeping. There are many, too, if arrangements can be made to alter them to use U.S. ammunition.

So far the only disclosure about weapons accepted is the decision to adopt the 30 Garand rifle, now in general use in the U.S. army, and possibly the 3.5 Bazooka.

Mr. Claxton has said that as it start Canada is getting enough equipment and arms for a division. He disclosed that at the end of the war Canada had enough British-type weapons for five divisions. She has sent enough for two to Europe and has committed a third there.

Many Air Force Men Say They Are Not Convinced Allies Should Bomb Manchuria

Okinawa, May 17 (AP)—Should the United Nations strike at communist bases in Manchuria?

Many United States Air Force men at the big bomber base here —the men who would do the job —are not convinced it's a good idea.

They are not sure the benefit of any such move would outweigh the drawbacks.

Here is how many said they see the problem:

If American Bombers were assigned to bomb targets north of the Yalu river border of Korea, they could do serious damage to the communists' war effort. Air Force men agree such attacks would be of tremendous help to the U.N. armies fighting on the ground in Korea.

If that were the whole story, Air Force men say, there would be no doubt about the military advantages of bombing Manchurian bases.

But there is another side to the purely-military problem of overlong north of the Yalu by Allied air power.

The air experts say that if B-29s flew in red target areas north of Antung, Manchuria, at the mouth of the Yalu, they would have to travel without fighter escort. Without jets flying escort, the Air Force would expect heavy losses of Superforts.

Such losses of big Bombers could not quickly nor easily be replaced. They are the heart of the air power.

Also, the initial strikes, U.S. planes could do serious damage to the enemy's war effort. But at least doubtful whether the air force could long maintain that kind of punishing momentum if they suffered the losses they say could be expected.

The air force is quick to agree that bombing Manchuria would have important implications of a big question is: would the communists retaliate with their own bombers on U.S. installations in Japan and Okinawa? Would bombing Manchuria mean the beginning of a Third World War?

The airmen say that is a question for higher authority.

COMMONS CLEARS HANDFUL OF MINOR BILLS FROM PAPER

New Indian Act Awaits Final Reading

Ottawa, May 17—(CP)—The commons tackled a bit of housecleaning yesterday.

In a day of odds and ends, it cleared a handful of minor bills from the order paper and completed clause-by-clause study of the new Indian act, which brings older Indian statute up to date.

The new act now awaits final reading.

Bills adopted include those tightening consumer-credit regulations, increasing workmen's compensation for government employees in the Yukon and northern territories of the Dominion of the Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King.

What little debate there was developed on the consumer-credit bill. James Sinclair, parliamentary assistant to Finance Minister Abbott, said the legislation is intended to plug loopholes in the restrictions imposed last fall as an anti-inflationary weapon.

He said that some consumers have been circumventing the regulations by using department store charge accounts to evade them. In other cases, some firms installed new electric refrigerators and gave the purchaser unlimited time to pay.

Drug Is Sold

The government had no figures to indicate the effectiveness of the curbs, but it did know that there had been a drop in the number of cars sold on the instalment plan while cash sales of cars had gone up.

The regulations now call for a 33 1/3 per cent down payment on the purchase of motor cars and one-third down on other goods. The period for the purchase price must be paid within 12 months.

The bills implementing the Mackenzie King will provide for the upkeep and administration of Indian affairs, the Yukon territorial government and the territories before accepting them. It was likely the cost to the taxpayers would be considerable.

T. A. Bonnier (L—Montreal St. Henry) said the Indian reserves that while Mr. King left his province in the country that the late Viscount Bennett, former conservative leader, left Canada and returned to his home in Britain after retiring from politics.

Says Budget Will Create Enemies Within Britain

London, May 17 — (Reuters)— Aneurin Bevan, former Labor minister who led last month's cabinet revolt, warned the government today that its budget would create enemies within Britain as potent as those outside.

Bevan, who quit the government because he believed Britain's arms drive threatens to lower living standards, has won support for his stand from certain powerful sections of trades unions and local Labor parties.

In an article published today in the left-wing magazine Tribune, he attacked the abandonment of the budget as an instrument for combating the underpaid and the worst shocks of the cost of rearmament."

Bevan warned against "the endless opportunities for mischief" that this situation will present to certain elements in the community which are more concerned with igniting the fuse than with the long-term

Rita's Famous Legs May Have To Go in Hiding

New York, May 17—(CP)— Movie star Rita Hayworth's famous legs may have to go into hiding.

The spiritual head of the Islamic mission of America, Shaikh Dawoud Ahmed Faisal, said yesterday he will bar the screen star if she ever raises here daughter Jasmin as a Moslem she (Miz Hayward) will have to veil her face in a harem—a loose-fitting, chemise-like dress that covers just everything but the face and hands.

Miss Hayworth has announced that Jasmin will be reared in the Prince Aly Khan and will raise her daughter as a Catholic and not a Moslem. In return, the Indian prince is requested to set up a $3,000,000 trust fund for Yasmin.

If the red-haired actress brings Miss Yasmin as a Moslem, the Shaikh said, the mark practically becomes a Moslem herself. That would mean Rita would have to

Enemy Reserves Packed Behind Assaulting Units

'We Are Killing Them By Thousands' —Air Officer

Tokyo, May 17. (AP)—Waves of attacking Chinese reds failed today to break through the main United Nations defence line in Korea.

The Chinese smashed a hole in South Korean ranks and streamed through, but Allied troops sealed it and plugged the gap by nightfall.

The actions were along the east-central front, hottest sector of the 75-mile-wide battleground.

Field dispatches said 96,000 Chinese were attacking in the 25-mile-length of the east-central sector in the opening stages of an all-out communist offensive.

Another 25,000 reds were reported gathering strength on the Pukhan valley invasion route of the west-central sector.

Mounting Pressure

Far to the west erupting attacks and mounting pressure threatened a major advance toward Seoul later.

All along the line red reserves were packed deep behind the bugle-blowing assault units.

Truck-load after truck-load and red strategy appeared to be to hit the centre of the line regardless of losses.

Communists attacked relentlessly. U.N. planes, artillery and mine fields took a heavy toll.

"We are killing them by the thousands," a U.N. air officer said.

Artillery batteries fired at a record pace.

The U.S. Eight Army estimated communist casualties Wednesday at 3,523. "The Fifth air force add it added 850 Thursday.

Heaviest fighting was on a 25-mile sector of the East-Central front from Chunchon to Inje.

TWO INJURED IN BLAST

Chicago, May 17—A dynamite bomb exploded last night in the home of an A.F.L. teamster union official, injuring two persons and causing heavy damage to the two-flat brick building.

About an hour later a second— and bigger—bomb—wrecked a gasoline station, Police said the two bombings apparently were not related.

The bombing at the teamster union official's home followed the bombing Tuesday night of the home of an A.F.L. milk drivers' union official. Both unions are affiliated with the International Brotherhood of Teamsters.

SEARCH CONTINUES

Smith Falls, Ont., May 17—(CP) The search continued today for Cecil Hanley, 40, office manager of a farm implement company, missing since he started on a fishing trip early Tuesday.

Russia Fails to Shift Debate On Chinese Arms Embargo

New York, May 17 (AP)— Russia failed today to shift debate on a proposed world arms embargo against communist China in the United Nations Security Council, where a Soviet veto could kill it.

The question was settled without a vote on the political assembly's 60-country political committee, after Soviet Delegate Jacob Malik announced it would not participate in the committee's discussion. He said that the Security Council was the only proper forum agency to debate the question.

However, Russia's Jakob Malik indicated he was not asking the committee to vote on the Soviet proposal. Committee Chairman Roberto Arbelaez-Urdaneta of Colombia then gave the floor to Trygve Lie, secretary-General Gross to introduce the embargo proposal.

The Soviet bloc delegates remained in their seats.

Malik's refusal to take part in the debate removed the only expected opposition to the proposal. He voted for a speedy vote.

The attitude of the coniform countries indicated they would ignore any U.N. ban on arms to the Peiping regime.

Before the meeting began, Malik laughingly declined comment on a magazine (Newsweek)

8-POUND [illegible] CAUGHT AT [illegible] BAY

Using a fine bug spinner and heavy tackle, Spurgeon Mc-Worter, Mr. George Maddox, Riverview Avenue, landed an 8-pound pickerel on Saturday. Measuring over 30 inches the fish was caught in Hay Bay north of Napanee. This is the largest fish reported to date.

TOMATO PLANTING TO BEGIN SOON

Setting of tomato plants will commence in the Bay of Quinte area soon according to the week by crop report of the Ontario Department of Agriculture. A combination of warmer weather will speed up the time for setting the plants.

In Hastings county it was estimated that approximately 65 per cent of the spring crop has been seeded. Heavy rains of late last week held up seeding for a few days.

Growth of grasses and clovers has been retarded by two fairly heavy frosts. Surveying of orchards has been general but damp weather and poor location have made the work difficult.

FREE TRANSPORTATION IN OFF-PEAK HOURS

As a special courtesy to Belleville shoppers and to boost the "Dollar Days" sales campaign being featured this week by Belleville merchants, Rawson Bus Lines have offered free transportation downtown during off-peak hours Friday. The offer had included today as well.

From nine-thirty until ten-thirty in the morning and also for a one-hour period during the afternoon the bus company will transport shoppers free from their homes to the downtown shopping area.

"Dollar Days", offering special values in merchandise are being held today, Friday and Saturday.

TRAFFIC CASES DOMINATE COURT

Traffic cases predominated in the town magistrate's criminal court this morning with nine speeding charges being listed on the docket. All charges were settled out of court with fines and costs amounting to $8 being paid by the offenders.

One motorist pleaded guilty to careless driving charges arising out of an accident which occurred recently in the city. May 6 a fine of $5 and $13 costs was levied by Magistrate T. Y. Wills. Two other charges of careless driving were enlarged to a later court.

St. Michael's Alumni Elect New Executive

On Monday evening St. Michael's Alumni met in the John St. High School for the purpose of electing a new executive. The meeting was well attended and an enthusiastic group of members discussed plans for the coming term.

The officers elected are as follows: President, Robert Temple; vice-president, Joe O'Leary; secretary, Miss Rita Chappell; treasurer, Miss Violet Graham.

A membership committee was also appointed consisting of Miss Mary Jean Hudon, Don Finkle, Miss Catherine Meagher, Armand Duffy, Tom Mascaro and Ed Buckley.

Signals Band Heads Parade Through City

Martial music resounded through city streets to the rumbling accompaniment of military vehicles and marching feet last night when the Band of the Royal Canadian Corps of Signals, Kingston, headed a parade held in connection with recruiting for the Essex and Prince Edward Regiment.

The band, composed of drums and trumpets some 35 pieces strong, headed the parade which moved off from the Bridge St. armories at 7.45, swung up Pinnacle to Station Street, left on Station to Front and down that thoroughfare on Bridge Street east to the armories.

Members of the Hasty Pees paraded with 60 hundredweight transport vehicles, Bren gun carriers, six-pounder anti-tank guns and station wagons.

The parade was under the command of Major Joe Johnson, with the band under the direction of Regimental Sergeant Major Adams, RCCS.

Following arrival at the armories, the band played several numbers. The fine work of the band was heard and appreciated by a large number of civilian spectators as well as army personnel.

Arena Commission Shows Net Profit Of $9,715.36

At a meeting of the Arena Commission held at the City Hall Chambers this morning, Ald. James A. Thomas was re-elected chairman of the commission for the coming year. The financial report was submitted by the secretary, H. D. Bateman, and showed a net profit of $9,715.36 plus interest of $720 paid to the municipality. The commission has also paid on account to the municipality a sum of nearly $4,000, leaving a balance owing of $17,897.

Events in the Arena during the past season showed a revenue of $45,807, the canteen and checkroom $1,417 and ice hockey, figure skating and advertising brought $330, while rentals and miscellaneous items brought in $31 making a total revenue of $54,286. Expenditures including operation and club shares, wages, advertising, refereeing and tax amounted to $39,583 and general expenses including salaries, light, heat and power and other sundries amounted to $6,987 making a total expenditure of $46,570.

A delegation from the Belleville Hockey Association attended the meeting and asked that the rink be opened early enough next fall to accommodate an exhibition game by the Chicago Black Hawks with one of their farm teams. The commission agreed that ice would be available for both the junior and senior clubs by October 1. Minor hockey right has left at Thursday, the same as last year, along with Saturday mornings.

The commission decided to purchase two watering carts to be used for flooding the ice between periods of the hockey games. The commission members with the manager of the Arena will find a place to properly house this equipment in the rink.

Hasty Pees Commander Stresses Need for Young Men to Enlist

Urgency of the need for young men, especially civilians, to join the 27th Canadian Infantry Brigade now being formed, is stressed in a letter to this newspaper, today by Lieut.-Col. Jack Porritt, M.C., commanding officer reserve battalion, Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

Col. Porritt points out in his letter that while recruiting through the Hasty Pees regimental stations has been successful, the reserve battalion has contributed the largest proportion. Young men from 18-24 are not attracted, he said, and "it was are to maintain an army under the voluntary system, these men must join."

The text of Col. Porritt's letter follows:

"The Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment was the name given to the amalgamation of two old county regiments at the end of World War I. The history of both of these regiments is interwoven with that of the counties of Prince Edward and Hastings. I believe Captain Meyers had a band in forming the Hastings company and U. E. Loyalists undoubtedly were among the first recruits for the two local Elements of the regiments fought in all the wars in which Canada took a part and in World War II became famous under the combined name of Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

"The plan for the formation of the 27th Brigade recognizes the prestige of this unit in the district and in army headquarters is filled with a number of other regiments famous in World War II, but has been named as the Infantry Unit in Eastern Ontario for which two battalions will be formed.

"The first week of recruiting has been very successful from the point of view of numbers passing through our regimental recruiting stations. The reserve battalion has contributed the largest proportion and the remainder are, to a great extent, unemployed. Fathers, mothers, widows and friends are struck by the fact that the young men of 18 to 24 are apparently not attracted. These men must join if we are to maintain an army under the voluntary system.

Should Realize Need

"If citizens of our two home counties fully realized the lack of general forces in Canada, they would be better aware of the urgent need for enlistment in this 27th Brigade.

"Canada is not sufficient strength at present, by herself, to put up more than token resistance to an invader. She cannot take her place on an equal footing with her colleagues in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

"I would like to stress these facts to the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment. The need for enlistments in our army is urgent if we are to have an army at all. The need for an army is vital to our existence as a people as a nation.

"Regardless of the urgency of the 27th Infantry Army life offers the young man a great deal—good pay, comradeship, travel and a trade if he wishes. A period of army training for all young men is the best way to be assured, would be a great boon to the nation. The Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment is filled with a character, physical health and mental self-discipline. There is room for more with it.

"In concluding I urge: Let us fill the ranks of our defences in the 27th Brigade now. If unavoidable home responsibilities do not, you must join the reserve battalion. Either way they will help to make Canada strong."

Twenty C of C Branches Confer On Mutual Problems at Trenton

Standardization of store hours were submitted and discussed. Other Questions Discussed

A lengthy question period besides the store hours included hydro charges to tourist operators; municipal assessment of tourist properties; the advantages of an active agricultural committee and, what Ontario towns have to offer new industry as compared with other provinces.

In the absence of C. A. Pollock, president of the Ontario Chamber of Commerce, A. McLean Hale of Belleville, one of the provincial directors, presided over the meeting.

Tom McNeil, president of the Trenton Chamber welcomed the guests and district representatives. Speaker at the dinner meeting held at the Queensway Hotel was D. A. McDonald, K.C., of Belleville, president of the Eastern Ontario Chamber of Commerce and Board of Trade. He spoke on the history of the Chamber, what it has done in the past and what is in the future.

Guests attending the conference included L. A. Buckley, of Kitchener, secretary of the Ontario C. of C.; T. Hamill, assistant Ontario manager; C. A. Milligan, of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture; Col. C. O. Crowe, assistant of Travel and Publicity; Walter Murr, industrial development department of the C.N.R., R. B. Potts, of the C.P.R. and Harry Callan, Industrial branch of the Department of Planning and Development.

IN MEMORIAM

SMITH — In loving memory of a dear son, Ralph A. Smith, who passed away May 17th, 1948.
Sweet memories linger round his grave
Of one we all miss and love.
Blessed promise, she shall waken,
Through the long night above,
In the dawning of the morning,
All the dear ones shall be there,
And we shall meet our darling,
And rejoice to see her more.
Inserted by mother, daughter Marguerite and family. M17

SMITH — In loving memory of a dear son, Ralph A. Smith, who passed away May 17th, 1948.
In the quiet hour home it was we did miss him most Memory is a dear token
Of a secret tear
Memory keeps your memory ever dear.
Lovingly remembered by father, mother, sisters and brothers.

EATON — In loving memory of our dear son, Billy Eaton, who passed away May 17, 1940.
Sweet memories linger round his grave,
Often silent tears.
But love will whisper to us.
As we journey through the years.
Sadly missed by mother, Dad.
No matter what we do
No matter where we go,
There is always a memory
For you and you alone.
Just a moment dear Billy,
Absent, yet near you seem,
Gone, but not forgotten.
Sadly missed by daughter Ramona and son Ronald.

EATON — In loving memory of my beloved husband, Billy Eaton, who passed away May 17, 1940.
This day I'll visit memory's shrine
And think of you there I will never forget,
I miss his love, his care, his smile,
With him I spent my happiest days,
Though his smile has gone forever,
And his hand I cannot touch,
I have his memory always.
Of the husband I loved so much.
Lovingly remembered by wife Emma.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, May 17. (CP)—Prices steadied at the higher levels as the session progressed on the stock market today.

Industrials chalked up gains ranging to more than a point.

Papers led the list with a wide array of issues higher and steels, utilities, agriculturals, constructions, banks, refining oils, foods and liquors followed close behind. Textiles manufacturing companies and retail stores were mixed.

Golds showed signs of breaking their trading slump of the last three months.

Among Senlors McIntyre jumped $1.50 and Kerr Addison, Malartic, Dome, Giant Yellowknife, and Lake Shore were up fractions. In the secondary gold group Sullivan, Pickle Crow, Macassa, McLeod, Cockshutt and Cochenour Willans showed gains.

Game Official Praises Local Club For Work in Conservation Field

Bob Sheppard, of the Department of Lands and Forests office at Tweed, told the Belleville Fish and Game Association at their windup meeting last night that the club had a definite place in the conservation setup in this area. He told them that since 1946 five more rearing ponds had been added at the White Lake hatchery near Sharbot Lake "merely through the efforts of clubs like yours, pounding on the table."

Mr. Sheppard said that in 1947 all the brook trout available for the 5,000 streams and lakes of Hastings numbered 40,000 fingerlings. "With the addition of the five ponds," he said, "we will have altogether 500,000 to 600,000 brook trout available this year for distribution." He said that if members of the fish and game associations ever got discouraged that angle about should show them that their work has been worthwhile.

The department official praised the work of the club this year in aiding game wardens when the duckrel were spawning in the bay. "I can't say enough for what the club did for us," he said. "If we can continue this way for six years we'll never have to worry about chickens as far as the Bay of Quinte is concerned.

Mr. Sheppard reviewed the re-were received. The estimated holdovers was 1,000 cattle, including stockers.

Medium to good weighty steers brought $23-$24 and a few light steers and heifers sold from $22-$23. Common bulls were $27-$28.

Calves were steady at $37-$38 for choice vealers and $30-$35 for common to medium.

Grade A hogs were quoted at $33.50 and dressed hogs were $27.

MONSTER CATCH

production of game fish as carried on by the department each year. He said that natural reproductions are sometimes lost three or four years in a row, and that "scarcity cycles" in game fish are due in great measure to natural spawn being destroyed. Mr. Sheppard illustrated his point by saying that two years ago, in a high wind, pickerel spawn was thrown on the shore of Hay Bay two to three inches in depth and a foot wide, and innumerable prospective fish were lost.

In addition to adverse climatic conditions, spawn suffers from predators, and so the yield from natural reproduction is sharply cut. "We make a mistake by putting too much store by natural reproduction," he said.

Forests Most Important

Mr. Sheppard insisted that all conservation "begins with the trees and will end with the trees". He told of legislators from American states being dismayed at the small trees yield from their streams, and how Department of Lands and Forests men traced it to a lack of tree growth and proper conservation on the banks of the streams.

He also told of trout streams in Hastings which have been dead issues for 20 or 30 years. These same streams were good that long ago, but a lack of trees has allowed freshet waters in the spring to gouge out the bed and banks completely every year.

Mr. Sheppard also spoke of the great strides taken in enforcement of game and fisheries laws in the past few years, and in particular of the advantages of spotting offenders by plane. "You can do wonderful work with a plane," he concluded.

Also speaking to the club was Bob Smith, representing a bait company in the city. He extended an invitation to everyone to view the assembly of lures in his plant. Two films were shown, "Famous Fish I Have Met", and "Fish Story."

Members agreed that the next meeting of the association would be held in October.

Disaster Fund Set up By Air Force Wing

A disaster fund has been set up within the organization of Belleville Wing 418 RCAF, officials announced today.

The object of the fund is to provide immediate assistance to members of the association in the event of an emergency such as fire, or other forms of disaster.

To facilitate its efforts, the Fund Committee under the chairmanship of President John Godwin, has posted telephone numbers with Fire Chief Gerald Vance, who, in event of such an emergency, will contact the numbers immediately. Calls to Chief of Police Probert will have the same effect, since he will immediately contact the fire chief.

Funds have been set aside for the committee and these will be augmented by some of the proceeds from a special day to be held in the immediate future.

Disaster fund committees have operated with success in other wings of the air force association.

Kirkwood Team Holds Top Slot In Spring Loop

With but two more weeks to go in the AAA Spring League bowling, Kirkwood's Cigar took a virtual stranglehold on first place by taking all seven points from Thrasher's Millers who had previously been tied for the second slot.

Ashley Furs took Callaghan's Ice for seven points while Canada Cement and Northern Electric took a four-three decision from Bowl-O-Drome and G. E. Woods.

After the cessation of hostilities Kirkwood's emerged with 31 points, B-O-D 22, G. H. Woods 20, Thrasher's Millers 19, Northern Electric 18, Ashley Furs 14, Canada Cement 10, and Callaghan's Ice in the cellar with six points.

Big Cecilles led the individual bowlers with an 839 triple, followed closely by Ron Saylor, 836, Jim Gooding Kirkwood, 785, Jack Fitzgerald 766, Joe Legault 751, Jack Beamish 741, Jim McKenzie 721, Ray Lundberg 719, and Ted Greenfield 703.

Tribute Paid Sea Cadets At Inspection

Tribute to smartness on parade, deportment and general efficiency was paid members of the Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps Quinte at its annual inspection last night by Lieut. Commander Gerald M. Coleman, commanding officers RMCS Cataraqui, Kingston.

Commander Coleman told the corps he was "very pleased" with the inspection. He stressed quality of membership rather than quantity and pointed out the value of the training both physically and mentally to the young sailors.

The commander took the salute following the inspection, after which the "ships company" demonstrated "pulling" and signals in an exhibition on the bay in front of the ship.

A feature of the inspection was a presentation to Col. P. H. Wills of a medal for "outstanding service to the Navy League". The presentation was made by Navy League representative Dr. Russell Scott. Other representatives present were Captain J. Watson and Ross Stirrett.

The corps is commanded by Lieut. R. G. Lanning. Present also were Lieut. Chapman G. Bummers, Lieut. Addison Lloyd, RCNVR; Major R. L. Dennison, second in command 9th Anti -Tank Regiment, and Lieut. Commander (S) Ralph Mitchell. A large number of spectators witnessed the inspection.

BROKE A LEG

Yonkers, N. Y., May 17 (AP)— With the inquisitiveness of youth, John Sennenetz, 13, climbed 30 feet up a steel power beside the New York Central's electric tracks yesterday. Then his right hand came in contact with a high-voltage wire. He was burned, tossed to the ground and broke a leg.

EAT LESS MEAT

Budapest, May 17—(Reuters)— Hungarians will eat less meat and fats this year to conserve the cattle stock, Zoltan Vas, chairman of the Hungarian State Planning office, told parliament yesterday.

The meat ration in Hungary now averages 10½ ounces a week.

A VIOLATION OF PRINCIPLE

Objections to the manner in which the public works committee of city council purchased a one ton truck recently have been voiced by truck dealers of the city. The first objection, apparently, is made to the reasons given them by city council for the purchase of one particular brand of vehicle.

The first reason given them is that the engineering department of the city advised the public works department that it was well satisfied with the particular brand in question by the dealers; that any new truck would need a service, and that such an excuse is automatically made invalid by that. The second reason given is that the truck accepted by the committee was zigged with extra equipment. This equipment was not called for in the first tender form for heavier springs seems to have helped bring the acceptance.

The third reason is that city council could have immediate delivery. But the objecting dealers claim that they could have supplied their vehicles within a very short time.

The crux of the matter, however, is that the committee, and thus the council, did not accept the lowest tender submitted, and that the one truck on which the tender was second highest. Only one tender was any higher, and it was for three dollars more. The lowest tender submitted was $274 below the price of the purchased truck.

City council has been given the reasons why it did not. That is, the committee was empowered to buy any truck it wished, and council guaranteed to ratify its actions. This procedure is reported to have been taken because there were several items to be purchased other than trucks, such as new tires, and the committee, and council as a whole, wished to place orders for the equipment as soon as possible. Giving the committee power to act was one way of speeding up the process.

Doubtless this is a democratic procedure. It is the only way to assure that the ratepayers get full value for their money. Therefore, all things being equal, it is reasonable, in our opinion, that the lowest tender submitted should be given prime consideration. If the vehicle submitted by the dealer does not fulfill the qualifications stated by council, then it is not considered. In this case, it appears that any of the vehicles would have filled the bill, and yet the second highest in price was accepted.

The committee has not given the public any concrete reason for accepting that tender. It has a duty to discharge to the people . . . that of protecting city revenues, and seeing that the municipality does not pay more than it should for the service obtained.

Again, all things being equal in the submitting and selling of tenders, the committee and city council appear to have mistaken their purpose. Their responsibility is to provide municipal service on the lowest level. In short, if all the trucks considered in this case were capable of doing the job in mind, extra equipment not considered, then there must be a reason for council's actions. It has not been made public.

There is no doubt of the integrity and honesty of the men who served on the committee, and there is no doubt that they did what they felt was best. There has been no suggestion of graft or favoritism made on any of the members of the committee, and no reputation has suffered because of the deal. In our opinion, however, it is clear that the lower tenders did not receive due consideration, and a violation of principle has resulted.

A TELEVISION STUDY IS NEEDED

A committee has been set up in the province of Quebec to study educational problems arising from the introduction of television into Canada in the future. The group may well be the forerunner of committees that other Canadian provinces may wish to establish.

Surveys in the Boston area indicate that some children are so addicted to the silver screen that they watch it and eat from card tables at the same time. At least seventy-five per cent of the children which television has brought into the area are watching it for four hours each day, and for thirty-one hours each week. The most revealing of the statistics, however, show that more than two-thirds of the children are allowed to pick their own programs. In addition, the habit of watching is definitely lacking. Either that, or the parents are as much in favor of horse and soap operas as are their children.

It has been estimated that if and when television does become a reality in Canada through the facilities of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, educational programs will comprise only ten per cent of the scheduled items. That ten per cent is not enough, in Canada, because if it is not of great value to younger people immediately, it will never impress them. Canadian television will have to compete with emissions from American stations and will do that reason next to be of good quality. Some of the bad habits acquired by children in the United States could be averted by better television planning in Canada.

JUST FOLKS

HOBS D'OUEVRE

They call them "hors d'oeuvres."
They are pretty and pink.
Bright snacks before dinner, they serve with a drink;
Sardines, pickled roes and fish eggs on toast
Passed round on a platter by butler and host.
They are tasty and tempting but they're not filling,
When dinner is served I find appetite gone.

Then I've nibbled and snacked from a stuffing proud
Some scrumptious delicacy I'm not allowed
To eat when I'm dining, but I've been told
That hors d'oeuvres
But a dozen make fighting the belt round my waist.
After six midget wienies I'm stuffed to the gills,
A salad and steak I'd no longer desire.

They are pretty to look at, I admit without qualm
And are hard to resist as the platter goes by,
But I'd much rather dine with morsels are man-filling
And two hours of nibbling are more than enough.
Hors d'oeuvres, I've been told, are delicious but Let me eat my dinner and I'll say:
"Hors d'oeuvres, be hanged!"

Letter to the Editor

Too Slow Action On Grain for India

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

I read with keen interest items in the news from New Delhi, intimating that certain food deals — a barter or exchange basis — have been consummated with both Russia and China, while the prospective shipment of 2,000,000 tons of U.S. grain is still apparently, in the committee stage, or "pigeonholed" "post".

Personally I very much regret that the delay in making this decent and democratic gesture to the starving people of the food-deficient member in good standing at the UN level. Surely that after the U.S. has spent such slow pokes in this matter, to the point where the thoroughly ruthless men at Moscow and Peiping have captured the spotlight in the fields of propaganda and international prestige, I had thought that Agnes Meyer, wife of the lawyer put it, "of the essence", and that the military principle of "Blitz-krieg" moves fastest with the greatest dispatch, (General Patton); and the question the politician's thought: "It gives twice who gives quickly".

So far as I can make out, the amount of grain involved in the above India-China deals is only a fraction of the above mentioned 2,000,000 tons. I am glad to learn the seldom-mentioned fact that from 500,000 to 600,000 tons of grain are coming to India each month from the U.S. through regular "land-shipping" and ocean going vessels. Whose it is played half-and-half by the lawyer & reliance ball-player we get in Canada it is an almost it is an almost perfect aesthetic.

It is a game, moreover, in which all the odds are overwhelmingly stacked against anything exciting happening. Eight reasonably alert gents are poised on the balls of their feet constantly waiting to stop anything lively from taking place and about all you can hope for is an error. On the other hand, if it is an error it is considered lousy baseball, that's the way it is.

This kind of thing can'be well long interminable. Only last week, for example, a professional ball game in Victoria went for 19 innings, in which 194 men came up to the plate in the course of the 19 innings. Victoria went for 19 innings, in which 194 men came up to the plate in the course of the 19 innings. Victoria went for 19 innings, in which 194 men came up to the plate in the course of the 19 innings. Victoria went for the history of organized sport.

The poor fellows would probably be dead of old age before the game until their old age pension checques arrived had not sheer lethargy settled in.

Ah, but the "fan" is willing to put up with this for moments of action. I figure conservatively that in the average ball game there are not more than fifteen minutes of exciting action and this seems enough to keep the fans from completely drowsiness that comes after a long hike or after hours of play in the ball work or, for that matter, sleep after a hard day's labor has left the body exhausted.

But that is not all. To a great many misguided people relaxation is nothing more than the natural or physiological rest and recuperation from professional pursuits. It implies more than flight from reality, getting away with the boys, and the relaxation of science. People who live more or less within the law but without any great love or, for that matter, going somewhere to get away from it all and forgetting everything.

It is true that a lowering of blood pressure and a slowing of pulse rate may result from this, it is wrong to infer from this physiological fact that any individual with high blood pressure should "take it easy" at all times and avoid exercise, work or play on account of his precious blood pressure. In most instances where the physician finds, among other signs or symptoms, blood pressure high the average is active or normal, a moderate amount of work, play or exercise is advisable and beneficial.

Our ancestors reacted to annoyances, insults, snubs, assaults, threats, thefts or other offences with tooth and nail, stones, clubs, spears, arrows, swords, pistols, fists — or else ran away. Whatever they did, they released the rage or fear tripped the trigger of the hypothalamus or autonomic nervous mechanism that regulates the secretion of adrenalin into the blood stream. The adrenalin causes liberation of blood sugar from the liver where it is stored into the blood and rapid oxidation or combustion of the fuel for conversion into muscular or organic energy. If there is insufficient muscular activation (fight, flight or equivalent outlet for the surge of energy) to use it up in the natural way the increased blood pressure and pounding heart may be perilous to good living.

Unfortunately for health and longevity the mores or virtues of civilization permit it incumbent upon well bred individuals to remain impassive and unmoved under all circumstances, for it betrays one's lack of culture, darn it, to give vent to the feeling of anger or hewit out the politely smiling second-so or give him a poke on the nose. So that as it may, wearing such a mask of imperturbability and calm, it is important that you sublimate the fight or flight impulse into one or other kind of activity. This will use up the surplus energy harmlessly. If you can't fight or run, go-giggling, shadow-boxing, acrobatics or Gymnastics immediately, then get you go into your dance or get on with your gardening. Do not let your health, vite and longevity.

OUR TOWN

By JACK SCOTT

SLOW MOTION SPORT

So here we are in the baseball season again and here I am perched in the bleachers once more, grimly determined to love the silly game.

Somehow it never works. For, let's face it—baseball, as a professional sport, is just about as exciting as a croquet match at the old ladies' home.

You always expect it to be so much more than it ever is. It's a grand feeling to be up in the stands with a bag of peanuts in hand, feeling the contagious excitement of the crowd, admiring the early summer evening paling over the People's Credit Jewelers sign in the left field.

The players trot out into the field. You pop a goober in your mouth and settle down for a long test. And from then on, nine times out of ten, you wonder why you didn't stay home and play croquets or maybe a fast game of crokinole.

This, of course, is not true for the "fans". In every Canadia nicity and town of any size baseball is lately determined to be lovers of baseball.

Each year they painstakingly learn the names and batting averages of the players they see, and each, having failed to make good in their native states and unable to get into the professional ranks, instructors, are banished to the wilds of Canada to ply their trade. Never did mediocrity earn such loyalty.

In any "home" team, however homogeneous, these true baseballers are able to find their favorites for the season and even to indicate some mild joy in the sighting of pilots and the endless inbreeding "series" which wind up the season.

Good for them. It's a sure enough pleasant way to spend an evening, as I say. But when they start to confuse this familiar relish with athletics, and I am confused to feeling that somebody is wrong and I just hope it isn't me, Mr. I am the guy who starts getting sore at the fourth inning and wishing I'd gone to see Betty Grable instead.

Rare Moments

I have given this matter a good deal of thought and I've decided that baseball, by its very nature, is doomed to indigce ennui from the fifty-fifth inning on.

The perfect game in baseball—the equivalent to the hole in one in golf—is the contest in which nothing at all happens except that the players alternate at playing catch all night.

Indeed, it is hard to say which is the more boring sport—baseball or golf. Golf has the advantage of being played in the open air, but baseball has the advantage of being played in a group. Which is the lesser evil? Which is the lesser of two evils? Which is the lesser of two evils? Which is the lesser of two evils

Secretary Going To Professional Status in U.S.

New York May 17. (CP)—The secretary is on her way to professional status in the United States.

In late August she will, for the first time, have the opportunity to become a certified secretary if she measures up with the right to use the initials C.P.S. after her name.

Certification—culmination of many years of planning and study—will be given by the National Secretaries Association—will be based on results of a two-day examination to be held across the country. Applications will be sought for stenographic skill typing ability, spelling, shorthand, business law, office practice, and—most important—"secretarial personality".

Members of the Association of Office Executives have expressed general satisfaction that at last the "subjects of American interest" will be included in the "good right hand" so about to get some recognition as to their regard as a highly developed profession.

Benefits should be two-fold, said Marion Musselis, Chapter president. It will provide an easy way for a secretary to measure her job by, prove her ability; and it should boost her ego so she will feel she's working at a professional level.

Miss Musselis felt the psychological part of the examination was of utmost importance.

"A girl's secretarial ability can not be measured by tapping keys on a typewriter," she said.

The C.P.S. secretary has to get along with every personality in the office, act as a buffer between all managements and her employer, and make everyone who is getting a cut from the boss walk away feeling that he is getting a 'yes'.

Demand Grows For Marcasite

London, (CP)—Latest fashion trend, jewellers report, is a rapidly increasing demand for marcasite. Lovely when hand-set in silver, the dull gleam of this mineral has a charm which enhances almost any outfit and blends with a wide range of colors.

All forms of marcasite jewellery—twin clips, sprays, earrings, necklaces, bracelets and so on—are included in the new vogue. Especially favored are the graceful sterling silver sprays consist of two or more pieces with the same motif, often highlighted by pearls.

In one delicate floret set the spray has gold, with its three pearl centered flower heads and slender silver stalks, is teamed with matching earrings. The exact replica of the spray in miniature.

Well-Women Clinic Successful Project in Montreal Hospital

(Montreal, (CP)—Legend has it that the Chinese held their physicians to keep them well. When a patient became ill the payments ceased. Apparently it was up to it that his patients were kept healthy.

The clinic set up by officials of the Royal Victoria Hospital is a modern example of this ancient custom.

Dr. N. W. Philpott, obstetrician and gynaecologist-in-chief of the hospital, says it is much easier to keep people well than to cure them after they are sick.

The clinic, organized for only a 3 1-2 years, is dedicated to the task of keeping women well.

In the last year alone more than 2,000 women attended the clinic. Among them only 13 cancer cases were discovered and the same number of cases of tuberculosis.

In addition to a physical check up by a surgeon, gynaecologist and specialist in internal medicine, the patient receives X-rays, blood, urinalysis and cancer tests.

The clinic was intended at first for non-paying cases only, but the demand being so high that type of check-up the clinic now admits housewives from the lower and moderate-income brackets. Fees range from nothing to $12.

The well-women clinic does not treat patients. Every woman is asked for the names of her doctor and when examination and tests are completed, reports are sent to him.

Club Activities

KINETTE CLUB

St. Thomas' Parish House was the scene of much gaiety on Monday evening when the Kinette Club held a Hard Time Party. Members appeared in an odd assortment of clothing, some patched beyond recognition. The first prize for costumes went to Alida Meyers and the second to Gwen McDougall.

Kinette Helen Wilbur gave a report on the forthcoming Tag Day. Plans for the rummage sale were discussed by Kinette Norma Bacon.

A letter of appreciation from Ethel Lennox was read, congratulating the girls who had sold the most tickets for the recent "Showboat Days". The Club entertained six guests all of whom had sold over 100 tickets each during the show.

A short comedy skit, put on by Mary Hallam and Gertrude Gourley was greatly enjoyed by all.

The remainder of the evening was devoted to "Walts Elephant" auction. Kinette Evelyn McDougall proved herself to be an excellent auctioneer by selling a wide variety of unwanted articles.

Song leader for the evening was Gertrude Gourley; Sergt.-at-Arms, Maude Rollins.

NO SHELLS EXPLODE

Norfolk, Va., May 17.—(AP)—Two ammunition - laden navy trucks collided near here yesterday, but none of the shells exploded. One was loaded with 22,000 pounds of 20-millimetre shells the other with eight five-inch shells. Naval spokesman said the heads of the shells had been removed and so there was no danger of the ammunition exploding unless the trucks had caught fire.

Ladies' Auxiliary Installs New Member

The regular meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary Canadian Legion, Branch 90, took place on Tuesday evening in the new Legion Hall, Victoria Street, with a good attendance, with comrade Turner presiding.

Comrade Tompkins gave an interesting address, and Comrade Rumpel from Brockville, were the special guests.

Various topics were discussed.

A new member was installed — Comrade Hughes, with Comrade Tompkins conducting the installation service. It was decided to hold a euchre every Wednesday afternoon in the hall, with Comrades Bradford and Kent in charge.

The raffle was won by Comrade Lyles. A report of the games was given by Comrade Meeks; Comrades Jeffs and Bailey reported on the sick and Comrade Jeffs on the overseas parcels. Comrade Jandgo read the auditors report.

Comrade Turner turned the chair over to Comrade Thompkins who gave a fine address and spoke of the coming rally which will be held in Deseronto some time in September.

Comrade Turner presented Comrade Thompkins with a suitable gift in appreciation on behalf of the members of Branch 90.

Refreshments were served after the close of the meeting by the committee under the convenorship of Comrade T. Helm and her assistants.

Women's Activities

QUINTE W.I.

The May meeting of Quinte Women's Institute was held at the Front Road Hall, Belleville, with the president Mrs. H. Virtue. The members Mrs. H. Gribbin, Mrs. Hamilton and Mrs. R. Letters of thanks were read. Mrs. Robert Hunnisett gave a reading on the subject, "Will look quite different, if you turn the kids out". It was decided to send $10 to Cancer Fund, and $25 to the care of Shannonville Cemetery. Mrs. Gerhott was appointed to act on the Cemetery Board.

Mrs. Tufts and Mrs. Bunnett were in charge of the program. As it was near "Mother's Day", Mrs. Tufts passed a flower to each member. Mrs. G. Connors gave an interesting paper on "Agriculture and Canadian Industries". Mrs. Westerhof sang "The Spring Song" in Dutch, followed with "Grandfather's Clock", in English. Mrs. W. Tufts gave a paper on "Upper Ottawa Valley". Roy Demonstration

In the absence of Mrs. Charles Bronsdon, Mrs. H. Bronsdon demonstrated her rugs, showing how to make use of rug. Lois Bradford gave a reading "My Mother's Hands". Mrs. Jack Parrott, and Miss Lois Bradford favored with a duet, entitled "Mother".

At this point, Mrs. Tufts asked the oldest and youngest mother present to stand. Mrs. Cummer (oldest); Mrs. Murray Bay (youngest) mother; each received a gift.

The meeting was closed in the usual way and a social half hour was enjoyed with the hostesses and Mrs. Fred Mitchell, Mrs. W. Gray, Mrs. M. Ray, Mrs. J. Parrott serving refreshments.

HILLSIDE CHRIST CHURCH GUILD

The May meeting of Christ Church Guild, Hillier, was held at the home of Mrs. Fred Morton with 18 present.

The president, Mrs. Warner McFaul, was in charge of the meeting.

'Get-Well' notes were planned to be sent to Mrs. S. Thompson and Mr. J. Moore.

A recitation was well given by Miss Sheila Terry. Readings were given by Mrs. M. McFall, Mrs. Doug. Harpes, Mrs. Warner McFaul and Mrs. Fred Morton. Alec Paul sang "The Shells Terry and Mrs. A. Chase and Mrs. D. Harmon led as winners.

The June meeting is to be at the home of Mrs. Herman Weese and the roll is to be answered with an amusing childhood experience.

Refreshments were served by the hostess.

Deepest sympathy from the Guild goes to the entire family of the late Mr. Ernest E. Terry.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Help for self-conscious teen-agers

So many teen-age boys and girls complain about being shy and self-conscious.

Very often, I think, the trouble stems from the fact that they do not quite sure how to act under all sorts of circumstances. They wonder if they're doing the proper thing; if they're dressed appropriately for the occasion; if they're giving the right answers and, in general, acting as though they know their way around. If they were sure of themselves on points like these, they'd have much more poise and feel far more comfortable, either with one person alone, or in a group of boys and girls.

Those young people who are uncertain of themselves in these respects will find a great deal of help in a pamphlet put out by the Girl and Boy Scouts organizations. It's called "Your Ticket to Popularity", and it clears up all these matters just mentioned.

"At some time, every young person finds himself in a new situation," the pamphlet says. "A girl has to face a room full of strangers at her first tea party. A young man escorts a girl on his first formal date. It's a lot of help, in case you feel shy at such times, to know the correct thing to do and how to do it."

Then the pamphlet goes on to give you the low-down on how to behave at a party and how to give one. How to act when you're invited to meals at people's houses, or when you're eating in public places like restaurants or cafeterias. How to travel, and how to be thoughtful guests.

If you feel awkward when you are introducing one person to another because you're not sure you'll do it the right way, the pamphlet will set you straight on the procedure. It tells you also how to write social and business letters, how to talk to people when you meet them for the first time and how to take a girl to the theatre.

Know how to tip? Know how to phrase an invitation for a party or a weekend, and how to accept one gracefully? Are you always sure you know which piece of silverware to pick up for each course at a dinner party? Ever stop to think of your manners when buying something in a store? And do you always know exactly what to do at a dance?

If you're bothered about any of these things, or others like them, get yourself one of these pamphlets and read up on them. It costs you just ten cents, and the way to get it is to send your dime to the National Headquarters of either the Girl Scouts, at 155 East 44th Street or the Boy Scouts, at 2 Park Avenue, both in New York City.

CLASS REUNION

Kingston, May 16. (CP)—Graduation weekend at the Kingston General Hospital will also be reunion weekend for three classes of graduates of the School of Nursing, those of 1921, '31 and '41. The school's annual commencement exercises will be held next Tuesday night. Fifty-two nurses will graduate.

BEAUTY

Shampooing the hair.

You have a choice between a liquid soap and a cream

There was a time when almost any woman could go on a grand old beautifying binge, spend half a day in a beauty shop shooting the works—shampoo, scalp treatment, wave set, facial, maybe have her feet treated. But those days are gone. Now, at least for women whose activities keep them on the go from morning until night. More and more of them are washing their heads, doing end curls letting and wave a set dry while they go about their domestic duties.

And what do the beauticians have to say about that? You'd be surprised. Every so often a frantic woman scuttles into a shop, declaring she can scarcely get a comb through her hair, and what in the world is the matter? It is an old, old story. The silky shafts are gummed with soap. The permanent has gone with the wind! The whole mop is dull and lifeless. Possibly even the color has changed.

A rousing shampoo done with professional skill will work a miracle. The hair emerges glistening and bright, every shaft fluffy and sawy, free its neighbor. The customer declares then and there that, though the checkbook is sick abed and time is at her heels she will thereafter see that her hair receives profession-al attention.

Home shampooing can be done successfully, but it must not be a hurried job. You're fighting a combination of atmosphere dust, dead skin cells and secretions from the sebaceous glands, a combination that resists casual treatment.

You should have two brushes, with firm bristles set in groups, two combs with rounded teeth so the scalp will not be irritated.

Start with a vigorous brushing, treating a strand at a time. Make a parting from one ear to the other, from the back of the head from ear to ear and brush away from it. Throw your head forward, groom from napeline to crown. Friction the scalp to loosen dead skin cells.

Conservative people, sometimes 44-to format table service, do use the "double silver service" for eating dessert; dessert spoon at the right, dessert fork at the left. You may teach yourself to use both (or you may learn to recall that they do) by doing some home-work on this so that you will do it with some degree of ease when it really entirely correct for you to choose the place you think is more practical for the dessert being served. For example, if the dessert is pie, you will find it practical if you use only a work; if ice cream, only the spoon; but you will find both useful when you are eating a fruit compote, the spoon to cut the fruit and to eat the sauce, the fork as "assistant" to the spoon.

Is it necessary to give a bachelor dinner before the bridegroom-elect's dinner?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it absolutely necessary to give a bachelor dinner? Necessary to give a spinster dinner? Couldn't there just be a rehearsal dinner for all of the members of the wedding party? Should the parents be invited to the rehearsal dinner?

Bride-to-be

It is not at all necessary for the bridegroom-elect to give a bachelor dinner. . . and today this dinner is often omitted. And seldom does the bride-to-be give a spinster dinner. . . the quite often gives a luncheon or tea at which she gives the gifts to her bridal attendants. But very often a dinner is given before the wedding rehearsal, or a supper (generally a buffet supper) is given after the rehearsal. And the bride's parents and groom's parents generally attend this pre-rehearsal or post-rehearsal party. Naturally the bride's parents attend, since the bride's home is a member of the wedding party and takes active part in the re-

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Bride wants to be "alerted" to the correct service at her luncheon's relatives' house

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I was invited several months ago and my husband's relatives are very conservative—many families particularly, older aunts and uncles of his, who have fine homes and quite a little service. They have begun to invite us to Sunday dinners, and I believe I'm doing fairly well with my table manners—except that I don't know quite what to do when both a spoon and a medium-size fork ("dessert fork") are brought in on the plate with the finger bowl, before the dessert is passed. Just how should I take them from the plate? And—this is most important to me—do I use both the spoon and the fork? Or have I noticed that they do), no matter what kind of dessert is served?

Violet M.

First, and most important: Before you dine with these pleasant and conservative relatives again, practice thoroughly, at home, the type of service you remember they have, which apparently is the really correct service. On a dessert plate, in the centre of the plate, place a finger-bowl doily; on this doily place the finger-bowl doily under the bowl, spreading it (for service) dessert spoon (medium-size spoon) on the plate on the right of finger-bowl, dessert fork

Before applying a shampoo medium, use the bath spray with a strong current of water to remove surface dust. You have a choice between a liquid soap and a cream. Users of many proprietary articles that are bland and effective.

Apply the shampoo generously. Friction it into the scalp, doing circles with the fingers. Move the scalp about to bustle up blood streams. Use the spray. Apply the shampoo a second time; it should fluff up like beaten egg white. The final shampoo must be prolonged if the hair is to come out shining clean. Use the comb to get the tangles out. It is best not to brush your hair if you are to make pin curls; the brush mats it.

"... in his distinctive feature about FOOD ... What's Cooking?

Horses are the inside of the animal. The outside was given to ordinary folks.

Livers, hearts, kidneys and other innards were often served to primitive warriors, because these organs gave vitality to those who ate them. American Indians sometimes ate hearts of mountain lions for courage. What the Indians didn't know was that the hearts gave them an abundance of vitamins not found in other cuts of meat.

The finest restaurants often feature these specialty meats because of their rich and delicate flavors. Kidneys, for instance, although an inexpensive meat, are epicurean eating when stewed with white wine and a brown sauce.

If kidneys are held in steam too long, or if they are taken from an animal which was old when slaughtered, they will have a strong flavor. This can be eliminated by soaking the kidneys in cold water from 1 to 3 hours.

Deviled Kidney Stew—Serves 4.

1 lb. beef kidneys
Vegetable fat
1 medium size onion chopped fine
1 medium size clove of garlic minced
2 tablespoons flour
1-4 cup dry white wine
2 cups of hot chicken broth or stock
Salt—pepper
2 teaspoons bottled devil sauce
1-3 teaspoon worcestershire sauce

Wash kidneys. Cut into 1 inch cubes. Soak in cold water 2 to 3 hours; drain well.

Melt 2 tablespoons fat in a saucepan. Add the kidneys and brown well, brown. Sprinkle the onion and garlic over the meat and saute 2 to 3 minutes more.

Sprinkle the flour over the meat. Mix well. Add the wine and hot chicken broth. Canned chicken broth, or hot water to which bouillon cubes have been added may be used.

Add 1 teaspoon salt and 1-3 teaspoon pepper. Remove scum. Simmer, or very boil, until kidneys are tender, about 1 hour. Stir frequently. Keep pot covered during cooking.

Remove from fire. When ready to serve, stir in devil sauce and worcestershire sauce. Add salt and pepper to taste.

French Housewife Finds Rising Costs Cramping Budgets

Paris, (AP) — Every housewife knows [illegible] cost of living here between August, 1950, and March, 1951. Between the compilations of the National Committee on Collective Bargaining, Premier Henri Queuille's own figures were just a shade lower.

Handley Up

Since the government is the largest employer in France it had to find some place to get the money to pay the wage increases, but in all means a bugaboo for the housewife.

Now she pays 10 per cent more for electricity, five per cent more for gas, seven to eight per cent more for coal, 30 per cent more for the phone.

She still also have to pay eventually for a 10.5 per cent rise in railway freight rates, a boost of up to 18 per cent for industrial coal and increased steel prices.

It's not all the government's fault, of course. France has to import large quantities of raw materials for her manufactures, and raw materials are going up too, reflecting the rise in world prices.

Here's how the cost of living here between August, 1950, and March, 1951, looks to the housewife, from the compilations of the National Committee on Collective Bargaining. Premier Henri Queuille's own figures were just a shade lower.

It's not all the government's fault, of course. France has to import large quantities of raw materials for her manufactures, and raw materials are going up too, reflecting the rise in world prices.

Here's how the cost of living has changed in price as these:

A pound of ham now is 650 francs, compared with 500 francs only last fall. (There are 350 francs to the U.S. dollar at the official rate.)

A box of laundry soap is up from 70 francs to 90.

A pound of butter is 388 francs, covered with 350.

The daily newspaper costs 12 francs instead of eight, and a ride on the subway now requires 20 francs for a ticket, 15 for students. Prices thus these add up to an increase of 12.5 per cent in the prices.

Superb German Cooking Lure To Tourists

Kitchener, Ont. (CP)—A woman who once cooked for the Emperor of Germany is doing her part to lure American tourists to Canada.

Mrs. Augusta Thiem of Conestogo, six miles from here, is kept busy providing tourists and village residents with the kind of food that melts in your mouth.

She and her husband came from Rominten, Germany, 37 years ago. Rominten then was a village on the royal estate of Kaiser Wilhelm, last of the German monarchs. The whole village used to prepare dishes to tempt the Imperial palate when the Kaiser was there for the shooting season, and Mrs. Thiem, then a young girl, was no exception.

Now she cooks for less distinguished guests, but the food she prepared still has the touch of magnificence. Her husband, she whips up delicacies like wiener schnitzel, hasenpfeffer or sauerbraten. She makes her own sauerkraut and has a light and adept hand with pastries.

Mrs. Thiem lives to see people eat and enjoy their food. She puts a platter of fried chicken on the table and if you don't eat it all she's hurt and insists on refilling your plate. A coffee urn is always on the table and guests are invited to take all they want.

The only trouble with the Thiem establishment is that Conestogo residents are trying to keep her talents a secret. With such a demand for cooking is an art, not a mass-production. Her guests want to keep it that way.

OSTRICH BOOM

Cape Town, (CP) — Ostrich farmers have been caught by surprise by the sudden demand for ostrich feathers for hats and dusters. Trade sources say they cannot supply all the ostrich feathers required at present.

Presto Music Club Presents Program Contemporary Music

The Presto Music Club held their May meeting on Monday last at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. Davidson, across the bay, and spent an enjoyable evening. Hostesses for the occasion were Misses Norma Arkles, Bessie Handley and Margaret Hillis.

The program which was in charge of Mrs. W. C. Burgoyne was contemporary and although some did deviate from the realm of contemporary composers, many examples of what modern composers can do were given.

Mrs. Burgoyne provided an interesting interlude by telling something of the works of two modern composers, Leo Smith and John Wyznawske and more of them and their work in the near future will be heard.

Following is the evening's program: Violin solo, "Serenade" by Pierne; violin solo, "Air on the G String," by Bach, Dr. A. C. Locke; vocal duet "How Lovely Are Thy Dwellings" by Liddle, Helen Cook and Loretta McDougall.

The club was pleased to have as its guest, Anita Hjertholm of Albert Street, and a pupil of Miss Handley's. She delighted with her two piano solos "Moonshine" by York Bowen; "Why", by Schumann, Euphonium solo "Serenade" by Schubert; Variations on the theme, "When You and I Were Young Maggie" by Eric Leidzen and Ted Robbins; piano solo "Dance of the Animals Coming Out of the Ark" by Garcia Moreles and William Connor.

It is an honor to have within our midst a composer, S. Alec Gordon, and a ladies chorus under his direction, sang the numbers he had composed for his presentation at "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" at the Ontario School for the Deaf, recently. Members of the ladies chorus were: Les Riedel, Helen Cook, Norma Arkles, Doris Burgoyne, Ada Stuckey, Ada MacDonald and Loretta McDougall. This interesting group brought a most enjoyable evening to a close.

COMMISSION TO MEET

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., May 16—(CP)—The Sault police commission scheduled a meeting today to hear complaints against administration of the city's police department.

The meeting, closed to the public, was arranged after city council on Monday night rescinded a previous motion asking Attorney-General Porter of Ontario to probe the complaints.

Queen Mary-Prince Charles H.&S. Assoc. Elects Officers

The annual meeting of the Queen Mary - Prince Charles Home and School Association was held recently in Prince Charles School, with the past president, Mrs. R. Powell, in charge.

Mrs. Poste gave a gratifying report of the recent variety concert presented by the students of both schools.

The annual attendance banners were won by Miss N. Arkles and Miss M. Page, of Prince Charles School and by Miss B. M. Blue and Mr. H. R. Frink and Mr. J. M. Cousins of Queen Mary School.

Following the reading of the various annual reports, Mr. W. Jackson led in a brief but amusing sing-song.

New Officers

Mr. Taylor Franklin, as nominating convener, brought in the new slate of officers which are as follows: past president, Mrs. Wilmot Folwell; vice-presidents, Mrs. A. Black and Mr. C. Nelson; sec. secretary, Mrs. E. Pugh; treasurer, Mr. R. Purchase; co-secretary, Mrs. F. Lane; executive members, Mrs. MacDonald, Mrs. Carruthers, Mrs. Adams, Mrs. Simmons and Mr. Whitsitt.

The ward president of Central constituency then installed the new executive, with Mrs. Folwell presiding. Mrs. Poste was presented with a gold past president's pin, for which she graciously expressed appreciation.

Miss I. Horton of the staff of Queen Mary School favoured with two pleasing piano selections, after which a social half hour was enjoyed.

FRANKFORD

Frankford — The First Frankford Boy Scout Troop held a special meeting Monday evening. They gathered at the office of Scoutmaster Geez Lobzee early in the evening, and hiked to the hill west of the village. There, instruction was given in making a "Twist", a delicacy that only the stoutest of a Boy Scout could take. Scouts Dean Kemp, Allan Patrick, Lyle Williams and Douglas Consul passed their 'Fire Lighting' for their second class training. Scouts Dean Kemp and Doug Consul also passed their second class "Tree Tests". The boys returned to town shortly after 8:00 p. m.

The regular meeting of Branch 397, Canadian Legion was held in the Legion Club room on Monday evening, with a small turnout. First vice president, George Montgomery, assumed the chair in the absence of the president. All stood, as a period of silence was observed in respect to the Comrades who paid the supreme sacrifice for their country.

The subject of a cribbage party was brought up, but it was decided that the weather was becoming too warm for it.

It was suggested that a strawberry social be held shortly. This is to be dealt with thoroughly at the next meeting.

The annual street dance and carnival was also discussed, and will be planned in detail at the next meeting which will be on May 28th.

It was noted that one Legionaires, Comrade Ralph Molleson, has enlisted in the active Army also Mr. Gordon Martin. The Legion plans to keep in touch with them, forwarding cigarettes, on their posting from Canada.

Doll up Old Recipes For Festival Guests

London. (CP)—Using old cookery recipes, several well-known London restaurants plan to regale Festival of Britain visitors on "Old English" dishes.

These are four recipes overseas visitors may sample:

Cornwall's star gazy pie: clean and bone six herring. Place a fish in a pie dish lined with fat and breadcrumbs. Season and add eggs beaten in tarragon vinegar. Cover dish with pastry, leaving a centre hole through which the heads stick upwards. Bake for one hour and place a sprig of parsley in the mouth of each fish before serving.

Huntingdon fidgett pie: Put a layer of apples in a pie dish, add onions and diced bacon. Season and repeat layers of apples and onions until dish is full. Cover dish with short-crust pastry and cook for 1½ hours.

Oxford's banbury pie: Place a layer of apples in a well-greased dish; sprinkle with peel and currants, pour over a little heated butter, and a sprinkle of sugar and flavor of cinnamon. Repeat layers till dish is full and cover with short pastry. Bake for 30 minutes, then glaze with milk and sugar.

Surrey fritters: beat three eggs. Add stale white breadcrumbs till mixture has the consistency of whipped cream and sweeten to with nutmeg and 6d to 8d boiling taste with castor sugar. Flavor fat.

STIRLING

Heavy Agenda Faces Council At Meeting

Stirling—The regular session of village council was held on Monday night with Reeve H. J. Wells presiding and all members of the council were present.

Tenders will be called for painting the Centre bridge Henry St. bridge, band stand and fire hall and the specifications for the painting were left in the hands of the property committee.

Clerk Mallory tabled communication from the town of Goderich asking Stirling council to concur in a resolution re an amendment to the assessment act which would delete the business assessment of a municipality in computing the county bar.

Award the amendment and the clerk was instructed to forward Hon. G. Dunbar, Minister of Municipal Affairs a copy of the said resolution.

Letters Tabled

Communications were also tabled from the Ontario Department of Highways asking for a report on road expenditure for the First quarter of 1951 by the middle of May and a monthly report thereafter throughout the year, also inquiring as to the population of the village.

The requisition from the centre Hastings High School area for $5,641.75 or 7.1 mills on the equalized assessment for the village, was also tabled by the clerk. The Ontario Department of Highway gave approval (by letter) of the expenditure of $1,000 on the village streets during 1951 providing such expenditures were in accordance with Department regulations.

A revised plan of the sub-division comprising the Wartime Housing project on the Marmora By resolution Stirling council Road from the Ontario Planning Board was presented to council for its approval. Following somewhat lengthy discussion the clerk was instructed to advise the Ontario Planning Board that council was withholding approval of the plan until such time as the sewage disposal plant was satisfactory to the local Medical Officer of Health, Dr. T. A. Carlisle. M.O.H. advised council that, the present sewage disposal bed would have to be relaid.

Addressed Council

C. B. Rollins addressed council relative to sale of gravel, and J. V. Holt, representative of Booker's Supply Company re purchase of culverts, etc. the purchase of 84 feet of 15 Inch piping was authorized.

Dr. Christen, M.O.H. reported to council that complaints were being received by him relative to pigs being kept in an unsanitary condition within the limits of the village, creating a public health nuisance. There was also known local by-law controlling the keeping of pigs in the municipality and until such a by-law was passed he couldn't do anything to combate the nuisance. He had investigated the complaints and found ample justification for the same.

Should Be Regulated

Members of council expressed themselves as reluctant to deprive anyone of the privilege of raising their own meat supply but were agreed that the keeping of livestock within the village limits should be regulated. A resolution was accepted that by-law re: keeping livestock be passed and the customary notice of motion that such a by-law would be introduced at the next regular meeting of council was given.

The job of painting the parking lines on the streets in the business section was given to Maurice Bell at a price of $60 on motion of councillors Elliott and West.

On motion from councillors Montgomery and West the purchase of a suitable flag for the community building was left in the hands of the property committee. The need of a sidewalk from St. John's Church to at least the railway crossing on the Marmora road was emphasized by councillor Elliott and the matter will be considered by council when the annual inspection of walks and streets is made in the near future.

On resolution of councillors Elliott and Rodgers, Stirling Village council will request Hastings County Council to arrange a high school area to include Rawdon and Sidney townships and Frankford and Stirling villages. A lengthy discussion ensued on the parking regulations in the village but no definite decision was reached. Several accounts were passed for payment.

Rubber Cargo May be Returned To Singapore

Singapore, May 16 (AP)—The 2,300-ton Panamanian-registered vessel Norfoy, lying in the port of Penang with a big cargo of rubber bound for communist China, was slated to return to Singapore today, her future course uncertain.

The ship cleared Singapore last Saturday, bound for the red Chinese port of Whampoa, near Penang. She is carrying 6700 bales of first-grade rubber valued at $2,000,000 (straits) ($666,000).

The harbor master in Penang said the Norfoy had been given clearance, but that her captain had decided to return to Singapore later and decide what course to take.

Neither Singapore nor Malayan authorities have yet followed Britain's lead in banning rubber by red China, but such action is expected tomorrow.

STIRLING

St. Paul's United Holds Memorable Mother's Day Service

Stirling—St. Paul's United Church, Stirling, was a bower of beauty with tall pedestals of wild plum blossoms, spring flowers, potted plants and cut flowers for the special Mother's Day service last Sunday evening.

Mr. Edwin Warren welcomed all the "You Are Welcome" club, welcomed the mothers attending since which included guests from Toronto, Belleville, Carmel, Bethel, Moira Consant, Springbrook, Marsh Hill and other nearby points.

Organist Soprano

Mrs. Malels Hunter Fowler, of Toronto, who is a soloist was guest soloist and rendered two selections, "Consecration" and "The Hymns of the Old Church Choir" accompanied by Mrs. A. E. Baker A.R.C.T.

The ushers were Messrs. Harold Wells, Sid Demorest, Allan McDonnell and Harry Vandervoort.

Honored Mothers

Rev. A. E. Baker, pastor of the church announced the "ones who honored their mothers" as each took their place inside a frame. Mr. George Carlisle manipulated the blue curtains between scenes. Mr. Maurice Bell installed a P.A. system so all could hear the narrators and there were special lights to add attractiveness to the scene.

The first picture was Robert F. Scott, the famous explorer, who was honored by the Kings and this day depicted by Mr. Harry Vandervoort with his wife Mrs. Vandervoort as narrator, gave a picture of his life acting the role of mother.

General William Booth was depicted by Mr. Ellery of the Salvation Army, Belleville, Mrs. Maurice Bell as narrator quoted these lines, "my darling mother is the most unselfish person I have ever known."

At the close of this service, Mr. Ellery sang, "Bless Them They Are Heavy", as General Booth had sung them years ago on the streets of London.

Mr. Allan McDonnell depicted Cecil G. Rhodes, noted for his services in Africa extending Her Majesty's Dominions. He once said, "So little done, so much to do." Mrs. Allan McDowell was the narrator for this story.

Mr. Edwin Warren took the part of Sir Christopher Wren, who was noted for the building of many notable churches including St. Paul's Cathedral, it has been said, "He never touched anything that he did not adorn." Mrs. Edwin Warren was the narrator for his life history.

Jerden Waler

The service closed with an appropriate hymn. At the morning service at St. Paul's a special baptismal service was held when water from the River Jordan was used for christening the children.

Nice Reward

Bournemouth, England, May 16, (Reuters)—Postman Arthur Willis, 51, yesterday just capped his hand and in flew £100 ($280.)

To be exact the £2 pet budgerigar bird belonging to Miss Kay Hastings flew into his hands.

Miss Hastings was so glad to get the bird back—it escaped Saturday—that she gave Willis a £100 reward.

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

BRITISH MAJOR HONORED IN KOREA

Major Thomas Blackford, member of the Gloucestershire Battalion, is congratulated by Lieut.-Gen. James A. Van Fleet, commander of the U.S. 8th Army, after ceremonies during which Blackford was awarded a Presidential Combat Ribbon. The British soldier was cited for his part in the heroic action of the battalion in its recent gallant stand north of Seoul when it was instrumental in halting communist hordes at a vital point. There were less than 50 unwounded men out of 600 in that action. — Central Press Canadian.

MADOC

Two Candidates Receive Degrees

Madoc—On Monday evening at the regular meeting of Madoc chapter No. 143 O.E.S. the members and visitors to the chapter celebrated the 25th anniversary of the instituting of the chapter.

Special honor was given to the five charter members namely: Mrs. Keller, Mrs. Walter Whytock, Mrs. Fred Curry, Mrs. E. T. Nayler and Mrs. Charles Whytock, who were present. Each was presented with a corsage of roses.

Following the general business, Worthy Matron, Mrs. Elsie Franks invited the past Matrons Club of Minerva Chapter (whose officers installed Madoc Chapter 25 years ago) to confer the initiatory degrees on two candidates.

Guests Present

Among the guests present were Mrs. Fleming secretary treasurer of the Ben. Society of Grand Chapter and Mrs. McFaul D.D. G.M. of District No. 12 who brought greetings from Grand Chapter. Past D.D.G.M's present were Mrs. E. Nayler, Mrs. C. Adams, Mrs. B. Wonnacott and Mrs. K. Broad.

Soloists for the evening were, Mrs. L. Jordan and Mrs. R. McCoy. Minerva officers taking part in the installation seremony were Mrs. E. Broad, Mrs. Hazel Wilson, Mrs. Laura Hyde, Mrs. Shirley Rose, Mrs. Winnifred Gunsolus, Mrs. Nellie Cooper, Mrs. Grace Vanner, Mrs. Edith Robson, Mrs. Lil Jordan, Mrs. Nela Williams, Mrs. Edna Dobbs, Mrs. Bella Wonnacott, Mrs. Nelle Clarke, Mrs. Mary Parsons, Mrs. Janet Twiddy, Past Patrons. Fred Wilson, Percy Bolton, Frank Moon and Newell Broad, Worthy Patron, of Madoc chapter.

A pleasant social hour followed the close of chapter with Mrs. Clarke, president of the club cutting the birthday cake, which was suitably decorated for the occasion.

Visitors were present from Tweed, Wellington and Belleville chapters.

Should Brush Teeth Directly After Meals

Toronto, May 16—(CP)—Cleaning teeth, night and morning will not prevent tooth decay unless the brushing is done directly after meals, Dr. Gustav W. Rapp, Connell University biochemist, told the Ontario Dental Association Tuesday. Chewing gum is helpful in cleaning teeth if they cannot be brushed right after meals, he added.

Dr. Rapp, also urged that more information be gained on the effects of fluorine before using it in drinking water as a means of controlling tooth decay in an entire community, since fluorine could cause harmful effects.

Seven Writers Receive Club's 1950 Awards

New York, May 1[illegible] — A panel of newspaper and radio personalities agreed last night that the MacArthur incident has stirred American determination not to write off Asia to the communists.

They agreed also that the American people want from their leaders a vigorous statement of national policy toward the Far East.

This was the consensus of a panel discussion, "the press looks at U.S. foreign policy," at the 12th annual dinner of the Overseas Press Club of America at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel.

The dinner honored seven journalists who received the club's 1950 awards for outstanding foreign coverage of press, photograph and radio.

The awards were to:

Marguerite Higgins, New York Herald Tribune, the George Polk Memorial Award to foreign correspondent for courage, integrity and enterprise above and beyond the call of duty;

Homer Bigart, New York Herald Tribune, for best combined press reporting from abroad;

Howard K. Smith, Columbia Broadcasting System, for best consistent radio and television reporting from abroad;

Hal Boyle, Associated Press for best war reporting (press, radio and television);

James Reston, New York Times, for best press interpretation of foreign news;

EMPLOYEES FIND $500

Strathcona, Ont., May 17 (CP) — Employees of a paper company in this Eastern Ontario community Wednesday found $500 in bank notes in the pulp reclamation equipment.

Much of the money was soggy and mutilated but workers saved a considerable part.

Bill King said he found $80 during the 12 hours the bills floated to the surface of the water-conveying system.

As far as the company is concerned, the finders can keep the money. Officials said it would be impossible to trace the source of it.

INVESTIGATION UNDER WAY

Toronto, May 17 — (CP)—An investigation of Toronto butcher shops suspected of selling horse meat in hamburg steak has been under way for some time, an official of the food and drug division of the Health Department said last night. He said the investigation may result in prosecution but that inspection is far from completed.

Picton Gunners Win First Soccer Game at Home

Picton Gunners celebrated their first home appearance in the Bay of Quinte Football League last night by edging the Belleville Northern Electrics by a 2-1 score. The game was played on the Royal School of Artillery Field in a strong wind with rain falling most of the time.

The first half was even with both teams attacking strongly but failing to penetrate the opposing defence.

Within five minutes of the changeover, Heron, of the Gunners, scored a fine goal with a drive from 30 yards out that had the Northern goalie beaten all the way. Five minutes later, Leech tied the score when he headed the ball in the Gunner net from a corner kick by Alexander. With ten minutes to go, Gray scored the winning counter for the gunners from a scramble in front of the Northern net.

The teams—

Picton Gunners: Honey, Frost, Ross, Cattle, Heron, Bethel, Foster, Campbell, Borthwick, Gray, Jones; subs, Weston, Esson, Bowcott.

He Came to Kill

By Ad[illegible] McElfresh

Sheriff Clem Purdy watched at the same time that he knew what the killer was. I think he'd have told me if he hadn't heard Sondra at the door. He ran away, downstairs to the telephone and pretended to wake up. She asked me if I'd seen Peter. I told her no, but she found him, and killed him. The note on my bed"—

She looked at Mart—"was for Sondra, to throw us off the track. Just as she told Jasper I had the invalers. Didn't she Jap?"

Jasper nodded and for the first time Leeana saw in him something akin to his brother. Knowledge spread with deadly intent across his face.

"The car," he said hoarsely. "She wanted to get it away from here. She even told me to take it —and get away while I could."

They found Peter in the luggage compartment of his brother's new red convertible. Rigor mortis had long since done its work. His handsome face was distorted, his body horribly twisted. Leeana turned away, sickened by the horrifying spectacle of a dead man whose body contained the giant claw of Death itself.

Jasper was not in sight. He had gone to his wife to confront her with her crimes? "Mart!" Leeana balked out the name.

Mart leaped toward the house, the others following.

Jasper was hammering on the door of Sondra's room. The guard was trying to dislodge the key in the lock on the inside. Mrs. Carstairs, who was supposed to stay with Sondra, under all circumstances stood by protected by the ruffled feathers of anger.

"She fell faint," she blurted at Sheriff Purdy as he halted puffing, at the door. "Wanted campher."

"Mrs. Carstairs no more's came out till Mrs. Thorne locked the door," the guard explained. "She's awful still." He slammed his brawny shoulder against the door. It creaked but held. Mart added his weight, and together they lunged. The door groaned on its hinges and gave way, spilling them into an empty room.

Sheriff Purdy sprang to the window, yanked up an unwieldy sheet-and-blanket rope and flung it at his feet. The roar of a racing car was his answer.

Purdy bellowed his frustration as he pounded into the hall and downstairs. The telephone the alarm to state and local police. Leeana, Mart at her side, leaned across his face.

"The car," he said hoarsely. "She wanted to get it away from here. She even told me to take it —and get away while I could."

She was thinking like Miss Maggie. A Thorne's place is in Thorne Hill. How often Pops had said that—and longed for 'home'!

"That idiot Mr. Preston said tell,you he'd be right back. Mrs. Carstairs said, smiling. "With a surprise."

Leeana shook her head. "I'm beyond surprise, Carsty. And shock. We all are, I think."
